RESPONSIBILITY FOR GODERICH'S FOGHORN IS HARD TO PLACE

Captain Basset Says Only Enough Work Is Done Each Year To Hold the Votes---Witnesses at Inquest Say Whistling Heard on Sunday Was From a Dredge and Not the Wexford.

JUST A POLITICAL HARBOR

GODERICH, Nov. 22—A four-hour session of the coroner's inquest on the victims of the lake disaster, held yesterday afternoon at the town hall, failed to bring out any important information as to the cause of the loss of so many vessels on Sunday night, Nov. 9. The enquiry turned largely on the seaworthiness of the steamer Wexford, and Capt. Wm. J. Basset of Collingwood, managing director of the Western Steamship Co., owners of the Wexford, indignantly denied as slander the reports that the vessel was leaky or otherwise in poor shape, or that masters and owners of vessels were careless about the condition of lifeboats, lifebelts and other safety apparatus or craft. As to the vexed question of the foghorn, it was clearly shown that it was not blowing until 11 p.m., or later, but Lighthouse Keeper Robinson declared that all the foghorns on the lakes could not have saved the vessels out on the lake that night. A point established was that it was not considered the duty of anyone in particular to see that the fog whistle was blown. If the man at the town power station, where the whistle is located, happened to think about it on a foggy day they would blow it; but nobody felt any particular responsibility in the matter.

J. B. Kelly, chief engineer at the municipal power house, said the fog whistle started to blow about 11 o'clock. He had no instructions from the Government for the blowing of the whistle. Under the former lighthousekeeper the whistle was blown under his instructions; or sometimes, if the men at the power house noticed it was foggy or had their attention called to it by anyone else, they would start it.

Henry Stowe, one of the staff of the power house, said it was nobody's duty in particular to look after the fog-horns.

Captain Wm. Robinson, a former lake captain, and now for over two years lighthousekeeper, said he had a busy time that night keeping his light clear. The snow was piling up so high outside the lantern that he had to go out about every fifteen minutes to scrape it off. There was no telephone at the lighthouse and he could not leave the place to give instructions about fog-horns.

The captain's record showed that the storm signals had been up from Friday, the 7th.

Wm. Marlton, one of the owners of the dredges here, said that his dredge had whistled when the storm displaced her goods up to 3.30. That afternoon a vessel could have entered the harbor. From what Captain Stephen of the Kaministiquia, had said of the location of the Wexford when sighted from his vessel that day, it should have reached Goderich about three o'clock.

The evidence of Mr. Marlton and other witnesses went to show that there was no boat outside the harbor that afternoon calling for assistance. People hearing the dredge whistle took it for a vessel in distress.

Several witnesses then testified to the seaworthiness of the Wexford.

Captain Wm. J. Bassett, manager of the Western Steamship Co., said the Wexford was built at Sunderland, Eng., in 1883. Asked as to the condition of Goderich harbor, the witness said: "It is one of those political harbors; they do just about enough work on it each year to hold the vote." When finished it would be an easier harbor to enter.

The inquest was adjourned to Monday afternoon next, when further witnesses will be examined.

Inquiry at Kingston.

KINGSTON, Nov. 22.—The first of a series of investigations into the recent disasters on the Great Lakes was opened by Captain H. St. G. Lindsay, wreck commissioner, Ottawa, with Captain Francis Nash, Montreal, and Captain W. G. Batten, Kingston, sitting as nautical assessors.

The investigation conducted here had to do with the stranding of the steamer Turret Chief, five miles east of Copper Harbor on the morning of Nov. 8.

No evidence was given to show that the company owning the vessel had been negligent in the way of equipment, and no evidence of storm signals being ignored. The vessel was shown to be a seaworthy craft, well equipped.

He's a Good Linguist Anyway.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.— Fluency in seventeen languages would not in the opinion of the immigration authorities, necessarily fit a man to support himself in the United States. Although Lucian Camala, a Roumanian immigrant, proved that he could speak all these, and seven Slavish dialects besides, he was detained at Ellis Island yesterday pending further inquiry.

No Salaries Cut Off.

OTTAWA, Nov. 22.—The story that Hon. T. W. Crothers, Minister of Labor, has abruptly cut off the salaries of Dr. Robertson, chairman of the Commission on Technical Education, and of Secretary Thomas Bengough, is given an authoritative denial. The work will be finished shortly.

More Honors For Sir Lomer.

HAIR ALL FELL OUT
RINGWORM ON HEAD
Also on Neck. Big Bare Spot on Crown of Head. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured.

198 Chapleau St., Montreal, Que.—"When my brother and I went to school we got ringworms from the other children and our hair all fell out. We had them on our heads and on our necks. For months I had a big bare spot on the crown of my head the size of a fifty-cent piece. Mother tried everything, all kinds of ointments, to cure us but everything seemed no good until one day she saw an advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment. It was Cuticura Soap and Ointment that cured me." (Signed) Mrs. M. Blake, May 31, 1913.

ITCHY RASH ON HANDS

Fergus, Ont.—"Cuticura Soap and Ointment completely cured me of a rash on my hands. The rash was red like water blisters, very itchy and sore. Scratching made them sorer. The irritation was bad at night. I tried many remedies which did not do any good. I used Cuticura Soap as a wash in warm water night and morning with Cuticura Ointment and in less than a week it was all gone." (Signed) Mrs. Isabella Gibson, May 22, 1913.

The regular use of Cuticura Soap for toilet and bath not only tends to preserve, purify and beautify the skin, scalp, hair and hands, but assists in preventing inflammation, irritation and clogging of the pores, the common cause of pimples, blackheads and other unwholesome conditions of the skin. Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere. For a liberal free sample of each, with 32-p. book, send post-card to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Dept. D, Boston, U. S. A.

TALKS BY WIRELESS

Spoken Words Are Heard at a Distance of 4,000 Miles

GERMANS PERFORM FEAT

BERLIN, Nov. 22.—The transmission of a wireless telephone communication over a distance of nearly 4,000 miles, from Neuenadi-am-Ruebenbergo, in Hanover, to New Jersey, was accomplished on Oct. 27 by a German wireless company, according to Rear-Admiral George August Emsmann in a report yesterday to the German Shipbuilding Society.

The message was sent and received in the middle of the afternoon in spite of the day-time being most unfavorable for wireless communications.

The two stations are over 300 feet high. Earlier attempts had proved that clearly emitted tones were audible, and finally a spoken message was transmitted and distinctly received:.

Emperor William and Prince Henry of Prussia have taken a great personal interest in the experiments.

Herr Bredow, director of a rival wireless company, at the same meeting described the German wireless telegraphic net. Hundreds of wireless despatches were passing daily, he said, from Nauen to Sayville, Long Island, and to Togoland, West Africa. Connections between Togoland and German Southwest Africa are to be opened next year, and with East Africa in 1916, while communication between Samoa and New Guinea would be established in April next.

In the course of the discussion Herr Bredow said the prophecy made by Admiral Emsmann that wireless telephony would supplant wireless telegraphy would not be borne out, as telegraphy would always possess practical advantages.

CHILDREN DROWNED.

Two Little Girls Go Through Ice While Skating.

WOLSELEY, Sask., Nov. 22—Myrtle Mackenzie, aged 11, and Dorothy Quinn, aged nine, were drowned when with a group of other children they were skating on the C.P.R. reservoir after school. The ice broke as they skated toward the bridge, and as they sank the screams of the other children brought Mrs. Mackenzie and her eldest daughter, Fannie, both of whom rushed out to where the little girls had gone down. The ice, too weak for the children, broke before the women reached them, and the mother was only rescued when sinking for the third time by Allan Thompson, who jumped in with a rope. Fannie Mackenzie was dragged out by a rope flung to her by men on the bank. The bodies of the children were recovered later.

TRAIN HITS BOULDER.

Engine Dashes Into Lake Carrying Fireman To Death.

WINNIPEG, Nov. 22.—While tearing along the brow of a cliff that overhangs Lake Superior 178 miles east of Fort William at two o'clock yesterday morning the first section of the C.P.R. westbound Imperial Limited, traveling forty-five miles an hour, crashed into a gigantic boulder which had hurtled down onto the track from far up the precipice. The engine was hurled from the steel into the chasm of waters beneath, carrying in its mangled mass to a watery grave Fireman Ernest O'Connor of Schreiber, who leaves a wife and family. The engineer, O'Brien of Schreiber, escaped miraculously, as the train struck, but his warning cry to his fellow-worker was too late.

Makers of Bombs Caught.

CALCUTTA, Nov. 22.—A police raid on a suspected house in Calcutta yesterday, led to the arrest of four men and the discovery of a bomb factory. A quantity of correspondence found in the building is believed to give a clue to the inner circle of the anarchistic conspiracy which has resulted in many recent outrages, including the attempt to kill the viceroy with a bomb at Delhi last December.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—All tickets to the city's banquet to Hon. Adam Beck on Tuesday, Nov. 25, have been disposed of, and the event promises to be the largest of its kind ever held in the city, the Liberals uniting with the Conservatives to honor the Hydro Commission chairman.

INQUIRY ADJOURNS.

West Shore Railway Probe Stops For Lack of Documents.

TORONTO, Nov. 22.—To the disappointment of municipal representatives from the shore countries of Lake Huron, where the ill-fated West Short Railway was launched on its brief disastrous career, the investigation before the Ontario Railway Board yesterday came to an abrupt and inconsequental conclusion. It was impossible to proceed, and the hands of the prosecuting counsel were tied by the lapses of memory of the chief witnesses and the mysterious disappearance of the minute and account books of the company.

Mr. Moyes, the controlling spirit of the railway directorate and the office of the late S. C. Smoke alike deny any knowledge of the whereabouts of these documents and on them practically the whole hope of tracing the big expenditures was based.

Engineer Middlemist of the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board swore to the valuation he made of the road at the instance of the municipalities. Allowing for contractors' profit, right-of-way and purchase of material, the present line could be duplicated for $305,000, and it would cost $797,736 to complete the line as it stood at present.

Mr. MacEwan said he had no official position with the Huron Construction Co., although he held a power of attorney from Mr. Moyes to sign railway checks for the payment of wages and materials.

Mr. MacEwan's knowledge of the organization of the Huron Construction Co. was quite vague. Mr. Moyes had altogether the direction of the work, and he never met any of the directors of the concern.

CATHARINES, Nov. 22. — A verdict of accidental death was returned by the jury in the inquest into the death of John Yeagley, who was killed on a Niagara, St. Catharines & Toronto Railway trestle at Thorold a week ago. Coal Cars Jumped Switch.

ST. CATHARINES, Nov. 22.—Two coal cars in the fore part of a heavy freight train jumped a switch in the Merriton yards of the Grand Trunk yesterday and ripped up the track and platform between the rails, but no person was injured. Traffic was interrupted but for a short time.

SHELTERS MADEROS

John Lind Puts Them Out of Gen. Huerta's Way

SURRENDER IS DEMANDED

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Interest in the Mexican situation was divided here yesterday between the demands of the Mexican authorities for the surrender of Evaristo and Daniel Madero, by the American Consulate at Vera Cruz, and the increasing danger that the vast stores of oil at Tampico and Tuxpam might be destroyed.

News that John Lind had sent the two Maderos and their companions on board the United States battleship Rhode Island, while not officially confirmed, was received here as relieving a tension that might have precipitated further difficulties.

While Mr. Lind was acting on direct instructions from the State Department in co-operation with Consul-General Canada for the protection of the two Maderos in the Consulate and in subsequently sending them aboard the Rhode Island, the Navy Department had left Admiral Fletcher to use his own discretion. The authoritative position occupied by Mr. Lind as the President's representative in Mexico is indicated by the fact that he was able through his personal representation to secure the complete cooperation of the American naval forces without the interposition of the Navy Department.

Late Thursday night the State Department sent instructions to Mr. Lind telling him in substance to follow the same course with the Maderos that resulted some weeks ago in the escape of Gen. Felix Diaz.

The State Department was highly gratified at the successful outcome of its efforts to protect American and other foreign holdings in the neighborhood of Tuxpam and Tampico, on the east coast of Mexico.

When the first trouble threatened, urgent instructions were sent to the American Consular representatives to make plain to the leaders of both the Federal and rebel authorities that the United States would expect foreign lives and property to be protected. Last night this answer was received through Admiral Fletcher at Vera Cruz from Gen. Aguilar, commanding all the rebel bands operating in the oil section:

"I am governing on a constitutional basis, my attitude being to guarantee the interests of all foreign and domestic oil corporations existing in the territory I occupy, fulfilling in this manner the demands of civilization, and not being governed by caprice or vengeance."

Offended Oil Barons.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—Lord Cowdray, who has large oil, railway and other concessions in Mexico, in an interview yesterday said he had learned with great interest from the newspapers that a British warship had been despatched to the Puerto Mexico terminus of the Tehuantepec Railway, which he owns, because while that line is still running the Mexican Government lines which join it have been cut and therefore several hundred thousand employes for whom he is responsible, could only be aided by a warship.

Lord Cowdray expressed the opinion that he had made a great mistake in keeping so long under the charge that he was "a concession monger." He said the last oil concession he had obtained from the Mexican Government was at a time slightly under eight years ago.

The real offence he had committed in Mexico, Lord Cowdray continued, was in daring to invade the territory of the Waters-Pierce Oil Co. Since then, he said, he had been bitterly pursued and had been the victim of a press bureau which misconstrued his operations.

King's Prize Mah Gets Job.

OTTAWA, Nov. 22.—The appointment of Private Hawkins, the King's prize winner at Bisley this year, to a position in the Customs department at Toronto was definitely made by Hon. J. D. Reid yesterday. Col. J. A. Currie, M.P., of the Highlanders, Hon. A. E. Kemp and other members representing Toronto, heartily espoused the cause of Private Hawkins and met with a ready response from the Minister of Customs.

Steamer Passengers Scared.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—Passengers on the steamship Ancona, which reached New York yesterday from Naples, had a bad scare on Monday last, when an alcohol heater exploded in a pantry and started a fire which spread rapidly to the saloon passageway and the foyer companionway. Officers and crew seized fire extinguishers and put out the flames after half-an-hour's work. A steward was severely burned.

Fire In Brighton.

BRIGHTON, Ont., Nov. 22.—A disastrous fire occurred here yesterday morning, completely consuming the livery barn, with contents, of A. A. Wade, proprietor of the Hotel Central. The hotel stables also, which were connected with the livery barn were consumed. Thirteen horses were burned, besides nearly all the livery equipment, with a loss of $5,000.

Ungava Railway In Prospect.

OTTAWA, Nov. 22.—Another project for a line of railway to Hudson Bay is involved in an application to Parliament for the incorporation of the Ungava Railway Co. The road is proposed to be built from Aylmer Sound, on the St. Lawrence, to the Hudson Bay post at Whale River.

WINNIPEG, Nov. 22. — What threatens to become an open rupture between the C.P.R. and its maintenance of way men has simmered down; the parties having agreed to the appointment of an arbitration board.

Approximately 22,000 men are affected, consisting of about 5,000 men engaged on eastern lines and 17,000 in the west. The men have demanded an increase averaging 15 per cent., which in some cases runs as high as 25 per cent. The arbitration board will consist of Mr. Justice Meredith, London, chairman; Wallace Nesbitt, K.C., Toronto, representing the company, and W. Irwin Fort for the men.

It is expected that the board will meet next Monday in Montreal.

Morrice, were elected honorary non-resident R.C.A.'s.

ON A MONDAY MORNING.

Monday morning is a hard test for the institution which we call life. Life may be all very well on Saturday night and Sunday morning, but how about Monday morning? If you wake up then with a pleasurable anticipation of the week of work which is ahead of you, you are a happy man. The instinct of the bad boy who plays truant never quiet dies out of us. One dreams of a Monday morning when the sun is shining and the air is clear, of slipping quietly into one's clothes, of tiptoeing softly out of the house, of scaling the fence and crossing the meadow and losing oneself in the alluring woods, while time clocks remain unpunched and whistles blow in vain.

"That Affair Next Door"

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

"No, sir." The young man tried to look calm and at his ease, but the difficulty he felt in doing so was apparent. "On the morning of that day," he continued, "I passed them over to my brother."

Ah! here was something tangible as well as important. I began to fear the police understood themselves only too well; and so did the whole crowd of persons there assembled. A groan in one direction was answered by a sigh in another, and it needed all the Coroner's authority to prevent an outbreak.

Meanwhile Mr. Van Burnam stood erect and unwavering, though his eye showed the suffering which these demonstrations awakened. He did not turn in the direction of the room where we felt sure his family was gathered, but it was evident that his thoughts did, and that most painfully. The Coroner, on he contrary, showed little or no feeling; he had brought the investigation up to this critical point and felt fully competent to carry it farther.

"May I ask," said he, "where the transference of these keys took place?"

"I gave them to him in our office last Tuesday morning. He said he might want to go into the house before his father came home."

"Did he say why he wanted to go into the house?"

"No."

"Was he in the habit of going into it alone and during the family's absence?"

"No."

"Had he any clothes there? or any articles belonging to himself or his wife which he would be likely to wish to carry away?"

"No."

"Yet he wanted to go in?"

"He said so."

"And you gave him the kys without question?"

"Certainly, sir."

"Was that not opposed to your usual principles—to your way of doing things, I should say?"

"Perhaps; but principles, by which I suppose you mean my usual business methods, do not govern me in my relations with my brother. He asked me a favour, and I granted it. It would have to have been a much larger one for me to have asked an explanation from him before doing so."

"Yet you are not on good terms with your brother; at least you have not had the name of being, for some time?"

"We have had no quarrel."

"Did he return the keys you lent him?"

"No."

"Have you seen them since?"

"No."

"Would you know them if they were shown you?"

"I would know them if they unlocked our front door."

"But you would not know them on sight?"

"I don't think so.

"Mr. Van Burnam, it is disagreeable for me to go into family matters, but if you have had no quarrel with your brother, how comes it that you and he have had so little intercourse of late?"

"He has been in Connecticut and I at Long Branch. Is not that a good answer, sir?"

"Good, but not good enough. You have a common office in New York, have you not?"

"Certainly, the firm's office."

"And you sometimes meet there, even while residing in different localities?"

"Yes, our business calls us in at times and then we meet, of course."

"Do you talk when you meet?"

"Talk?"

"Of other matters besides business I mean. Are your relations friendly? Do you show the same spirit towards each other as you did three years ago; say?"

"We are older; perhaps we are not quite so voluble."

"But do you feel the same?"

"No; I see you will have it, and so I will no longer hold back the truth. We are not as brotherly in our intercourse as we used to be; but there is no animosity between us. I have a decided regard for my brother."

This was said quite nobly and I liked him for it, but I began to feel that perhaps it had been for the best after all that I had never been intimate with the family. But I must not forestall either events or my opinions.

"Is there any reason"—it is the Coroner, of course, who is speaking—"why there should be any falling off in your mutual confidence? Has your brother done anything to displease you?"

"We did not like his marriage."

"Was it an unhappy one?"

"It was not a suitable one."

"Did you know Mrs. Van Burnam well, that you say this?"

"Yes, I knew her, but the rest of the family did not."

"Yet they shared in your disapprobation?"

"They felt the marriage more than I did. The lady — excuse me, I never like to speak ill of the sex—was not lacking in good sense or virtue, but she was not the person we had a right to expect Howard to marry?"

"And you let him see that you thought so?"

"How could we do otherwise?"

"Even after she had been his wife for some months?"

"We could not like her."

"Did your brother—I am sorry to press this matter—ever show that he felt your change of conduct towards him?"

"I find it equally hard to answer" was the quick reply. "My brother is of an affectionate nature and he has some, if not all, of the family's pride. I think he did feel it, though he never said so. He is not without loyalty to his wife."

"Mr. Van Burnam, of whom does the firm doing business under the name of Van Burnam & Sons consist?"

"Of the three persons mentioned."

"No others?"

"No."

"Has there ever been in your hearing any threat made by the senior partner of dissolving this firm as it stands?"

"I have heard"—I felt sorry for this strong but far from heartless man, but I would not have stopped the inquiry at this point if I could; I was far too curious—"I have heard my father say that he would withdraw if Howard did not. Whether he would have done so, I consider open to doubt. My father is a just man and never fails to do the right thing, though he sometimes speaks with unnecessary harshness."

"He made the threat, however?"

"Yes."

"And Howard heard it?"

"Or of it; I cannot say which."

"Mr. Van Burnam, have you noticed any change in your brother since this threat was uttered?"

"How, sir; what change?"

"In his treatment of his wife, or in his attitude towards yourself?"

"I have not seen him in the company of his wife since they went to Haddam. As for his conduct towards myself, I can say no more than I have already. We have never forgotten that we are children of one mother."

"Mr. Van Burnam, how many times have you seen Mrs. Howard Van Burnam?"

"Several. More frequently before they were married than since."

"You were in your brother's confidence, then, at that time; knew he was contemplating marriage?"

"It was in my endeavours to prevent the match that I saw so much of Miss Louise Stapleton."

"Ah! I am glad of the explanation! I was just going to inquire why you, of all members of the family, were the only one to know your brother's wife by sight."

The witness, considering this question answered, made no reply. But the next suggestion could not be passed over.

"If you saw Mrs. Van Burnam so often, you are acquainted with her personal appearance?"

"Sufficiently so; as well as I know that of my ordinary calling-acquaintance."

"Was she light or dark?"

"She had brown hair."

"Similar to this?"

The lock held up was the one which had been cut from the head of the dead girl.

"Yes, somewhat similar to that." The tone was cold; but he could not hide his distress.

"Mr. Van Burnam, have you looked well at the woman who was found murdered in your father's house?"

"I have, sir."

"Is there anything in her general outline or in such features as have escaped disfigurement to remind you of Mrs. Howard Van Burnam?"

"I may have thought so—at first glance," he replied, with decided effort.

"And did you change your mind at the second?"

He looked troubled, but answered firmly: "No, I cannot say that I did. But you must not regard my opinion as conclusive," he hastily added. "My knowledge of the lady was comparatively slight.

"The jury will take that into account. All we want to know now is whether you can assert from any knowledge you have of or from anything to be noted in the body itself, that it is not Mrs. Howard Van Burnam?"

"I cannot."

And with this solemn assertion his examination closed.

The remainder of the day was taken up in trying to prove a similarity between Mrs. Van Burnam's handwriting and that of Mrs. James Pope as seen in the register of the Hotel D—— and on the order sent to Altman's. But the only conclusion reached was that the latter might be the former disguised, and even on this point the experts differed.

XIII.

Howard Van Burnam.

The gentleman who stepped from the carriage and entered Mr. Van Burnam's house at twelve o'clock that night produced so little impression upon me that I went to bed satisfied that result would follow these efforts at identification.

And so I told Mr. Gryce when he arrived next morning. But he seemed by no means disconcerted, and merely requsted that I would submit to one more trial. To which I gave my consent and he departed.

I could have asked him a string of questions, but his manner did not invite them, and for some reason I was too wary to show an interest in this tragedy superior to that felt by every right-thinking person connected with it.

At ten o'clock I was in my old seat in the court-room. The same crowd with different faces confronted me, amid which the twelve stolid countenances of the jury looked like old friends. Howard Van Burnam was the witness called, and as he came forward and stood in full view of us all, the interest of the occasion reached its climax.

His countenance wore a reckless look that did not serve to prepossess him with the people at whose mercy he stood. But he did not seem to care, and waited for the Coroner's questions with an air of ease which was in direct contrast to the drawn and troubled faces of his father and brother just visible in the background.

Coroner Dahl surveyed him a few minutes before speaking, then he quietly asked if he had seen the dead body of the woman who had been found lying under a fallen piece of furniture in his father's house.

He replied that he had.

"Before she was removed from the house or after?"

"After."

"Did you recognize it? Was it the body of any one you know?"

"I do not think so."

"Has your wife, who was missing yesterday, been heard from yet, Mr. Van Burnam?"

"Not to my knowledge, sir."

"Had she not—that is, your wife—a complexion similar to that of the dead woman just alluded to?"

"She had a fair skin and brown hair, if that is what you mean. But these attributes are common to too many women for me to give them any weight in an attempted identification of this importance."

"Had they no other similar points of a less general character? Was not your wife of a slight and graceful build, such as is attributed to the subject of this inquiry?"

"My wife was slight and she was graceful, common attributes also."

"And your wife had a scar?"

"Yes."

"On the left ankle?"

"Yes."

"Which the deceased also has?"

"That I do not know. They say so but I had no interest in looking."

"Why, may I ask? Did you not think it a remarkable coincidence?"

The young man frowned. It was the first token of feeling he had given.

"I was not on the look-out for coincidences," was his cold reply. "I had no reason to think this unhappy victim of an unknown man's brutality my wife and so did not allow myself to be moved by even such a fact as this."

"You had no reason," repeated the Coroner, "to think this woman your wife. Had you any reason to think she was not?"

"Yes."

"Will you give us that reason?"

"I had more than one. First, my wife would never wear the clothes I saw on the girl whose dead body was shown to me. Secondly, she would never go to any house alone with a man at the hour testified to by one of your witnesses."

"Not with any man?"

"I did not mean to include her husband in my remark, of course. But as I did not take her to Gramercy Park, the fact that the deceased lady entered an empty house accompanied by a man, is proof enough to me that she was not Louise Van-Burnam."

"When did you part with your wife?"

"On Monday morning at the depot in Haddam."

"Did you knew where she was going?"

"I know where she said she was going."

"And where was that, may I ask?"

"To New York, to interview my father."

"But your father was not in New York?"

"He was daily expected here. The steamer on which he had sailed from Southampton was due on Tuesday."

"Had she an interest in seeing your father? Was there any special reason why she should leave you for doing so?"

"She thought so; she thought he would become reconciled to her entrance into our family if he should see her suddenly and without prejudiced persons standing by."

"And did you fear to mar the effect of this meeting if you accompanied her?"

"No, for I doubted if the meeting would ever take place. I had no sympathy with her schemes, and did not wish to give her the sanction of my presence."

"Was that the reason you let her go to New York alone?"

"Yes."

"Had you no other?"

"No."

"Why did you follow her, then, in less than five hours?"

"Because I was uneasy; because I also wanted to see my father; because I am a man accustomed to carry out every impulse; and impulse led me that day in the direction of my somewhat headstrong wife."

"Did you know where your wife intended to spend the night?"

"I did not. She has many friends or at least I have, in the city, and I concluded she would go to one of them—as she did."

"When did you arrive in the city? before ten o'clock?"

"Yes, a few minutes before."

"Did you try to find your wife?"

"No. I went directly to the club."

"Did you try to find her the next morning?"

"No! I had heard that the steamer had not yet been sighted off Fire Island, so considered the effort unnecessary."

"Why? What connection is there between this fact and an endeavour on your part to find your wife?"

"A very close one. She had come to New York to throw herself at my father's feet. Now she could only do this at the steamer or in——"

"Why do you not proceed, Mr. Van Burnam?"

"I will. I do not know why I stopped,—or in his own house."

"In his own house? In the house in Gramercy Park, do you mean?"

"Yes, he has no other."

REIGN OF THE SOCKEYE

REMARKABLE RUN THIS YEAR LASTED ONLY THREE DAYS.

Every Fourth Year the Fraser River Has an Extra Large Migration to the Spawning Grounds — Fish Were So Plentiful That Little Boats Would Not Hold Them In This Year's "Run."

Although "run" is the name usually given the annual return of the salmon to spawning grounds at the headwaters of British Columbia streams, there are times when such a term is insufficient, and August of 1913 was one of them, for then the fish didn't run at all — they stampeded, says Hubert Evans in Toronto Saturday Globe.

For three days in that month the sockeyes entered the Fraser river in greater numbers than during the past sixteen years; then as suddenly as they came disappeared, and catches of 50 or 70 in one haul of a net dropped to five or ten fish in just a few hours.

Fishermen maintain and cannery records prove that every fourth year sockeyes in the Fraser run in larger numbers, and that this peculiarity is apparent in that river alone.

There are five known species of salmon in British Columbia, and these, in the order of their commercial importance, are: the sockeye, or blueback; the spring, or quinnat; the coho, or silver; the dog, and the humpback, or chum.

Unlike other salmon, those of British Columbia invariably die after spawning, and their bodies, battered and torn in the fight with great rapids, each year strew the sandbars at headwaters in thousands.

It was on August 3, 4 and 5 that the sockeyes, British Columbia's salmon par excellence, struck into fresh water and broke a record of sixteen years' standing. Figures to show the size of the catches then are inadequate, and would not serve as well to tell the numbers of fish as did the reply of an old river fisherman to a party of tourists, which, although it made the travelers from the land of wooden clocks and wooden nutmegs blush for the record of their forbears, could be imagined when the run was at its height.

The party had just come from an inspection of the canneries one day after the run stopped, and one — not a woman — said: "My, the fish must have been plentiful!"

"Yas, they was," admitted the old man, cautiously; "they was that. See that bend up river? Wal, right there, day before yesterday mornin', I seen the river solid with sockeyes, and the ones as was in a hurry was takin' short-cuts through the dew."

Although for weeks before the fishing boats had been taking around 15 or 20 sockeyes a night, when the fish struck in the little craft were loaded to the gunwale in half an hour, and one or two fathoms of net held, in some instances, over one hundred gleaming sockeyes. Some fishermen dared only take part of their catches from the water, and towed the rest of the straining net to the cannery, there to unload without danger of swamping.

Within a few hours after this greatest of runs started canners were placing a limit of 200 or 250 as most fish they would accept from each man working for them, and the canneries operated 24 hours a day in a vain effort to dispose of the unlimited supply. The climax of it all was reached when a cannery, unable to handle all the fish contracted for, offered a scowload of 30,000 fine sockeyes to an oil refinery free of cost, only to have the gift refused, since the refinery in turn was having all it could do to dispose of the offal it had contracted for.

Scenes like these lasted but a few days, and, as usually happens, as suddenly as they had come the sockeyes disappeared and the catches dropped to 50 or less in a night, until later in September the next, and an inferior, variety of salmon, humpbacks, began to be taken.

Gill nets are invariably used in Fraser river salmon-fishing. Government regulations limit the length of these to 150 fathoms, and the depth to about six fathoms. The top and bottom edges are well buoyed and leaded, so that when in the water the net is vertical.

The small gasoline, sail or in some cases row boat, after the net is thrown out by the crew of two, is moored at one end, and drifts with it up or down river with current or tide all night and day.

A regulation of navigation calls for a channel to be left through the nets for passage of larger vessels, but when two or three thousand outfits are at work this channel disappears. Since most captains are no respectors of persons, many a vessel hastening to port cuts through the nets, and it is a frequent sight to see a fisherman standing with the ragged end of net in his hand, gesticulating wildly and voicing his excellent profane vocabulary upon the skipper of some passing vessel. This season, because of labor trouble in Ireland and Scotland, where most salmon nets are made, there was a great scarcity, and a man losing his net was often forced to quit fishing and go in debt to the cannery.

Salmon fishing in the rain and wind is none too safe, and over 65 lives were known to be lost in the river this year, while others were reported as "missing."

Many nationalities are represented among the fishermen: there are British, Indians, Japs, Greeks, Swedes, and some Spaniards, Mexicans and Italians, but four to one of all the rest combined are the Japanese.

The feeling of most whites and Indians against the little brown man is very bitter, but the latter have complete control of the industry, and never lose an opportunity to exert it.

Thin Glass and Thick.

Glass is a substance that we cannot figure the strength of as we can a great many other things with which we are familiar. It varies greatly in itself. The strongest glass, as a rule, breaks into the greatest number of fragments. Comparing the strength of thin glass with thick, the former is relatively the stronger. This is a thing very often lost sight of. Then, again, as to the difference between rough plate and polished plate, we find polished plate the stronger. This is perhaps to be attributed to the fact that all these very fine surface hair cracks are polished out. These only go into the glass to a certain depth, and when they are all or nearly all polished and ground off there is less chance for some of them to form the basis of a crack, and thereby the glass is increased in strength. Tests have been made and some formulae have been arrived at. As was to be expected, they show very irregular results as to the strength of glass.

Short Stories.

The chimney of antiquity was a hole in the roof.

Among persons over eighty years of age one in fifty is blind.

At Gottingen university there is a Bible written on palm leaves.

Two hundred and twenty-four gallons of fresh water weigh a ton.

The 206 bones of the human body are worked by 522 voluntary muscles.

Until the year 1821 the word "donkey" was only seen in slang dictionaries.

A Real Grievance.

"So your uncle paid your debts; that was very kind of him."

"Humph! I don't think so. He might have given me the cash and let me pay them."

"What difference would that have made?"

"It would have re-established my credit."

To Move Pictures.

People who stand their family portraits against the walls while packing and unpacking their household goods cause a great deal of broken glass, scratches and dents. The first thing to be done when moving into your new home should be to hang the pictures any place in order to get them out of the way without waiting to choose a scheme of arrangement. This will prevent a great deal of breakage and other damage.—New York Telegram.

TOOK SEVERE COLD.

Left A Terrible Hard Cough And A Nasty Tickling Sensation In The Throat.

A bad cough accompanied by that distressing, tickling sensation in the throat is most aggravating.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is rich in the lung healing virtues of the Norway pine tree, and for this reason it will stop that tickling in the throat which causes that dry hard cough that keeps you awake at night.

Mr. Sanford Roode, Antrim, N.S., writes:—"Last fall I took a severe cold which left me with a terrible hard cough and a nasty tickling sensation in my throat. I tried many cough medicines, but they did not help me so I got a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and before I had used half of it the cough had left me, and the next one made a complete cure, and I will recommend it as the best cough medicine on the market."

See that you get "Dr. Wood's" when you ask for it. Do not accept any imitation. The genuine is put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark, price, 25 and 50c., and manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

TWO WOMEN SAVED FROM OPERATIONS

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—Their Own Stories Here Told.

Beatrice, Neb.—"Just after my marriage my left side began to pain me and the pain got so severe at times that I suffered terribly with it. I visited three doctors and each one wanted to operate on me but I would not consent to an operation. I heard of the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was doing for others and I used several bottles of it with the result that I haven't been bothered with my side since then. I am in good health and I have two little girls."—Mrs. R. B. Child, Beatrice, Neb.

The Other Case.

Cary, Maine.—"I feel it a duty I owe to all suffering women to tell what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. One year ago I found myself a terrible sufferer. I had pains in both sides and such a soreness I could scarcely straighten up at times. My back ached, I had no appetite and was so nervous I could not sleep, then I would be so tired mornings that I could scarcely get around. It seemed almost impossible to move or do a bit of work and I thought I never would be any better until I submitted to an operation, but my husband thought I had better write to you and I did so, stating my symptoms. I commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and soon felt like a new woman. I had no pains, slept well, had good appetite and could do almost all my own work for a family of four. I shall always feel that I owe my good health to your Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. Hayward Sowers, Cary, Maine.

FOR YOUNG FOLKS

About the Schoolboy Farmers of New York City.

A YOUNG AGRICULTURIST.

An Amusing Game For Little People. Instructive Bits of Useful Information—How to Play Shepherd and Wolf—A Scout Mascot.

Since the policy of instructing the school children in the art of farming became established in New York city some of the youngsters who ordinarily spent their vacations in play have become quite skilful agriculturists. Of course only a few of the vast army of scholars took up the idea, but those who did have profited mightily and, in a small way, financially. In some of the schoolyards plots were set aside for cultivation, but most of the farming is done in vacant lots, the use of which was given by the owners. Some of the youngsters have raised vegetables enough to be of real help to their families, and the lesson of thrift taught and the pleasure of performing useful labor have been of lasting benefit to the young toilers. The picture shows one of these young farmers who have raised crops. His joy in the harvest is depicted in his smiling face. He has learned a lesson in industry that will doubtless be of great benefit in shaping his character.

Shepherd and Wolf.

A good out of door game is called "the shepherd and the wolf." To play this the children stand in a long line, one behind the other, holding each other's dresses. The one at the head of the line represents the shepherd and the little children are the lambs. One player stands apart from them, and he is the wolf. He sneaks stealthily round the place, and the leader or shepherd calls out, "Who goes round my house this dark night?"

The other answers, "I am the wolf."

The shepherd says, "I beg you not to hunt my lambs."

The wolf then says, "I only want one, and this cute one I will have." As he talks he jumps at the last player in line. The shepherd swings around to save his pet lamb, followed, of course, by the others. The wolf is sly and pretends to turn aside, only watching his opportunity to pounce. When he catches the lamb the lamb must try to slip away, and if she succeeds she, in turn, becomes shepherd. The wolf must then pay a forfeit and relinquish his place to the lamb in line, taking his place.

An Amusing Game.

Try playing the game of the four elements next time things become dull at a party.

The players are seated in a circle; the one who has been selected to begin the game takes a knotted handkerchief and throws it suddenly into another's lap calling out at the same time either "earth," "air," "fire" or "water." If "earth" is called out the player into whose lap the handkerchief has fallen must name some quadruped before the other can count ten; if "water," he must name a fish; if "air," a bird; if "fire," he must remain silent. Should the player name a wrong animal or speak when he ought to remain silent, he must pay a forfeit and take a turn at throwing the handkerchief; but should he perform his task properly, he must throw the handkerchief back to the first player. Those who have never joined in this game can have no idea of the absurd errors into which the different players fall when summoned unawares to name a particular kind of animal.

The Boy Scouts' Mascot.

The members of a troop of boy scouts under Bernie Reguin, in Oconomowoc, Wis., had a lot of sport recently, when they captured a live raccoon. They found the little animal asleep in a tree near a lake. They cut off a limb of the tree and lassoed the raccoon. They are going to make him their mascot.

ARE BIG SHIPS UNLUCKY?

After Reading This Article You Will Say "Yes."

While the passenger prefers the biggest vessel he can get a berth in, the case is quite the reverse with the seafaring man. Any old salt would sooner take a job on a five thousand than on a fifty thousand tonner.

This is rather odd, for, after all, bigness is only a relative quality. Our grandparents would have looked on the five thousand ship with far more awe than we regard the Imperator, the big German liner which caught fire only a few days ago; while our grandchildren will probably look back at the latter as a mere cockshell.

Be that as it may, there is something to be said for the salt-water superstition that the big ships of their time are the unlucky ones. You may go right back to 1782, when the Royal George, the biggest unit of our navy at that date, sank at her moorings at Spithead, with a death roll of nearly a thousand.

Then there was the Great Eastern, as notoriously unlucky a vessel as ever was built. Brunel and Scott Russell planned her in 1853, but she was never finished till 1859. Then there was a terrible job to launch her.

She had hardly left the Thames when a steam pipe exploded killing seven, and injuring many others. She did not sail again till the following year, when she met a fearful gale in the Atlantic. Half her life she spent in dock, and, though she had cost £732,000, she was eventually sold for £26,000.

The Captain was the biggest ironclad of her time. She was launched in 1869, and from the first there was trouble. In September, 1870, she was at last sent to join the Channel Fleet. She carried 490 people, including her designer and the son of the First Lord of the Admiralty. On the night of September 7th she was caught in a squall and turned turtle, drowning all but eighteen of those aboard her.

The Danton, the largest of French Dreadnoughts, had a most extraordinary run of ill-luck. After her launch and before her trials she was moored with steel hawsers. Much difficulty was experienced in getting the engines to start, and when at last they did work they started so suddenly that the hawsers snapped, and she ran hard aground. This was her second mishap, for at the launching she had gone aground, and it took a month to get her off.

Later, when they were getting her big guns aboard, he went aground for a third time, but even then her troubles were not over. When traveling in the roadstead at Brest at fifteen knots her engines suddenly broke down, and she could not be stopped until her bow was within thirty feet of the rocks.

The two White Star giants, Olympic and Titanic, both afforded justification for sailors' dislike of big ships. In September, 1911, the Olympic collided with the Cruiser Hawke, doing £100,000 worth of damage within a few seconds. In the following February she lost a screw and a half ton propeller blade. Next month she went aground at Belfast, and in July, 1912, grounded in New York harbor. Last September she lost another propeller blade.

As for the Titanic, her tragic loss on her maiden voyage is too recent to need recalling to memory. The loss of life was 1,490 souls, the greatest ever known in any similar disaster.

Last but not least, we come to the unhappy record of the great German transatlantic liner the Imperator. The Imperator is a ship of fifty thousand tons, and is the largest vessel at present afloat.

On her trial trip down the Elbe she went hard aground, and as she took the bank at the top of the tide it was at first feared that she would not be got off. But eventually tugs did move her, and she proceeded to Cuxhaven.

On the way there was a terrible explosion of bensine in her boiler rooms, men were injured, five fatally. After this came the news that some defect had developed in her turbines. Finally, there is the fire.

Slipshod Ways on a Ship.

The steamship moved slowly up the narrows, abreast of quarantine. There was a tremendous rattle and clank and splash. Aunt Drusilla called a steward.

"What was that, steward?" she asked.

"Nothin', lady—only dropped the anchor, ma'am."

"I thought they would," answered Aunt Drusilla disapprovingly. "They've been very careless with it. I've seen it hanging over the side all day."

Blue Amberol Record

No musical mechanical triumph has approached this remarkable invention of Edison. The new composition of which it is made catches and holds the natural beauty of tone of the world's greatest singers, orchestras and bands, and holds it after you have played it over 3,000 times.

The Blue Amberol is a perpetual, practically unbreakable record that reproduces in an amazing way the art of the performers. Don't miss the opportunity to hear it played.

Any Edison dealer will be glad to demonstrate the Blue Amberol for you.

Foster's Negro Melodies.

"For a period of thirty years or so," says the Musical America, "Stephen Collins Foster was so far ahead of all competitors as the most popular American composer that the others were scarcely in sight. While we know little enough about a great many of his melodies today, such songs as 'The Old Folks at Home,' 'My Old Kentucky Home,' 'Old Uncle Ned' and 'Massa's In the Cold, Cold Ground' have sunk deeper and more permanently into the American heart than any other songs ever written in America. For a better understanding of Foster it is well to remember that his melodies had nothing whatsoever to do with negro melodies, the composer's models being the great melodists of the old world—Mozart, Beethoven, Handel. The fact that his songs formed the piece de resistance of negro minstrelsy and therefore in general drew their poetic subject matter from negro life is responsible for the legend, so hard to kill that his melodies were derived from negro songs."

Hat Island's Unique Rookery.

Hat island, in the Great Salt lake, Utah, is probably the most unique rookery in the world, as well as one of the most densely populated. The island contains about twelve acres, and on a rocky pinnacle a hundred feet above the brine, with not a drop of fresh water to be found and where there is nothing to excite the cupidity or commercial instinct of man, the birds—gulls, pelicans, herons and cormorants by the thousand—make their home. The island can be seen at a distance of ten miles, rising like a "cocked hat" out of the sapphire of the inland sea. The birds are utterly fearless. Protected as they are by the laws of the state, they have had little cause to fear man and his death dealing weapons. It is necessary to use the greatest care to avoid stepping on the nests and eggs of the tens of thousands of sea fowl that have established their rookeries on the islet.—Argonaut.

A Change of Front.

The famous surgeon, the late Dr. William Bull of New York, once asked Dr. Osler to join him in a drive through the park in his gig. On one of the upper reaches of the drive the horse grew restive, reairing and pawing in a spirited way that Dr. Bull was familiar with and not the least afraid of.

"Gently—go gently, William!" said Dr. Osler. "Don't irritate him. Always soothe your horse, William. And I think you will do better without me on the seat. Pray let me down!"

When Dr. Osler was once safely landed on the ground, however, he said: "Now, William, touch him up. Never let a horse get the better of you. Touch him up, conquer him, don't spare him. And now, William, I'll leave you to manage him. I'll walk back," concluded the man willing to tolerate anybody else.—New York Tribune.

ECZEMA AND SORE EYES

"My daughter suffered from inflamed eyelids and eczema on her head," writes Mr. H. W. Lear, Port Hanford, N.S. "The child was in a bad state and suffered greatly. The doctor failed to help her, and on recommendation of a friend, I used Dr. Chase's Ointment, which made a complete cure. With a grateful heart I write you this letter."

How to Sell a Cow.

A Scotch dealer at Clones fair was asked by a countryman to do him a favor. "You see that woman," said he, pointing to a woman. "Well, I've offered her five pounds ten for her cow, but she won't sell. Now, if you, a stranger, should offer her five pounds fifteen she would sell, but would not sell to me for that. Will you be kind enough to take this half crown and bind the bargain with it, and I will then pay the money and take the cow?" The good natured cattle dealer effected the purchase as requested and then turned to find the countryman, but the latter was gone. He was forced to take the cow himself and pay for her, though she was not worth half the money he had thus bid to oblige the missing countryman. It was afterward ascertained that the woman was the countryman's wife.

DODGING WASPS

Those Acquainted With Them do Not Run But Throw Themselves Flat

A man on his first trip into the wilds and marshes of an unknown country with a party of engineers was struck by a unique method they have to escape from the attack of wasps and hornets. The country traversed is generally covered with thick undergrowth, and a path has to be cut through this all along the line. So when a big wasp nest is reached there is very little warning, sometimes the axemen cutting into a big one with their machetes.

The person relating this experience was some sixty feet behind the axmen with the instrument, when all at once the two axmen dropped in their tracks as if they had been struck by a thunderbolt. The man behind and the two chainmen did likewise. While they were lying prone on the grass and wet marsh, they heard what sounded like bullets singing over their heads. One after the other they came with angry buzz. When things had quieted down a bit, work was continued, and the new man found that to escape from wasps or hornets the thing to do was to drop instanter. The insects seem to be so mad that they fly in straight lines along a level, and do not have time to hunt around for you.

It is said that hornets are not so prone to follow this rule as wasps; but the wasps never vary. Men have been stung to death by hornets, and horses and mules likewise.

PLAYING AT COURT

A Command to Act Before the King Must be Obeyed at Any Cost

"A command to play before the King" said an actor-manager, "is, of course, a very high and much-coveted honor; but it is often exceedingly embarrassing, for, however awkward it may be, it must be obeyed."

How very inconvenient it may be was proved some years ago when Sir Henry Irving, while playing at Belfast, received a very golden summons to play before King Edward VII. and the German Emperor at Sandringham.

Irving, however awkward might be the summons, would not disappoint his Majesty; so one night, as soon as his performance in Ireland was ended, he started on his long journey, travelling over sea and land at express speed, gave his inimitable presentment of Corporal Brewster before their Majesties, and as soon as it was finished was whisked away back to Belfast.

Even when the command is not embarrassing, the honor always involves great anxiety and hard work, which begins the moment the command is received. There are a hundred preliminary arrangements to make; countless wheels within wheels to set at work. The Royal theatre has to be specially prepared and adapted for the performance. Often every foot of this scenery has to be made for the one night; and, as the stage is very small much rehearsing is necessary to familiarize the actors with their restricted arena. The utmost care, too, must be taken to have every detail as perfect and realistic as possible.

But all this trouble is well repaid by the pleasure of acting before such a charming and appreciative audience; for, from the moment of reaching Windsor or Sandringham, or wherever the performance may be, to the sumptuous banquet which follows the performance, and the valuable presents of jewellery which are given to the "stars," nothing could exceed the warm hospitality and unaffected graciousness of their Majesties to their histrionic guests.

Strange Sleeping Quarters

In a workman's house at Llanddulas there was no staircase, and father, mother, children, and others, in order to get to bed, had first to mount a table, then climb through a hole in the ceiling and crawl along a sort of tunnel before reaching their sleeping quarters.

Girl Climbs Church Spire

Miss Dorothy Willink, daughter of Canon Willink, rector of St. Martin's Church, Birmingham, climbed to the top of the church spire, 260 feet high, and scratched her name on the cap to which the weathercock is fixed. She climbed as far as possible by the steps inside the church, and ended the journey on the steeplejack's ladders, the spire being at present under repair.

The King as a yachtsman is shown on a series of new Rhodesian stamps.

No fewer than six golden weddings were celebrated in a single day in the village of Ghistelles, near Ostend.

Attractive Score Cards.

If you want to make inexpensive and handsome score cards buy some floral wall paper. Roses and carnations are both very effective. One way is to paste the floral paper smoothly on water color paper, which costs 5 cents a sheet. When the paste is thoroughly dry cut into odd shapes so that a flower is on each card. Attach a pencil and letter with a small brush.

No one would ever suspect that they were not hand painted. Another dainty score card is made by cutting a rose out of a piece of wall paper, pasting writing paper at the back and folding the writing paper beneath, which makes a leaf on which to write the score. Attach the card to the dress or belt by a twisted cord of embroidered silk. These cards may be made from any pretty flowered wall paper.

For Paint Spots.

"I thought I had ruined my pink linen when I got it smeared with paint, but I removed the last trace of the paint marks in this way," informed a woman for the benefit of a friend who had met with a like catastrophe.

"Cover the paint spot with plain lard or with cold cream and let the lard or cream stay on for twenty-four hours. Then wash out the place with cold water and soap. Do this and you'll be as light hearted as I am over my pink linen."

The Real Test.

"Is she an obliging musician?"

"Very. She will always sing when you ask her to. She doesn't have to be coaxed."

"I know, but will she also stop when you've had enough?"

SOME JOTTINGS FROM OVER-SEAS

Twice Broke Neck

An inquest was held at Carbrook, Norfolk, on William Walter Warman, farm bailiff, who died three days after a fall from a tumbrel. The doctor said the man broke his neck in the same place where it was broken many years before.

Trail of the Herring

Aldeburgh fishermen who catch large numbers of whiting and codling with rod and line in the River Alde at Slaughden, Norfolk, have been surprised to find twelve miles from the sea herring attracted by their bait of lug (seashore) worms.

Fox Got Revenge

The Kildare Hunt, during a run at Colbinstown, lost two of their hounds as a result of the Baltinglass train running into the pack which was in pursuit of a fox which took to the railway track as a method of escape.

Skeleton in Cairn

An interesting discovery was made in the wild and mountainous pass of Drumochter. The stones in a large cairn close by the Great North Road were being utilized for road metalling purposes, and while engaged in removing these stones the workmen came upon a well preserved human skeleton.

Herdsman Gored to Death

An old age pensioner named O'Donnell, who was in the employment of Mr. James H. Massey, Carn, Ballycastle, as a herd, was attending to his usual duties on the farm, when a heifer attacked and fatally injured him before assistance could arrive.

After Twenty-three Years

An Irish laborer named James Moran surrendered at Chester for alleged drunkenness and assaulting the police twenty-three years before. A warrant was issued against him in 1890, but the constable concerned and both justices who signed the warrant had died.

Three Killed by Gunpowder

An accident at Pembroke caused the deaths of a mother, daughter, and granddaughter. The mother took a bucket of what she thought was damp coal from an empty cottage, and placed it on her fire. It proved to be rock powder rendered wet by exposure. Instead of exploding the powder shot out in flames, which enveloped the three women, who were so severely burned that all died.

Fire Brigade Resigned

At a meeting of the Sevenoaks Urban Council the staff of the Town Fire Brigade handed in their resignations as a protest against the alleged neglect of the Council in not providing them with proper facilities and apparatus. They were called to a fire and could not leave the station for an hour after the "call" owing to the difficulty of getting horses for the engine.

GOOD SHOUTERS

Salesmen With Good Voices Are Paid Superior Wages

"Perhaps you may not know," remarked the superintendent of one of the great London markets, "that some of the salesmen who stand outside the stalls here and in the streets, which may almost be classed as free markets, are paid superior wages because they are known as good shouters.

"One man, you see, may have a far more effective cry for drawing people round a stall than another, and his value goes up in consequence. There used to be a man in this market who seldom actually served a customer, and who received $25 a week for four days' work. He could patter without intermission for hours at a stretch, and he absolutely talked down all the other salesmen.

To Denote Languages

In Budapest women guides and interpreters wear a different colored ribbon for each language which they speak. They are to be seen walking about the city, waiting at railway stations, and driving in carriages. Some have two or three ribbons, and others have four, five, or six. Bright red represents English, a heliotrope or lavender German, a brilliant yellow French, a pale blue Italian, and a brown Danish. Dutch is shown by a Nile green, and so on throughout all the colors and most nations of the earth.

Big Relief Funds

A generous public subscribed $670,000 for the sufferers by pit disaster at Hulton several years ago.

The most memorable fund raised through a colliery accident was that for the Hartley Colliery disaster in 1862, when 204 miners were killed and more than 400 widows and orphans left destitute. A relief fund of $400,000 was raised, being largely in excess of what was required.

Another great fund was that in aid of the victims of the wreck of the Titanic. A sum of $2,130,000 was raised, which had to be divided amongst 5,296 persons.

SOME ILL OMENS

Things That Are Supposed to Bring Bad Luck to Miners

It is considered to be inviting disaster to introduce a rabbit into a mine; whistling is also thought to invite accident, and for this reason a miner never whistles at his work. To set eyes on a woman whilst on the way to the pit is thought to be an ill-omen. Many miners, in fact, have been known to turn back home on seeing a feminine figure.

Many birds are also considered to be bringers of ill-luck. A miner at Nantymoel freed a pigeon for the first time one Sunday. It flew round the district, and was seen to settle on the framework surmounting the shaft of the pit. Arriving at work, the miners, seeing the pigeon, straightway returned home. For days afterwards many of them refused to descend the pit.

After a terrible explosion at Llanberadach one of the rescue party, while exploring the workings, found a robin. Instantly the disaster was attributed to the bird's presence, and the robin has been a bird of ill-omen to the miners ever since.

Three Great Catchers

Men who follow baseball closely realize the power that lies in a great catcher like Bresnahan, Kling, Thomas and a few more of the top notchers. In the club of youngsters he built up to startle the baseball world, Clarke Griffith, manager of the Washington team, has a splendid catching department. His best catcher is Ainsmith, who handles the lightning delivery of Walter Johnson. John Henry comes second, handling the curves of Bob Groom, Tom Hughes and Carl Cashion. The third of the Washington backstops is Alva Williams, the big, good natured friend of young pitchers.

Useful Spiders

There are some English spiders whose webs are used for the telescopes at Greenwich Observatory, and help to fix noon accurately. A thin strand of web is fixed across the lens of a telescope, and a watcher keeps his eye to the glass. When the sun draws level with the tiny thread of web it is noon. Electric messages flash over the wires from end to end of the land, cannon boom, hooters sound, and all the world may go to lunch, for the web of the spider has declared it exactly high noon.

Telephone operators in Egypt are required to speak English, French, Italian, Greek and Arabic.

FOOD AND MEDICINE.

Many Articles of Diet Act as Both.

Many of the most familiar fruits and vegetables have distinct medicinal values. The proper attention to the things we eat, then, will make them serve both the purpose of food and medicine, and will enable us to save some of the money spent on remedies and doctor bills. The following are some articles of diet which are known to have medicinal qualities:

Apples, carrots and Brazil nuts are excellent for sufferers from constipation.

Asparagus stimulates the kidneys.

Bananas are beneficial to sufferers from chest complaints.

Beets are fattening and good for people who want to put on flesh. So are potatoes.

Celery and onions are nerve tonics.

Cranberries are astringent and correct the liver when it is suffering from inaction caused by overeating.

Dates are nourishing and also prevent constipation.

Grape juice is a laxative, but the skin and seeds are likely to cause constipation.

Honey is a good substitute for cod liver oil.

Lemon juice is excellent as a gargle for sore throat.

Lettuce has a soothing effect on the nerves and is excellent for sufferers from insomnia.

Onions are conducive to sleep. They quiet the nerves and are good for colds.

Parsnips, like sarsaparilla, are good for the blood and to tone up the system.

Tomatoes are good for a torpid liver, but they should be avoided by gouty people.

Water cress is an excellent blood purifier.

Constantine and Sofia.

Sofia, it is curious to recall, might have been Constantinople if Constantine had adhered to the preference he felt at one time for it. Several places were thought of as the site of the new Rome before the unrivaled natural advantages of Byzantium secured the honor, among them Troy and Serdica in Moesia, which we now know as Sofia. "Serdica is my Rome" was an actual saying of Constantine, who was almost certainly born not far off, at Nish, for the claim of York to be his birthplace is generally abandoned. But "Constantinople" would not have meant what it has if it had been fixed anywhere but on the Bosporus.—London Standard.

Driving a Bargain.

Old Mr. Beeman was decidedly penurious, but as his premises were becoming overrun with rats he decided to engage a professional rat catcher, when the following conversation took place:

"There, Mr. Beeman," said the rat catcher, "I've cleared your premises of the varmints, and I take 'em all away with me. You'll have no further trouble with rats, I assure you, and you won't have to bother about the dead ones either. I'll put 'em right in this box. The bill is $5."

Mr. Beeman peered anxiously over the rims of his silver rimmed spectacles. "Don't I get anything for the rats?" he inquired.

Natural Barometers.

Various natural barometers are known to most people. The leech, for instance, is said to be an infallible weather guide. Some beards possess qualities akin to the principle which worked the old lady and gentleman in the cottage or castle weather indicator in the days of yore. In fine weather one came out and the other returned. This was due to the action of the atmosphere on the catgut which regulated the movement of the figures. In wet weather the string expanded, and in dry weather it contracted. The same effect is apparent in some beards. They become hard and curly and difficult to cut when the weather is likely to be wet.

EASTER ISLAND.

A Deserted Land and its Mysterious Crude Stone Statues

Huge and grotesque stone images stand and lie over the fertile surface of a deserted island far south in the Pacific. It is a place that Poe might have sung into existence or Rider Haggard created for the scenes of some fantastic romance. Even its name—Easter Island—seems more literary than geographical. Easter Island, 2,000 miles from South America and 1,400 miles east of Pitcairn Island, has on all the forty-five square miles of its area less than 200 people. But it has other inhabitants, great masses of rock, 600 in number, each carved into the semblance of a human figure, the origin of which is a mystery. These statues weigh on an average from ten to twelve tons each, some of them reaching a weight of forty tons. A few of them stand on strong platforms 400 feet long, and many similar platforms stand untenanted.

At the quarry, which is a crater for Easter Island is of volcanic origin, a number of these images lie half formed as the vanished sculptors left them.

There is another crater where the crowns of the figures were made from rock of a different sort. Here, too, are found unfinished specimens.—Church-man.

NOTES OF THE FASHIONS

Choosing an afternoon frock is more difficult than choosing a street suit. A woman must be quite sure of her social opportunities before she does it.

Even women of wealth do not always go out socially in the afternoon hours. They have not the time to indulge in bridge, they send cards to teas instead of attending and they do not indulge in fashionable luncheons.

If one has an occasional wedding to attend, or a few luncheons with the theatre to follow, then one scarcely thinks it necessary to buy a gown that will only serve those needs.

The woman whose social life is mostly confined to the afternoons, and there are many such, prefers to expend money in this line rather than in evening gowns. Each woman must be the arbiter of her own expenditures in that respect, and she must be governed by the certain past instead of the uncertain future. She is apt to know what her circle of friends do in the way of entertaining and she must provide the clothes that she needs rather than those she may wish.

The most helpful thing that has occurred to settle this problem is the fashion for half low afternoon gowns with diaphanous tops. Unless a woman indulges in a round of balls and the opera she can make a fashionable afternoon frock serve for almost any kind of evening demand. The theatre, an informal dinner, demand just the kind of frock she wears to a large card party or an elaborate lunch.

Take, for instance, a black satin, with one of those new skirts which are draped in layers of folds straight across the front in order to get fulness at the sides and a slight lift at the hem in front. There was a short tunic of the satin that did not reach more than two inches below the hips, and a high loose belt of jet beads with tiny white crystal flowers placed here and there. The bodice, which began at the high belt, was of white chiffon cloth cut in kimona shape with three-quarter sleeves and an open V-shaped neck. The sleeves are edged with a tiny band of brown fur.

Here was a gown that could be worn before and after seven o'clock; and a smart short coat of velvet or fur would serve as a covering for afternoon or evening.

Gowns for Moderate Means.

Such is the kind of gown that a woman of moderate income should choose if she needs one that must serve many occasions. If her life is ordered in a different manner, that if she wishes to dress more simply for afternoon affairs, then she may not wish a half transparent satin gown; she may prefer a frock of corded silk or velvet or soft duvteyn with a jacket of the material.

She does not wish to choose a model that has too much of the heavy material over the shoulders; and if she does not want the flimsy top of chiffon or net she may end the velvet half way across the shoulders, make it into a deep surplice, and fill in the space with a crossed handkerchief of tulle or lace which extends into a high or turnover collar at the back.

Every woman should manage it so that she does not have to wear her street suit to afternoon affairs; if the hostess takes the trouble to entertain her hospitality should be met with one's best gown. It is comparatively easy in these days to make up some kind of frock that serves the purpose and arrange for it a wrap to keep one warm on the journey to and fro.

MAKING HAIR GROW

It appears that in all the world there has been discovered one drug—and ONLY one—that actually stimulates to renewed action the follicles and cells that nourish the hair and thereby make it grow—even on bald heads. That drug is a standard article of commerce well known to the drug trade. The National Standard Dispensatory says it acts as a powerful stimulant to the growth of the hair. Therefore, even if you have tried a hundred kinds of hair tonic without that drug, you have not proved that a hair tonic containing that drug will not make your hair grow. The best way is to mix your own tonic or have a reliable druggist mix it for you. Here is a formula that includes the drug referred to: Bay Rum, 6 oz.; Menthol Crystals, ¼ drachm; Lavona de Composee, 2 oz. You can get these ingredients at any drug store. If you choose you may add 1 drachm of your favourite perfume. Apply to the scalp with the fingers night and morning. This formula is recommended for falling hair and dandruff. It should make your hair grow. It is NOT in any sense a dye and contains no colouring matter whatever, but has a tendency to stimulate the pigment-secreting cells and thereby restore prematurely grey hair to its natural colour.

USEFUL RECIPES

Candied Cranberries.

Candied cranberries are quite as pretty and appetising as the candied cherries that are used so much for frosted cakes and puddings or serving with creams and sherbets. That they are much cheaper than the bright maraschinos, goes without saying. To prepare them, select the bright red Cape Cod cranberries and allow half as much sugar as berries and half as much cold water as sugar. Put the berries in a deep dish, sprinkle with sugar on top, like a crust, and pour the water on top of that. Cook very slowly. When they break into a boil, cover just a few moments—not long, or the skins will burst—then uncover, cook until tender, but not broken. Take up one by one and spread on oiled plates to cool and harden.

Washington Cranberry Jelly.

Instead of having cranberry jelly in one large shape, mould it individually and arrange the moulds on a glass dish and wreathe with large raisins plumped in orange juice, then cooled. Or chop pitted dates and mould them into jelly. Oranges sliced and seeded and freed from the white skin, then moulded in the jelly make a pleasant change. Cranberry sauce is changed by the addition of chopped cooked prunes, the two flavours combining deliciously for a turkey.

Baked Cranberries.

Choose a wide flat earthen or granite baking dish large enough to allow a pint of cranberries to lie in one layer on the bottom. Then pour over them a syrup made of two cupfuls of sugar and one cupful of water. Place in a slow oven and bake until done. Take from the fire, but do not touch until cold, when each berry may be tossed up lightly with a fork. If properly baked each berry will be thickly coated with jelly and when piled in a pretty glass dish they look like candied cherries.

Cranberry Pie.

Select large cranberries and cut each one in half with a sharp knife. For one pie you will need a cupful and a half of berries. Mix with them a tablespoonful of flour, one cupful of sugar, and a half cupful of butter. Line a pie plate with plain pastry, fill with the berries, then cover with strips of pastry, laid on criss-cross, latticework fashion, and bake slowly until the crust is brown. If preferred the cranberries can be stewed first before putting into the crust.

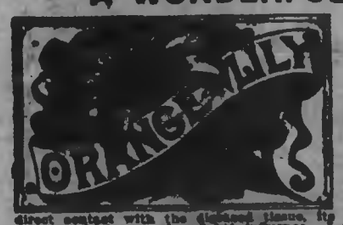
A WONDERFUL REMEDY



Orange Lily is daily curing the most obstinate cases of Female Disorders, Falling of the Womb, Leucorrhoea, Painful and Suppressed Menstruation, etc., etc., are all of them relieved from the start by its use, and a few weeks' or months' treatment accomplishes a complete cure. This remedy is a positive, scientific preparation, and is based on the discoveries of Pasteur and Lister. It is an applied treatment; that is, it is not taken internally, but is applied direct to the suffering parts, and it, therefore, acts with all the certainty of the known laws of chemical action. As it comes in direct contact with the diseased tissue, its antiseptic and nerve-food properties cannot help having a beneficial influence. I receive from 10 to 50 letters daily, speaking of the benefits and cures it is performing, and so sure am I that it will do what is claimed for it that I will send, absolutely free, a 25c box to every suffering woman who will write for it. Price, $1 per box, which is sufficient for one months' treatment. Address, MRS. FRANCES E. CURRAH, WINDSOR, ONT.

SKIRTS AND WOMEN'S WALK

What effect has the skirt on woman's walk?

This query, raised in one of the magazines, is answered by a contributor, who says:

"Our great-grandmothers had a queenly carriage. Walking with them was an art. It was evident that they were not spineless women.

"During the days when the uncertain behaving hoopskirt reigned women walked timidly. They took little mincing steps, and poets compared their feet to little mice stealing in and out. There was a certain demureness about the walk in the days of the crinoline. It was then that their hands were carried folded, for the reason that it was quite impossible to carry them any other way.

The Hobble Skirt Hop.

"These little steps were again seen during the reign of the hobble skirt, but then there was no shyness in either carriage or demeanour.

"The wide pleated skirt made it possible for a long stride, but its great drawback was heaviness, and there were many women so burdened with the weight of their skirts that it was almost out of the question to take any steps at all.

"There was a time when every sort of walk threatened to go out of existence. That was when the first yard-wide skirt put in an appearance, and tailors and dressmakers had not then thought of the helpful slash.

"Woman recognized in the slash a life-saver, but on the other hand her own innate modesty compelled her at first to look at it askance. Since then the slash has gone to the worst of its extremes, and now, like every other good and bad fashion, the reaction has set in and the slash is beginning to disappear.

"It is interesting to speculate just what effect the new figure in the new peg-top skirt will have on the walk."

Use Soup For Cold Days

Most people enjoy fresh vegetable soups, but few care for a steaming hot soup in midsummer or during dog-days, the very time when fresh vegetables are most plentiful and at their best. But with a nip of frost in the air comes a sharper appetite, and we welcome our favourite "brews," or others "just as good," with the additional merit of being new.

For luncheon and supper, choose good, rich vegetable soups, with a stock basis made from the trimmings, tough pieces, and bones which might otherwise be thrown away. Better a fresh soup bone and "hash meat" in a savoury soup than croquettes, which must be fried and first made palatable by adding various accessories to the mixture.

A tempting, nutritious soup may be made of the cheapest materials, and often including portions of food really impossible to use in other ways.

In making a thick, rich vegetable soup, the cost of materials is inconsiderable. For, even for a large quantity of soup, you do not use a large quantity of any one kind of vegetable. A soup bone, without meat, will furnish the meaty flavour, and the marrow in the bone add the right amount of fat and richness. Half of a small head of cabbage will be enough, or more than enough; for a cupful of each kind of vegetable used, such as corn, chopped cabbage, turnips, onions, and carrots, a cup of lima beans, one green pepper, and a cupful of young, tender okra pods sliced will give you a generous quantity of soup, to which you add your drop dumplings, either egg or suet, or scalded flour.

Thus you see you may save enough from the purchase of your vegetables for your meat dinners to furnish soup that will be a complete meal in itself, satisfactory for luncheon or supper.

Cream or milk soups are most suitable for supper, and to these may be added a small quantity of cheese or eggs to increase its nourishing qualities and flavour. Meat stock or broth is unnecessary in these soups. When vegetables are used, generally corn, tomatoes, or peas, they should be in a pulp, so the soup will be smooth and creamy.

If your onions are browned well, without burning them, before they are added to a meat, vegetable, or tomato soup, they give a delightful rich flavour.

Cream of Barley Broth.

Wash half a cupful of pearl barley, place in a saucepan and cover with cold water; heat quickly, boil five minutes, and drain. Cover with three pints of veal or chicken stock—or clear mutton broth may be substituted. Let it simmer slowly until the barley is tender. Then take from the fire, take out two tablespoonfuls of barley, and press the remainder through a fine sieve. Return to saucepan with the whole barley and half a cupful of scalded cream or rich milk. If the soup is too thick, add enough stock to reduce it to the desired consistency. Season to taste and simmer five minutes. A cupful of cooked asparagus tips or green peas may be added if desired; or tiny balls of forcemeat, made of a little left-over chicken or roast veal.

Scotch Barley Broth.

Soak four ounces of barley in a quart of cold water over night. Next morning drain, put in a soup kettle with one onion, one new turnip, one carrot, all cut in slices; also add a few green tops of celery, and four tablespoonfuls of oatmeal. Cover with two quarts of boiling water and simmer gently for an hour. Season to taste with salt and pepper, and then strain. Serve with croutons.

A WOMAN'S HELPLESSNESS

Cured Through the Rich, Red Blood Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Actually Make

Thousands of women suffer from headaches, backaches, dizziness, languor and nervousness. Few realize that their misery all comes from the bad state of their blood. They take one thing for their head, another for their stomach and a third for their nerves. And yet all the while it is simply their blood that is the cause of all the trouble. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will cure because they actually make new, rich, red blood, which reaches every organ and every nerve in the body, carrying with it a new health and new strength. Mrs. Wm. Acorn, Charlottetown, P.E.I., says: "Before I began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I was one of the most miserable women living. For more than three years I lived a life of constant dread. I was taking weak spells so that I could not be left alone. If I walked from one room to another my heart would palpitate so violently that I feared I would die. I was continually sending for the doctor, who told me I had no blood and that my nerves were shattered. Notwithstanding his treatment I did not get any better. I could not keep anything on my stomach, and the least thing would make me sick. Then my trouble was complicated with rheumatism, which became so bad that I had to be lifted like a child, and the pain was almost unbearable. I was in this deplorable condition when my husband read of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and got me a supply. When I had taken half a dozen boxes I felt much better, and could go about the house. I kept on taking the Pills until I had used twelve boxes, and I can truly say they made me a well woman. Indeed I do not think I would be living now but for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I wish I could persuade every woman who is sick to follow my example, for I have proved they will cure the most desperate cases, and I consider myself a living witness of this fact."

You can get these Pills through any medicine dealer or by mail post paid, at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

MORE ABOUT "AN UNFAIR DECEPTION"

By RUTH CAMERON

Some weeks ago I wrote you about what I called an "unfair deception." My thesis was that it was not right to keep from anyone who was dying the truth about the matter.

In answer to this I received a very interesting letter.

"About five years ago," writes my letter friend, "I developed a complaint which led me from one doctor to another. Finally a specialist, after a lengthy examination, told me I must move to a milder climate and do no work but lead an idle, carefree life for many months. I insisted on knowing exactly what the matter was, and they finally told me that I had a peculiar nervous disease which affected the heart and they could only promise me at most two years to live, if I were very careful. I might go on at any time; I continued working as hard as I had been doing.

"After several minutes I somehow managed to thank the doctors for their frankness and I went out into the sunshine. I knew I couldn't make any of the changes the doctors insisted upon for I was only twenty and utterly dependent on my own earnings, which were not very large. So I had to decide to try to live my life one day at a time, never looking beyond, and give and take as much of the sweetness of life as possible in the time I had.

"I worked hard for I was ambitious and rose steadily in the office where I was employed and tried to forget myself and the future as much as possible. Unless you have been in such a position, it is almost impossible to realize what it means to go to bed and know that perhaps you will never see the morning; to spend a pleasant evening with a friend and know when you part that it may be for the last time. All the thousand and one things that are so dear to us become little deaths to you when you know that you may be using or looking on them for the last time. I used to say that the person most vitally concerned should certainly be told if death were imminent but now I think otherwise. Our bodies are such wonderful things that even the cleverest physicians are sometimes wrong in their predictions, and, in my case, things suddenly take a turn for the better when least expected.

"Somehow my doctors were wrong, and last year the same specialist congratulated me on my wonderful improvement, which was quite unaccountable, and now I have every expectation of living to a good old age. But even now in the silences of the night the old horror comes to me.

"So this is why I say in the great majority of cases people should not know if the long journey is at hand. If there are things which affect the living and which ought to be settled up, then, of course, the plain facts should be told, but in every other case I think it is better to let anyone slip hopefully and unknowingly into the great beyond."

Aside from its contribution to the original subject, I like this letter because of its lesson on the fallibility of doctors.

Doctors are about the finest class of men in the world, but they are men, therefore fallible. Moreover, I think the average doctor is more inclined to exaggerate than minimize the seriousness of a case. That is perfectly logical and natural. First, because that makes a patient more likely to follow directions; second, as self-insurance in case of a serious outcome; and third, because they get more credit if they do cure.

Courage, then, comrade, don't let the most expensive specialist of the world rob you of hope. While there's life there's hope, and while there's hope there's usually life.

TO REMEMBER IN BUYING MEAT.

The most economical rib roast of beef is the sixth rib; the juiciest, tenderest, and highest-priced roast is the eleventh and twelfth ribs.

A standing rib roast is better than a rolled rib roast.

Porterhouse is the most expensive steak.

Hip-bone sirloin is the best cut of sirloin; it costs no more than the poorest cut.

A rump roast is delicious and costs much less than a rib.

The chuck makes excellent pot roasts and is cheaper than the round.

Stews and beef loaves from the neck and chuck are cheaper than from the plate and plank.

The brisket, plate and navel are the best for corning and boiling.

The most expensive meats are not necessarily the most nutritious.

BOVRIL TAKEN

In the remarkable experiments with Bovril upon human subjects reported to the British Medical Association, an amount of Bovril proportionate to the size of the small dark triangle was proved to produce an increase in flesh and muscle corresponding to the size of the large white triangle, showing that the body-building power of Bovril is from 10 to 20 times the amount taken.

Bovril is the concentrated goodness of the best of beef. It is a wonderfully warming winter beverage; it builds up the weak constitution and strengthens the strong one; it guards against the grip; it checks colds and chills; it is cook's right hand in the kitchen; it is nurse's first aid in the sick-room. How To Cook Sweet Potatoes

FRIED SWEET POTATOES.

Weigh about two pounds of sweet potatoes, letting them be as near the same size as possible. Wash them well, using a scrubbing brush if necessary, but taking care not to break the skins. Put them into a saucepan of boiling water and cook them for about twenty minutes. When tried with a fork the centres should be slightly hard. Drain, then cover with a cloth, and leave for a few minutes on the side of the stove. Skin them and cut into rather thick slices and fry them in boiling fat until a nice golden brown. Sprinkle with salt and pepper, and serve very hot.

SWEET POTATOES EN CASSEROLE

Put three ounces of butter in a casserole with two tablesponofuls of sugar. When the butter is thoroughly hot put in a layer of uncooked sweet potatoes (sliced thickly). Sprinkle with salt and pepper and then put in another layer. Pour on sufficient boiling water to nearly cover the first layer of potatoes. Then put on the lid and bake in a slow oven. When the bottom layer of potatoes is brown remove to the top, so that the other layer may get brown. By the time the potatoes are all browned and quite tender there will be very little water left, and the butter serves as a sauce. Arrange in neat layers on a hot dish, pour the butter over, and serve at once.

SWEET POTATO CROQUETTES.

Choose as many sweet potatoes as are desired. Scrub them, and bake in the oven until soft. Then take out all the potato and rub it through a sieve. Measure, and to every pint of potato add three tablespoonfuls of sweet almonds (previously pounded in a mortar), one egg, two ounces of butter, and salt to taste. Make into a paste with hot milk, then form into croquettes, dip into egg and bread-crumbs, and fry in deep fat until brown.

SWEET POTATOES WITH TOMATOES.

Peel as many sweet potatoes as are required and steam them until soft. Mash them with a fork, adding one ounce of butter, a spoonful or two of hot milk, and season with salt and pepper. Cut some tomatoes in thick slices, put them in a casserole with two ounces of butter, salt, and pepper, and bake until done, then spread the hot mashed potatoes over the top and smooth the top, marking with a fork. Then brush over with egg, sprinkle grated cheese on top, and brown in the oven or under the grid.

The New Corset For Fat Women

The new corset designed to coerce overfat ladies into the new style gowns has three sets of strings. When you have one set adjusted you still have two more struggles left. Think of that—and shudder.

To escape this fate, fat ladies should lose no time in securing one of the large cases of Marmola Prescription Tablets—that druggists and the Marmola Company, Detroit, Mich., sell for 75 cents. One of these tablets taken after each meal and at bedtime for a short while will make her independent of the new corset. Being made in strict accordance with the famous Marmola Prescription, these pleasant little standbys of the overfat are perfectly harmless, except to the fat itself, which they not infrequently do away with at the rate of a pound a day, and they are also the most economical and least restrictive means for reducing fat one could adopt, as they get results without interfering either with one's easy chair tendencies or methods of diet, however generous.

The witness in a law case was an old countrywoman, and her reply to every question was, "I think so." Finally counsel became angry.

"Now, look here!" he said. "Stop that thinking business and answer my questions!"

"Ah," said the witness, "you will have to 'scuse me! I ain't like you lawyers. I can't talk without thinking!"

Mark Twain, in the course of a public dinner, talked of his pet aversion.

"Christian Science," he said, "reminds me of the apple cure for drunkenness. In Hannibal, in my boyhood, the apple cure was highly esteemed. I remember once hearing the Hannibal town drunkard expatiate on the apple cure.

"'You believe in it, then, do you, Hank?' a listener asked.

"'Believe in it? How can I help believin' in it? the drunkard said, excitedly, 'Ain't it cured me eight times?'"

Dugald was ill, and his friend Donald took a bottle of whisky to him. Donald gave the invalid one glass and said:—

"I asked the young woman in front to remove her big hat so that I could see the stage."

"Did she do it?

"No, she said if she held her hat in her lap she couldn't see the stage herself."

The Pastor's Occupation.

A clergyman, catechizing a Sunday school, when comparing himself—the pastor of the church—to a shepherd and his congregation to the sheep, put the following question to the children:

"What does the shepherd do for the sheep?"

A small boy in the front row piped out:

"Shears them!"

A Double Loss.

In the village of Pershore a woman committed suicide by hanging herself to an apple tree. At the funeral a neighbor, noticing the sad appearance of the husband, consoled him by saying that he had met with a terrible loss.

"Yes," said the husband, heaving a sigh. "She must have kicked like thunder to shake off six bushels of green apples that would have been worth a crown a bushel when they got ripe."

"Keep On Trying."

A little girl who had a hen-banana presented to her was disappointed at the smallness of the first egg laid by the bird. Her ideal egg was that of the ostrich, a specimen of which was on a table in the drawing room. One day the ostrich egg was missing from its accustomed place. It was subsequently found near the spot where the bantam nested, and on it was stuck a piece of paper with the words:

"Something like this, please! Keep on trying."

Forgot the Password!

An old cavalry horse was in the shafts, and the officer was in a hurry. Taking the reins from the driver, he shouted "Charge!" and away the animal galloped, stopping dead when he reached the barracks at the word "Halt!"

The next morning an Englishman wanted to catch the boat from the quay, and the driver said:

"Shure, your honor, there ain't a horse in ould Ireland who can go so fast!"

He cracked his whip and shouted "Charge!" and away the horse went.

Nearing the quay, Pat yelled: "Jump, for heaven's sake! I've forgotten the password!"

Moved by an impulse he could not resist, he suddenly kissed her.

"Oh, Herbert!" she exclaimed, "that's not right."

"I'm sorry, Helen," replied Herbert humbly; "I did the best I knew how. Won't you show me the proper way?"

During a football match in the north a spectator persisted in making loud remarks about the conduct of the referee. At last the official went up to him and said:

"Look here, my man, I've been watching you for about the last fifteen minutes!"

"Ah thowt so." came the scathing reply—"Ah thowt so! Ah knew varry weel tha' wasn't watching t' game!"

Hostess (gushingly): They tell me, doctor, you are a perfect lady-killer.

Doctor (modestly): I assure you, my dear madam, I make no distinction whatever between the sexes.

The young man who sat next to a demure young thing at the supper table found himself at a loss for words. Suddenly his thoughts flew to picture theatres.

"Are you found of films?" he asked.

"As a general thing, yes," she answered, prettily; and before he could follow up the subject she added, hastily, "but not tonight, thank you. It is rather late. A little jelly will be sufficient."

Two experienced anglers went fishing one day. One sat down on the pier, while the other stood. Just before beginning operations they made a wager with each other as to who would make the bigger catch of fish.

They had been fishing for about half an hour with little or no success, when John, who was standing, lost his balance and fell off the pier.

As he went headlong past Dick, the latter gave a yell and said;

"Hi, John, if you are goin' to dive for 'em the bet's off!"

Condolences.

Mrs. Hen was in tears; one of her little ones had been sacrificed to make a repast for a visiting clergyman.

"Cheer up, madam," said the rooster, comfortingly. "You should rejoice that your son is entering the ministry. He was poorly qualified for a lay member, anyhow."

Why He Was Afraid.

Tram car conductor (to countryman): "If you saw him picking the gentleman's pocket, why didn't you interfere, instead of letting him get away?"

Countryman: "I saw that sign up there, 'Beware of pickpockets,' an', b'gosh, I was afraid ta."

"How's the family?" a fond parent was asked.

"Well, my children are at a difficult age now."

"Difficult? Why, they've all passed the measles and teething stage, have they not?"

"Long ago. But you don't know a father's troubles. My children are at the age where, if I use slang, my wife says I'm setting a bad example, and if I speak correctly, the kids think I'm a back number. Which would you do?"

"It's lucky I should meet you, Smith. There's a little bill you owe Tinkins, the tailor; he's commissioned me to collect it."

"Has he, old man? Well, I'm glad you've got a permanent job at last."

His Supposition.

"A couple," said Mrs. Simpkins, "got married a few days ago, after a courtship which had lasted fifty years."

"I suppose," replied Mr. Simpkins, "the poor old man had become too feeble to hold out any longer."

Why He Knew.

A Christian Scientist found a small boy sitting under an apple tree troubled up with pain.

"I ate some green apples," moaned the boy, "and, oh, how I do ache!"

"You don't ache," answered the C.S., "you only think so."

"That's all right," said the boy; "you may think so, but I've got inside information."

No Place for Poets.

"Didn't Oliver Goldsmith once live here?" asked the tourist.

"I don't remember the name," said the janitor. "Who was the gent?"

"He was a poet."

"Then it's hardly likely that he ever lived here, sir. We always demand the rent in advance."

A correspondent of a London paper, recalling an early visit of Sir Herbert Wife of a dentist who had been to call. Dining with Bishop Weldon, Dean of Manchester, Sir Herbert remarked that the place had not come up to his expectations.

"Do you know," he said, "I expected to encounter seventy odours as I approached your town, and I could only distinguish sixty-nine."

"Ah, replied the Bishop, "you missed the odour of sanctity."

A gentleman who had been spending a holiday at a Scottish seaside village noted for its golf-links, asked one of the caddies if he got much carrying in the winter time.

"Nae, sir, nae," replied the caddie. "There's nae carrying in the winter time. Ye see, it's this way. If it's no sna', it's frost; if it's no frost it's sna'; if it's neither sna' nor frost, it's rain; if it's no rain, it's wind; an' if it's a fine day, it's the Sawbath!"

A gentleman who had the misfortune to lose his nose in a shooting accident had occasion daily, on his way to business in Dublin, to pass an old beggar-woman, who invariably saluted him with the good natured, but, to him, incomprehensible prayer, "Hiven preserve your honor's eyesight."

The gentleman, after vainly endeavoring to suggest to himself a satisfactory explanation of the curious wish, one day put it to the old woman.

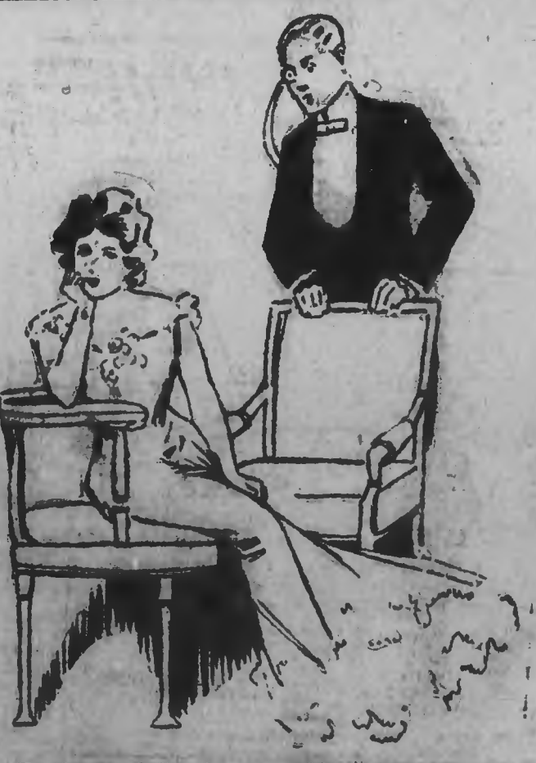
"Why do you desire my eyesight preserved? There is nothing the matter with it."

"Well, your honor," replied the beggar-woman, "it will be a bad thing for you if ever your eyesight gets worse, for ye'll have nothing to rest yer specs, tackes on."

His Teeth.

"Well, did he pay you?" asked the Tree to Manchester, talks this story, for a full set of false teeth that he had made for a man almost a year before.

"Pay me?" growled the dentist. "Not only did he refuse to pay me, but he actually had the effrontery to gnash at me—with my teeth!"



Mrs. "Suppose, darling, that some wealthy old joker on the edge of the grave should want to marry you—would you chuck me over?"

Hus. "Not necessarily; but you might have to wait a year or two."

In a certain local store a lusty-lunged auctioneer was holding forth in flowing terms on the virtues of a particular brand of cigars he was endeavoring to induce his audience to purchase.

Holding up a box of cigars, he shouted, "You can't get better, gentlemen, I don't care where you go, you can't get better."

"No," came a cynical voice from the back of the crowd, "you can't. I smoked one last week, and I'm not better yet."

"Ye'll get anither in the mornin'," About five minutes elapsed, and then Dugald suddenly exclaimed:—

"Ye'd better let me hae the ither noo, Donald: we hear o' sae mony sudden deaths nooadays."

An Englishman touring thru the remote parts of Ireland was caught in a rainstorm, and was obliged to take shelter in a cottage, where, to his astonishment, he saw several holes in the roof, which let in the torrential rain.

"Why don't you mend those holes?" he inquired.

"Wud you have me go out and mend them in this weather?" inquired Pat.

"No, you could do it when it's fine."

"Shure, yer honor," was the reply, "there's no need to do it then!"

Fare: "But, my good man, it's barely a mile as the crow flies!"

Driver: "That ain't nothing ter go by! This 'ere's a cab, not a airyplane!"

Mrs. Eve: "Ah, what a change one little woman can make in a man's life!"

Mr. Wye: "Yes; and by Gestiga, what a heap of change she requires while doing it!"

"Ten times has passed," said the orator, haughtily, "when any man can hide himself behind a woman's petticoats."

"Yes," said the cynic. "Those X-ray shows have stopped that."

WORTHY OF THE HONOR.

Grantham (staying in the country): "Do you always lift your hat to your cook when you leave the house?"

Trowther: "Not always; but, my dear fellow, that one has consented to stay with us for a whole week."

Not Quite.

In an asylum two worthies named Sandie and Tam formed a plan to make their escape. Sandie says to Tam:

"Bend doon and I'll get on your back, and get on the tap o' the wall and haul you up."

Sandie gets on the top of the wall and slides down the other side, saying:

"Tam, I think you'll be better to stay another fortnicht, for you're no near sane yet."

She Knew.

A young lady who was going out to New Zealand to get married went to a West End dressmaker for her trousseau. The dressmaker suggested a warm one.

The young lady asked why, seeing that the climate of New Zealand is a beautifully mild one.

The dressmaker replied:

"I assure you, madam, you are mistaken, for that is where the frozen meat comes from."

Jones: "If Mr. Oldboy makes any such assertion I will denounce him as a liar."

President: "Mr. Jones, I call you to order. Our bylaws do not allow you [illegible] far."

Jones: "Then I call Mr. Oldboy a [illegible] as it is permitted by the bylaws of this association."

"Look here, Mr. Editor," exclaimed an irate caller, "you referred to me yesterday as a reformed drunkard. You must apologize, or I'll sue your paper for libel."

"Very well, sir," replied the editor. "I'll retract the statement cheerfully. I'll say you haven't reformed."

An open-air orator once received this poser.

"I tell you, gentlemen," he exclaimed—"and the experience of a lifetime confirms my statement—that if you want a thing well done you must do it yourself!"

How about getting your hair cut?" asked a man in the crowd.

Mabel (discussing fiance): "He is the most upright, high-minded, honorable fellow in the world."

Maud: "Goodness, my dear, you'll starve to death."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

WHEN THE BARRIER WAS SHATTERED

"Dearie," said Mr. Lyons at dinner, "I won't be able to stay at home to-night. I have to work at the office and I won't be home until late. Do you think it safe to leave Bobby alone while you are at the ball?"

Mrs. Lyons looked up quickly at her husband.

"Why, George," she said, "you do not mean that I must stay at home, do you?"

"Yes," he said determinedly. "You know the accidents that are happening every day because little children are left at home alone. We don't want anything like that to happen to us, do we?"

"No," answered Mrs. Lyons carelessly, "but he has always been left alone; why shouldn't I leave him to-night? There hasn't been any harm come yet."

"Yes, dear, but it is never too late for harm to be done," he replied; and looking across the table at his wife he saw her lip quiver and a pleading look come into her eyes.

"But Mrs. Hamilton pleaded so in her invitation for me to come that it would not be right for me to decline now," she pleaded. "Just to-night, dear, can't I?"

They had risen from the table now, and as Mr. Lyons saw the pleading in her eyes he caught her up in his arms saying: "Why, you dear wifie, of course you may go. I didn't mean anything by it."

"Oh, you darling George," she said, "I knew you didn't mean it." And she threw her arms about his neck and kissed him.

Two minutes later she was undressing her six-year-old Bobby. He had large blue eyes, a round, robust face and cheeks indented by the deepest of dimples. His head was one mass of shining golden ringlets.

Mrs. Lyons tucked him into bed, and left the room without even kissing him good-night.

Fifteen minutes later she was being whisked away in her automobile toward the dance hall.

Mr. Lyons on his way to the office wondered how his wife could neglect such a beautiful child. But then she had neglected it ever since it had come.

In the meantime, while Bobby was enjoying himself with his teddy bear there was a snapping sound in the fire place and three live coals fell on the carpeted floor. The child, little knowing what danger was in store for him, played with his fuzzy conmpanion for a long time.

An hour passed before Bobby was aware of a choking sensation. The room was filled with smoke and flames were creeping along the floor. The child sprang from his bed, calling for mother, but she was far from hearing his anguished cries. He ran from room to room sobbing and screaming but still no help came to the little innocent.

By this time the fire was gaining rapid headway, and the alarm had been sent in. A great crowd had already gathered about the flaming building.

In the excitement of it all no one noticed the little figure of Bobby creeping from the back of the house into the street. He was too frightened to cry out or scream, but ran down the street, fate only knew where.

Suddenly he tripped and fell, striking his head on the stone pavement with such force that it rendered him unconscious.

He was hurried to the hospital, where the deep, angry gash on his forehead was bound up.

In the corridor the doctor was talking to the nurse. "He will recover," he said, "but he has completely lost his memory. He does not know the least thing about his parents. Why, he doesn't even know his name."

"What will we do about it?" asked the nurse.

"Why send him to the Little Wanderers' Home," replied the doctor. And the question was settled there.

. . . . . .

Fifteen years later the scene changes to a dark stormy night in a little vilage called Plainville.

Hovering about a little isolated farm house is an aeroplane. The propellor stops, and the bird-like structure totters and then flutters to the ground.

Inside the farmhouse sits an elderly woman, gazing sadly at the photograph of a curly headed child. In spite of the many years of toil and hardship she has not changed much since the night that she left the child to go to the ball. Only, of course, she was not half so happy. That bright, happy look had faded from her eyes and was replaced by a sad, longing expresion.

She was broken from her reverie by a sudden knock at the door. Startled, she crossed the room and then opened the door. There in the darkness stood a tall, handsome, athletic young man, scarcely 21 years of age.

"Good evening," he said, "could you offer me a place of shelter to-night? Something has happened to my aeroplane and I cannot fix it until morning comes."

"Why, of course," she replied. "Come in."

As they entered the lighted room, they looked at each other strangely. How familiar her face seemed to him! Where had he seen that face before?

He removed his aviator's cap, revealing a mass of golden, waving hair and as he smiled at her his smoothly shaven cheeks became indented by deep dimples! How he reminded her of Bobby!

His deep blue eyes fell upon the photograph and she saw his inquiring look in them.

"That is the picture of my son," she said quiveringly; "shall I tell you about him?"

But without waiting for his answer she began:

"He was six years old when it happened. I had gone to the ball, oh, that wretched ball, leaving his alone, regardless of the warning words of my dear husband. While I was enjoying myself someone told me that the house was on fire. I ran from the ball room and was soon to my burning home. My child was up there in those horrid flames being burned to death! As I jumped from my auto I beheld my husband going into the burning building to rescue Bobby. I waited for his return but alas! he never came out of that flaming structure. The flames had devoured him, and my darling Bobby. Oh, Bobby, Bobby," sobbingly, "why did I do it? Oh, why? Oh, my dear Bobby!" Here she stopped, unable to go on.

All this time she hadn't seen the puzzled expresion on the young man's face. He passed his hand over his forehead. What was she saying? Bobby! Bobby! How familiar, and yet how strange!

"W-what is your name?" he stammered.

"Mrs. Lyons," she answered, amid her sobs.

Lyons! Bobby Lyons! In a moment the barrier was shattered to splinters. He remembered! That was his name!

"My mother!" he exclaimed.

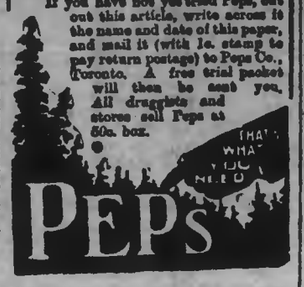
"What do you mean?" she asked, gaspingly.

And then, as he held his arms out to her she saw on his wrist a birthmark in the shape of an "L."

Another moment and they were locked in each other's arms.

"My son," she said, "my long lost Bobby!"

LOOK!
If you were told of a new discovery for the treatment of coughs, colds and bronchitis, as certain in its action on all chest troubles as anti-toxin is on diphtheria, or vaccination on small-pox, wouldn't you feel like giving it a trial? Especially if you could try it for fifty cents!
Peps is the discovery!
Peps are little tablets, neatly wrapped in air and germ-proof silver foil. They contain certain medicinal ingredients, which, when placed upon the tongue, immediately turn into vapour, and are at once breathed down the air passages to the lungs. On their journey, they soothe the inflamed and irritated membranes of the bronchial tubes, the delicate walls of the air passages, and finally enter and carry relief and healing to the capillaries and tiny air cells in the lungs.
In a word, while no liquid or solid can get to the lungs and air passages, these Peps fumes get there direct, and at once commence their work of healing.
Peps are entirely distinct from the old fashioned liquid cough cures, which are merely swallowed into the stomach, and never reach the lungs. Peps treatment of coughs and colds is direct treatment.
If you have not yet tried Peps, cut out this article, write across it the name and date of this paper, and mail it (with 1c. stamp to pay return postage) to Peps Co., Toronto. A free trial packet will then be sent you. All druggists and stores sell Peps at 50c. box.



WEAKNESS AND PALPITATION OF THE HEART.

When the heart begins to beat irregularly, palpitates and throbs, skips beats, and sometimes seems to almost stop, it causes great anxiety and alarm.

Many people become weak, worn and miserable, and are unable to attend to either social, business or household duties.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are a specific for all weakness and heart disorders, and are recommended by us with the greatest of confidence that they will do what we claim for them.

Mrs. George Burridge, Coboconk, Ont., writes:—"Just a few lines to let you know what Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have done for me. I have been troubled with weakness and palpitation of the heart. I tried many remedies but got none to answer my case like your pills did. I can recommend them highly to all with heart or nerve trouble."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

BOY'S MIND TOPSY-TURVY.

A boy with an inverted brain, presenting many similarities to the case reported in America, has recently been discovered at a Durham, England, school. He sees everything upside down, writes right to left, inverts letters and figures, and copies objects the wrong way.

The boy's teachers says that not only does he write upside down, but he also sees upside down. For instance, if he has to write a small "h" the result is a "y" written backward; that is to say, he begins to form the letter at the tail end and works backward. The same operation takes place when he frames such letters as "u" or "m," the effect being that the letters are written as "n" or "w" respectively.

His mind acts in a similar topsy-turvy manner when he is set to copy a figure on an outline drawing. His reading, however, is not affected by his brain peculiarity. Although it is evident that he sees the letters upside down, they make apparently the same impression upon his mind as upon the mind of an ordinary boy. He can read words with as much facility as any other child of the same age just learning to read, write or copy blackboard drawings."

Every effort has been made to alter his abnormal methods, but without success. The experts who examined the American boy came to the conclusion that his mind and sight were as a camera obscura, in which everything is projected upside down, and that is thought the explanation in the Durham case.

CHARGED WITH CRIME

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 21.—Despite the fact that Edward E. Fiske, man about town and householder of Burlingame, a fashionable suburb, established Tuesday night what seemed a satisfactory alibi, a Southern Pacific agent left Wednesday for Martinez, Costa County, to swear out a warrant charging that Fiske is the bandit who last Friday night robbed five passengers and five trainmen in the rear pullman of the San Francisco Limited near Port Costa.

Fiske will then be taken from the city jail where he is still held as a suspect, to Port Costa, where a positive identification by passengers and trainmen will be sought.

Conductor Spotted Him.

Fiske is a fashionably dressed, easy spoken, assured young man of 34. He was arrested Tuesday night as he stepped into the side entrance of a hotel where detectives were waiting for him.

Previously Conductor Watson of the San Francisco Limited, had picked him out of a crowd as the man who had robbed the train. Fiske was able to produce signed checks showing that he had occupied a private room in a restaurant from 3 o'clock Friday afternoon until 10 o'clock that night.

Clerks Didn't Know Him.

Three mail clerks of the Shore Line Limited, who were cowed at the pistol point last Monday night, while a masked highwayman went through the mail, were unable to identify Fiske. His wife says he spent that evening at home.

Fiske said his father was W. J. Fiske, a retired shoe manufacturer, of Detroit. For seven years he was president of a perfumery company in Detroit.

Fiske was released Wednesday night, pending further enquiries.

STATE SHOULD CONTROL.

Gothenburg Liquor System Recommended For Quebec.

QUEBEC, Nov. 22.—In a sixty page report by the license commissioners, Hon. Judges H. G. Carroll, A. G. Cross and Auguste Tessier, who have been investigating hotel conditions and problems throughout the province for several months, the following recommendations are made:

1. The gradual elimination of refreshment rooms, counters and bars and the substitution of cafes, European style where there are tables and chairs.

2. The reduction of the number of hotel licenses at Montreal to 350 and those in Quebec to 50.

3. The reduction of the same number of retail licenses.

4. The separation of the grocery business from that of the retail liquor trade.

5. The opening of all places where liquor is sold in Montreal and Quebec at 7.30 a.m.

6. The trial of the Gothenburg and Bergen systems in all cities of more than 4,000 population. By these systems the attraction of profit is taken away from the individual by contributing all profit on the business to the state and municipalities.

7. The execution of the new law by two license commissioners, one at Montreal and the other at Quebec.

8. The strict maintenance of the new law for a period of at least five years so as to allow of a complete trial.

The report is now before the House for consideration.

Speaking of prohibition, the commissioners declare that the evidence shows that in immense majority of the population of the province are opposed thereto. Experience has convinced them that prohibition would be no more successful in the larger towns here than elsewhere. The commissioners are in favor of the Gothenburg and Bergen systems, which are practiced in several localities in Norway and Sweden.

A Smooth, White Skin That Defies Weather

(From The Woman Beautiful)

During the coming months of biting winds and intense cold, you who would keep your skins smooth, white and velvety, should turn your attention to mercolised wax. Nothing else will so effectively remove a chapped, roughened or discoloured surface. By gradually absorbing the weather-beaten cuticle, the complexion is kept in perfect condition, and even the beauty of expression appears more pronounced. If your skin be sluggish, pimply, freckled, coarse, sallow or overred, why not shed it? One ounce of ordinary mercolised wax, to be had at any druggist's, will completely transform the most unsightly complexion in less than a fortnight. Use the wax lightly, like cold cream, washing it off mornings.

If weather, age or poor health has marred your face with wrinkles, here's good news. You can quickly remove every line by using a harmless, refreshing face lotion prepared by dissolving 1 oz. powdered saxolite in ½ pt. witch hazel. The firmer, smoother skin, the more youthful appearance, even after one application, will astonish you.

TO CARE FOR CHILDREN.

Child Welfare Bureau Favored By Women's Institutes.

TORONTO, Nov. 22.—At the close of an address at the meeting of the Women's Institutes of Ontario, yesterday afternoon by Miss E. J. Guest of Ontario, on "The Greatest Movement of the time," it was resolved to petition the Government for the establishment of a child welfare bureau, which would be under the direction of a body of experts, who would be ready to direct and to give information upon all that concerns the interest of the child, Canada's greatest asset. The resolution was carried by the unanimous standing vote of the 700 delegates present, representing the 25,000 members of the Women's Institutes of the province.

In her address Miss Guest stated that the teachers and mothers of Belleville, the city she represented, had got together to study the child. At the end of their deliberations they had found themselves dissatisfied with condition. Toronto was not, in the opinion of the speaker, the child's Eldorado. "Toronto was not planned for the children," was one of her statements, and even its playgrounds would, she thought, scarcely satisfy its needs. The decay of a country does not come from lack of naval armaments.

An address on the duties of the public health officer and on tuberculosis was given by Dr. Amyot. It is the medical officer of health, and not the physician in charge of the patient, whose duty it is to define the length of time a house shall be in quarantine for a contagious disease.

Warm Weather Delays Inquiry.

REGINA, Sask., Nov. 22.—Unless the thermometer drops 30 or 40 degrees within the next week the Legislative committee on privileges and elections may be forced to delay for some time its projected inquiry into the Cumberland election before progress can be made. To Search For Bodies.

SARNIA, Nov. 22.—Capt. The distance from here to Goderich as the crow flies is sixty miles, and though 76 years old, Captain Gabb will be forced to cover 80 miles before he arrives. He has a contract with the Lake Carriers' Association, by which he will be paid $10 for each body that he locates along the shore.

Bramwell's Next Move.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—If Bramwell Booth and Ballington Booth, brothers estranged for seventeen years, are to meet in this city, the next move must come from Bramwell leader of the Salvation Army. This was the gist of a statement issued yesterday by Ballington Booth, head of the Volunteers of America. He had not received the letter his brother said he had written him, Ballington explained.

Your blood makes you what you are. The men and women who forge ahead are those with pure blood and pure faces.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers will make you happy because your face will be a welcome sight not only to yourself when you look into the glass, but to everybody else who knows you and talks to you.

LAXATIVE FOR OLD PEOPLE—"CASCARETS"

Salts, Calomel and Pills Act on Liver and Bowels Like Pepper Acts in Nostrils—Danger!

Get a 10-cent box now.

Most old people must give to the bowels some regular help, else they suffer from constipation. The condition is perfectly natural. It is just as natural as it is for old people to walk slowly. For age is never so active as youth. The muscles are less elastic. And the bowels are muscles.

So all old people need Cascarets. One might as well refuse to aid weak eyes with glasses as to neglect this gentle aid to weak bowels. The bowels must be kept active. This is important at all ages, but never so much as at fifty.

Age is not a time for harsh physics. Youth may occasionally whip the bowels into activity. But a lash can't be used every day. What the bowels of the old need is a gentle and natural tonic. One that can be constantly used without harm. The only such tonic is Cascarets, and they cost only 10 cents per box at any drug store. They work while you sleep.

WANTED AT THE SOO.

Joseph La Rue Arrested In Toronto Faces Charge of Murder.

TORONTO, Nov. 22.—Joseph La Rue, a French-Canadian, sat for a few moments last evening in the office while arrangements were under completion for his removal to the Soo. He is charged with murder and will face in addition the charge of jail-breaking, having decamped suddenly in that manner early in the spring.

La Rue was the subject of a special reward proclamation issued by the Ontario Government months ago. Following his escape the provincial officers were cleverly evaded and the fugitive made his way across the line.

Two Detroit detectives on the lookout for suspicious characters recognized La Rue in a moving picture theatre, where he was posing as a snake-charmer and he was arrested at the close of the performance. Special extradition arrangements were made and Provincial Officer Foster took him in charge.

The charge on which he is held concerns the murder of his wife while living in the Soo region.

Big Seizure of Furs.

LUCKNOW, Ont., Nov. 22.—What proved to be a large haul of furs was executed yesterday by Provincial Deputy Game Warden W. B. Elliott, accompanied by Provincial Constable Phippen, who visited the fur dealers here and secured one hundred and sixty-four pelts on the premises of Harry Goodman, a Hebrew. The goods were at once seized and removed. The hearing will be before R. Graham, J.P., on Thursday next at Lucknow. The furs were out of season.

WHAT CURES ECZEMA?

We have had so many inquiries lately regarding Eczema and other skin diseases, that we are glad to make our answer public. After careful investigation we have found that a simple wash of Oil of Wintergreen, as compounded in D.D.D. Prescription as made in the D.D.D. Laboratories of Toronto, can be relied upon. We would not make this statement to our patrons, friends and neighbours unless we were sure of it—and although there are many so-called Eczema remedies sold, we ourselves unhesitatingly recommend D.D.D. Prescription.

Too Much For the School.

Not long ago Samuel G. Blythe, the magazine writer, and Otto Carmichael, the late Washington newspaper correspondent, were driving about Muncie, Carmichael's home town, when the latter expressed a desire to see the schoolhouse where he received his first impressions along educational lines. So the nose of the automobile was pointed southward, and a few miles out of Muncie they arrived at the old schoolhouse, a one room brick structure, dilapidated and fast falling into decay, having been abandoned many years ago in favor of the modern "consolidated" schools. "That," said Carmichael, his voice trembling with emotion at sight of the old building, "is where my education began. How many memories of happy childhood days it recalls!"

"Yes, I see," remarked Blythe dryly, letting his eyes wander over the doors and windows that were completely boarded up; "they educated you and then shut up shop."

Electricians and Soft Hats.

Every trade exercises some effect on the dress of its votaries. The locomotive engineer wears a cap and overalls the baker a white skull cap, the butcher a long white apron and straw sleeves, and the cook and the waiter each has his distinctive garb. Electricians wear soft hats, and the following account from the Electrical World gives the reason why: A substation foreman on an electric line in northern Indiana was explaining the details of some work to his men in a recently completed substation. In pointing out a joint in the high tension wiring, hat in hand, the rim of the derby came into contact with live wires. A circuit was completed from the high tension line through the small steel wire in the rim of the hat and through the man's body to the ground, thereby causing a shock which proved fatal. Soft hats have no metal wire in them, and that is why they are so popular with electricians.

IF BACK HURTS BEGIN ON SALTS

Flush Your Kidneys Occasionally If you eat meat regularly

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which clogs the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

Ehrlich and His Books.

Nobody ever dares disturb the systematic chaos of Professor Ehrlich's library. Once he lent a man some books and received others in return.

One day, long afterward, Ehrlich's books came back with a note from his friend, saying he had married, moved and cleaned up his library. Ehrlich replied: "I congratulate you on your marriage and thank you for sending back my books, but if you think that because you have moved and got married I am going to clear up my library and find your books, you are very much mistaken."—"Men Around the Kaiser."

ALD. GILLESPIE AND ALD. BULLER AS CANDIDATES

In the Event of Mayor Bradburn Being Opposed in Which Connection Ald. Buller Has Been Mentioned, Ald. Gillespie Will Line up in the Field.

MAYOR WILL NOT FIGHT

There are significant indications that Peterborough's Mayor for 1914 will be either Alderman Geo. A. Gillespie or Alderman Wm. Buller.

It has been generally understood and Alderman Buller has himself hinted that he would be a candidate for the first honours of the city during the coming year. To an Examiner reporter he stated recently that there would be developments in a short time, and on the street he has been mentioned as a contestant for the office.

Mayor Bradburn has intimated that he has expected a contest this year, and in that event he will not be an aspirant for a third term. If the position were offered him by acclamation he would accept it, but otherwise he would not offer himself for election.

Alderman Gillespie's name has been mentioned more or less in the event of there being a contest, and to The Examiner he stated this morning that he was satisfied to leave the city's reins in the hands of Mayor Bradburn for another year, but it had been suggested to him that there would likely be a candidate other than Mayor Bradburn, and if that proves to be the case he will follow the expressed wishes of his friends and enter the field.

That is the situation as it is at present, and a contest is regarded as being practically assured.

MRS. (DR.) ROBERTSON'S BROTHER IS BURIED

A despatch from St. Catharines recently announced the death of Thos. Taylor, a former prominent business man of Toronto, some of whose relatives are well known in Peterborough. He was the son of the late Thos. Taylor, original proprietor of the Don Paper Mills, Toronto, and was a conspicuous figure in commercial and financial sphere in the Queen City. He passed away on Tuesday night, at Homer, where he embarked in the fruit growing industry a few years ago. He was a former president of the Kew Beach Bowling Club, of Toronto, and was an active member of the St. Catharine's Club since moving to that vicinity. Miss Taylor, of Spadina Road, Toronto, and a frequent visitor to Peterborough, is a sister of the deceased, as is also Mrs. (Dr.) A. J. Robertson, McDonnel street, to whom The Examiner and their numerous friends extend cordial sympathy in their bereavement. The funeral was held on Friday.

MODERN SYSTEM OF ILLUMINATION

Has Been Installed by the Roy Studio—An Epigram That Was Given Material Significance

"Victory is swift and sure to those who cultivate the habit of using modern business methods."

This remark originated with Mr. J. Joyce Broderick, designate Consul to Amsterdam, Holland, during the course of an address which he delivered at the Peterborough Canadian Club banquet on Wednesday evening. The above epigram was given material significance at the conclusion of the banquet, when Mr. Broderick visited the Roy Studio, where his likeness was perpetuated by means of the most modern system of artificial lighting known to the photographic art.

The electrical system of illumination which has been installed by the Roy Studio, is the only one of its kind in America. It obviates the necessity of using flashlight powders or arc lights. The former invariably endow the subject with a startled expression, while with the latter, it is almost impossible to obtain a steady diffused light, which is so esential to successful photography. These difficulties have been entirely overcome by the introduction of a special system of electrical lighting. The system, which has been evolved after years of experiment, represents a triumph in the electrical world.

The work is guaranteed to be as good as, if not superior to, daylight photography. Sittings can be made at night equally as well as in the daytime. This should prove a boon to industrial workers who are unable to visit the studio in the day time. It will also provide a new and unique use for electrical power generated by the Hydro-Electric system, which is being installed by the city at the present time. The light created by the system is equal to three thousand candle-power.

Back of all this stands the enviable reputation of the Roy Studio.

MARKET WAS WELL ATTENDED

The fine weather was largely responsible for a fairly large produce market. The farmers flocked in early and stayed late. Prices were practically unchanged.

Eggs sold at 40 cents a dozen while a large quantity of butter realized 30 cents a pound. A plentiful supply of fowl was offered at the usual prices.

Potatoes sold as high as $1.25 a bag.

LARGE ORDERS RECEIVED BY LOCAL COMPANY

William Hamilton Manufacturing Company Will Supply Turbines For Charlton-Englehart Power Company

INDUSTRIAL PROGRESS

Reports received from various parts of the Dominion concerning industrial progress, would indicate the approach of a period of seasonal slackness.

So far Peterborough has had the good fortune to escape industrial inertia, and there is every reason to believe that such a condition will continue throughout the winter months. A few local industries have dispensed with a number of hands, due to the advent of stocktaking period and other minor causes common to this season of the year.

The insufficiency of the water power along the Otonabee River has also been responsible for a reduction in the output of manufactured products. The copious rains of the past few days has served to mitigate this difficulty to a large extent.

Manufacturers report that orders are well above the average. It is only a few days ago that the William Hamilton Manufacturing Company received a large order for castings from the Ford Motor Car Company of Walkerville, Ont. The castings in question constitute flywheels to be used in the construction of Ford motor cars. It is estimated that a year will be consumed in the completion of this contract. The same company shipped to Vancouver on Thursday of this week, two carloads of large metal tanks. A carload of metal piping was also shipped to Bassano, Alberta, where it will be used in the construction of a garbage incinerator by the Reid Incinerator Company of Toronto. This same company is responsible for the installation of a similar incinerator in Peterborough.

A large contract has been received by the William Hamilton Company from the Charlton-Engelhart Power Company, Ontario, so that in a few months water wheels and other machinery common to a generating station, and manufactured in Peterborough, will be doing service in supplying electrical energy to the growing towns of Charlton and Engelhart, which are located in the heart of the great clay belt of New Ontario.

The company is also supplying the ornamental iron standards for the city's municipal lighting system.

The number of men employed in the moulding shop of the William Hamilton Company has been doubled within the last two months.

LARKINS ASKS LABOUR MEN TO LEAVE LEADERS

Urges That the Rank and File Revolt and Adopt a Campaign of Militant Tactics

ANOTHER MANIFESTO

Special Wire to The Examiner.

LONDON, ENG., Nov. 22.—(Special cable.)—James Larkin, the picturesque and vehement Dublin labour leader, is out to-day with another manifesto urging Trades Unionists to revolt from their leader and enlist under his banner of aggressive and militant tactics. He demands that the rank and file of labour men shall force their officials to action. His appeal for support is being scattered broadcast to-day in all the industries of England, Ireland and Scotland. It is having great disturbing results too, for there are many labour Unionists unsatisfied with their present leadership. Labour meetings are being held in a hundred places to-day by Larkin supporters and are well attended. But the English Unionist is esentially cautious and hesitates to risk all and paralize British industry, to aid Dublin as Larkin demands. By many English labour leaders Larkin is to-day denounced as a dangerous revolutionary. Nevertheless, thousands of women and some of the poorer classes of men are wearing Larkin's red revolutionary colours.

ELM STREET HABITATION IS CONDEMNED

By Sanitary Inspector Spence—Family of Four Living in One Room.

A CIVIC "BLOT"

An Elm Street habitation has been condemned by the Sanitary Inspector Spence. The latter visited the neighbourhood yesterday and found conditions that were characterized by the Inspector as a "blot on the City." A family of four were living in one room, containing by actual measurement, seven hundred cubic feet of air space. The law distinctly states that a minimum of six hundred cubic feet of air space must be provided for each person. The family in question comprises father, mother and two infant children. The latter were crying when the Inspector arrived and the parent was at a loss to determine the cause. The Inspector states that the infants were in a fair way to be poisoned by the foul atmosphere.

Five Dollars a Month.

The building, in its original form, is believed to have been intended for a shed or stable. One small window, about 18 inches square, constituted the only avenue by which daylight could find its way into the room. The tenants claim that they were paying five dollars a month for the little one-room dwelling.

The Inspector notified the landlord of his intention to have the premises closed up, on the grounds that they were unfit for human habitation.

"The Fighting Greek," whose bout with Artie Simmons at the Brock St. Rink on Monday night is attracting much attention.

Tommy Pappas, "The Fighting Greek," who meets Artie Simmons in the feature bout of the programme at Brock Street Rink on Monday night, is in great shape and confident of stopping the fast Detroit boy. It is the first time the two have clashed, but both have defeated Young Colesson and other good men, and they look to be evenly matched. It should be a battle royal between the two. In addition there are four other good bouts, and the programme is a classy one. Geo. Ayres is manager of the bouts.

NATIONAL HOTEL TAKEN OVER BY MR. G. N. GRAHAM

Will be Completely Remodelled and Made the Finest Hostelry in Peterborough—Ninety Rooms Will be Provided, Twenty With Baths

AN IMPORTANT CHANGE

Mr. George N. Graham has completed arrangements to take over, remodel and enlarge the National Hotel, making it the largest and most commodious of Peterborough hotels.

This announcement was made this morning, and it is understood that Mr. Graham will assume charge of his new location in a short time. The lease and good will has been secured from the General Trust and Guarantee Company, and alterations will be begun in the near future.

The plans call for extensive changes. Forty new rooms will be added, all of them provided with running water and twenty equiped with baths. In this respect Mr. Graham is catering directly to the comfort of the travelling public, among whom he has a host of friends.

Will Have Ninety Rooms.

This will give a total of ninety rooms, all of which will be put in first-class condition. The dining room will be moved from the present position to the east side of the house, and will receive special attention in its furnishings and appointments. The kitchen will be enlarged and will be provided with a new and complete equipment.

To Open Grill Room.

A grill room will be opened and is bound to be a feature of the hotel. The rotunda will receive considerable attention. It will be made commodious and furnished luxuriously. The bar will be moved to the location of the present dining room on the Charlotte Street side of the house.

Extra sample rooms will be provided, and with the present accommodation for travellers to show their samples, the National should make a strong appeal to the hundreds of commercial men who regularly visit Peterborough.

Finest in the City.

Mr. H. C. Winch, representing the Chamberlain Estate, told the Examiner to-day that a Toronto architect would have charge of the remodelling, and it was the intention to make the National the finest hotel in Peterborough. The alteration would be extensive, he said, but he did not care to give out the details until he had consulted the architect.

As former proprietor of the Oriental, Mr. Graham gained a country-wide reputation among the travelling public, and is personally acquainted with practically every traveller that comes into Peterborough. He states that he is determined to make the National thoroughly modern in every particular, to provide every comfort for his guests, and to make the dining room one of the most attractive features of the house.

Further details of this important transaction will be announced later, when the architect's report has been received. In the meantime, the public are assured that the City's hotel accommodation will receive a valuable acquisition in the reconstruction of what promises to be Peterborough's principal hotel.

MEMORY CURE FOR BLACKLISTERS

A Couple of Them Will Spend the Next Week in Jail

Joseph Reynolds was made a member of the blacklisted fraternity on the 22nd day of November, 1912. If he were at liberty to-day he could go out and get drunk without any interference from the law. Joe, however, made a mistake of a day, and his spree came yesterday. Now, yesterday he was on the blacklist, so that in police court this morning he was charged with being drunk while on the blacklist. He pleaded "guilty."

"Where did you get your liquor?" asked Chief Thompson.

"From a fellow named Paddy O'Shea of Lindsay," was Reynold's reply.

Reynolds said he met O'Shea at 6.10 o'clock last night, and O'Shea gave him a sealed $1 bottle, and part of another bottle of whiskey. He (Reynolds) did not pay O'Shea anything for the liquor.

"Do you remember meeting a fellow named Lowes last night?"

"No."

"Will you swear that Lowes didn't buy you the liquor"?

"Yes."

"Was Lowes with you at all last night?"

"No."

"Oh!" exploded the Chief. "He is not telling the truth and I can prove it. I wish you would remand him for a week, your Worship." So Reynolds will undergo the "memory cure" until next Friday.

Herbert Landry, another blacklister, admitted he had three drinks yesterday.

"Who gave you the drinks?" was the Chief's question.

"Some fellow I don't know. I got it going down Aylmer Street yesterday."

Not satisfied with this explanation, the Magistrate remanded Landry for a week.

Both Reynolds and Landry admitted their guilt and the lowest fine that can be imposed is $10.

Wm. Tierney appeared in court some days ago, charged with being drunk while on the blacklist. His case was adjourned to see how he would conduct himself. Since that day, his term on the backlist has expired. Last night he was gathered in drunk. He was fined $10 on the old charge this morning, and on the charge of being drunk he was allowed to go.

ADVOCATES PURCHASE OF LIGHT COMPANY

Examiner Special:

TORONTO, NOV. 22.—Manager H. H. Cousens, Manager of the Toronto Hydro Electric System, which is the end of the Ontario Provincial Hydro Commission, has this morning issued a lengthy report favouring the purchase of the Toronto Electric Light Company, at eight million dollars, and the amalgamation of that concern with the Hydro. The Toronto Electric Light Co. is dominated by Sir William MacKenzie, and it is proposed to take it over with the Toronto Railway Co. for a total of thirty million dollars if the ratepayers favour it on January 1st. Manager Cousens' report is another bouquet for those who favour the purchase and complete municipal ownership.

RECORD ENGLISH MAIL.

Majestic Had to Store Some of It in Empty Staterooms.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—A record consignment of mail from England arrived in New York on the Majestic yesterday. There were 5,802 sacks, weighing about 155 tons. Many sacks were stored in empty staterooms. The consignment is the first since November 14, the Mauretania having been prevented by bad weather, from taking on mail at Queenston November 9.

FAMILY VISITED BY MISFORTUNES

Death of Little William Huffman Follows List of Afflictions in the Huffman Family

William Osborne Huffman, infant son of Mr. Wm. T. Huffman, Queen Street, died this morning at the residence of his parents. He was only three weeks of age, and the parents will have the sincerest sympathy of their large number of friends.

During the past year, members of the Huffman family seem to have been singled out by fate, and have been unusually unfortunate. Mr Huffman, a little less than a year ago, had his leg taken off in an accident near Port Hope, while discharging his duties as brakesman. Only a few weeks ago his young daughter was knocked down and painfully injured by an automobile. Mrs. Huffman was very ill in the hospital for some weeks past, only being brought home yesterday, and early this morning her little son passed away.

This is an unusual case of a family being pursued by bad fortune, and in their recent bereavement, the shock of which will be doubly hard to bear owing to Mrs. Huffman's poor health. Mr. and Mrs. Huffman will have the fullest sympathy of the community.

MANITOBA SCHOOLS.

The assessment returns of Winnipeg show a school population of 27,000 in 1911 and of 29,000 in 1912. The public school registers show that in 1911 there were 11,000 children that did not attend school, and in 1912 the number of developing ignoramuses and degenerates was 12,000. Such a condition is a disgrace to a city of any country, not to speak of a Canadian city. Premier Roblin is responsible for this deplorable condition. Yet, when Mr. Samuels, Postmaster-General in the British Cabinet, on a recent visit, called attention to such conditions, the courtly knight, Sir Rodmond Roblin, called one of his Majesty's ministers, "a jelly-bag of an Englishman." Statesmanship of that kind can not be expected to recognise the value of popular education.

ADVERTISING CANADA.

Canada's governments, Canada's productiveness, Canada's capacity for giving ofreigners happy homes and an unsurpassed chance to succeed—to become land owners instead of serfs, have advertised this country etxensively. But it is probable that the greatest advertising given this country has been by hostile newspapers in the United States and European countries. These countries have become alarmed at the large drift of their best population to Canada, so their newspapers foolishly think that the best way to lessen or prevent emigration is to decry Canada. We are not alarmed, but recognize with thanks the compliment such a course implies—

We do not want to boast;
But, by jingo, if we do,
We've got the land, we grow the wheat,
And we'll have the people, too.

WINTER UNEMPLOYMENT.

Every winter, and probably more so this winter than others, there is a great deal of unemployment, due largely to the cessation of work that can only be carried on to advantage in open weather. This naturally creates something of inactivity in industrial establishments devoted to the supplying of materials for the work usually done in fine weather. The lack of employment necessarily creates hardship, for unfortunately all workingmen and their families are not like the bees and squirrels—they don't lay by a store for the winter of, possible, unemployment. Money that is spent in a hundred little unnecessary ways—on picture shows, picnics, pleasure jaunts, on holidays in the fruit season when the prudent housewife lays by her store of fruit—money spent in these ways or not spent judiciously—is wasted, and inevitably want, suffering and inconvenience result, if the income is cut off by unemployment. In some cities, some maangers of industries, instead of laying off hands, shorten the hours so that the income of employees is not entirely cut off. This is done in the Grand Trunk shops, Montreal, and is certainly a better, more considerate, and, possibly, more profitable way than wholesale discharge of employees. But in no way can we avoid a great deal of winter unemployment. The only way that its effects can be mitigated and certain privation and possible suffering staved off, is by working people, when they have steady employment in summer, providing some store against possible periods of idleness or other causes. This cannot be done in all cases; but it can be done in many, and the exceptions would be comparatively so few, that relief and assistance, such as we have to give every winter, would be so greatly lessened that they could be easily given without unduly and oppressively taxing the capacity and inclinations of the kind hearted.

SAVING THE GIRLS.

The address of the Californian policewoman naturally attracted great interest, for its subject had to do with a condition that is perilous to our social life and the integrity and happiness of the home. There are conditions in the life of a city of the size of Peterborough that favour the degradation of the level of our womanhood in many ways, and furnish recruits for the increasing army of loose women. If we could know of the wrecks of homes and the ruin of young girls that are perhaps occurring every day—or night—amongst us, we should probably be astounded.

As Mrs. Stebbins said in her address, the cause lies primarily in defective or careless home training. Many mothers have not a keen moral sense, nor sense of responsibility; and what responsibility they may feel is discharged in the easiest way. In this age of exaggerated democracy we have too much liberty for our children, too much impulse to seek amusement, instead if improving the mind by study or improving the morals by occupation. Nothing is so degenerative of character and morals as an idle, purposeless life, especially for the young.

We have these conditions, and in default of removing them we must deal with the results. We know what the results are. Our streets filled night after night with boys and girls allowed a liberty that is dangerous to both. We have a sort of curfew law; that was aimed no doubt at keeping boys and girls of minor age off the night streets, and presumably in their homes. But this law is defective in that it does not include practical provisions for effective enforcement, and is consequently a dead letter and worse, for it creates a false security and develops indifference. Of what avail is a law that is only monitory. All a policeman can do to enforce the law is to warn youthful loiterers on the streets and order them home. In the majority of cases, if not in all cases, the warning is disregarded—the place of loitering is simply changed to some place outside of police influence. We have only policemen to cover about one-tenth of the city area—the business district; while the outlying districts where the dangers to the young, especially girls, are infinitely greater than in the well and brightly-lighted business streets.

If we wish to deal effectively with the dangers that beset our young girls, if we consider that for the sake of themselves and society, they are worth saving, we must keep them off the streets at nights, especially the dimly lighted residence streets and outskirts, where the opportunities for their ruin are malevolently excellent. We must have these streets patrolled by policemen.

This need not be a great additional expense. There need not be many of them detailed for duty in the outlying parts of the city. The very knowledge that a policeman is on duty and liable to appear any moment will have a deterrent effect. And the law should provide that offenders should be placed under arrest and taken to their homes and the parents made accountable. Unless we do something of the kind we might as well abolish the curfew law—a law if properly amended so as to make it effective and reasonably well enforced, that would save hundreds of giddy, street-roaming girls from destruction by removing the temptation to, and the opportunities for, going astray.

And we don't need any policewoman. In every city and in every period we have, and have had, plenty of police women that didn't wear petticoats. Men policemen, of such a character as we have in Peterborough are good enough—if we have enough of them, and if they are placed properly.

The matter of saving our boys and girls from the dangers that roaming the streets at nights bring, does not call for sentimental hysterics and neurotic enthusiasm. Apart from the general work of improving home conditions and replacing lax ideals of moral obligations that exist in our state of society, in spite of the pulpit, the schools and the homes, what we have to do is to exercise a little practical common sense, treat the problem in a business way. Have a practical, common-sense, business-like curfew law passed; and provide practical common sense, business-like methods for its enforcement. These are what we need—we don't need lectures by women policemen or other kind of policemen. We want the law made right, and we want Chief Thompson given a few policemen to patrol the districts where the dangers that beset boys and girls under age in our night streets, is the greatest. We need to do something besides talk. The world is gasping under a flood of talk. Some definite, fruitful action is worth endless oceans of talk.

WHAT DID THE ELECTION MEAN?

It will not be forgotten how the victory in Macdonald was proclaimed an overwhelming vindication of the Borden Government. That a majority so large as 784 should be piled up for the Government's candidate in the first by-election contest in the West after the general elections of 1911 was pointed to as a crushing proof that the West was opposed to wider markets for its products. Now it is known, from the authoritative explanation given in court yesterday, that the majority was neither a vindication nor a proof of anything, but wholesale criminality of the election workers who swarmed in Macdonald.—Manitoba Free Press.

READING AND ITS PLEASURES

(BY F. M. DELA FOSSE)

BIOGRAPHY—PART IV.

Famous Biographies.

Opinions may differ as to the five or six greatest biographies in the language but there can be no question as to the claim of Boswell's Life of Samuel Johnson to first place. As Macaulay said in his celebrated essay, "Eclipse is first and the rest nowhere." So much, however, has been written about Dr. Johnson, not only by Boswell but by many of his contemporaries that it is unnecessary to dilate largely on the subject, for there can be very few indeed who are not more or less conversant with the character and career of the best known man in English literature. Johnson was a man of great worth, power and erudition, yet he is not indebted for his fame so much to his wonderful endowments as to the sycophancy and inquisitiveness of a man was the butt of all his circle and of the world at large Of Johnson's writings there is presumably very little beyond the lives of the Poets which will endure, but he will always hold an honoured place in literature as the compiler of the dictionary which bears his name and as the leader in that wonderful gathering of the talents that numbered among its choicest spirite Reynolds, Burke, Goldsmith and Garrick. There are not many books that one can read and reread from cover to cover with the same intense satisfaction and pleasure as Boswell's Life of Johnson, for it not only deals with one of the most interesting periods of English literature and one of the most attractive personalities of that period but it throws us into quite intimate association with many of its brightest and best minds. It would be as well, however for the reader who would wish to gain a fairly clear insight into the customs of the times, to study Macaulay's essay on Croker's edition of the Life in conjunction with his Life itself. It is one of the most brilliant and effective pieces of word-painting in the annals of literature. Croker's edition is in the Library and can be obtained by anyone wishing to follow the trail of Macaulay's vitriolic onslaught on the mistakes of the editor.

Lockhart's Life of Sir Walter Scott may be looked at from an altogether different standpoint to the former work. Lockhart was Scott's son-in-law and of course intimately acquainted with every phase of his character and career. Yet, with all the advantages thus presented towards the compiling of a complete biography the reader feels that some essential is lacking. Carlyle remarked of Lockhart's work,—Sagacity, decision, candour, diligence, good manners, good sense, these qualities are throughout observable—"In a word this composition is the work of a manful, clear-seeing, conclusive man" ——. What then is it that like a will-o-the-wisp flashes in and out of the pages of Boswell eluding capture or classification yet imparting to it a quality of brilliancy that no other work of this nature comes within miles of equalling? Without aspiring to the position of critic I think it is to be found in the exhibition of that very candour with which Carlyle credits Lockhart, and which is apparent in so few biographies. For Boswell's candour shines forth on every page; he spares neither himself nor his hero and fully acts up to his decision, imparted long before to Miss Hannah More, when that worthy lady besought him in her pedantic way to "mitigate some of Dr. Johnson's asperities" that he would not "cut off Dr. Johnson's claws nor make a tiger a cat to please anybody." And, when all is said and done, of what use is Biography, of what use is History unless we get plain unvarnished facts for our money? Is not there enough mendacity carved on countless tombstones, hollow unreality, falsehood and chicanery encountered by us every day in the mart or on the street without having the sources from which the empire must draw largely for its inspiration clogged with all sorts of impediments in the shape of careless assertions, charitable conatructions and misconstructions and downright perversions of the truth? If space allowed, many instances could be given to show in how great a degree History and Biography have suffered in this manner. Lockhart was blamed for having laid bare much that should have been suppressed. He was accused of making his hero unheroic, of giving pain to various persons and also of invading the sanctities of private life. Carlyle did not have much patience with Lockhart's detractors. Listen to him: "How delicate, decent is English biography, bless its mealy mouth! A Damocles' sword of respectability hangs forever over the poor English Life-writer (as it does over poor English Life in general) and reduces him to the verge of paralysis."

Lockhart's Life of Scott is in the Library, in two editions, and lovers of Scott's works can find much in that Life to kindle afresh their admiration of the author as an artist and as a man.

Southey's Life of Nelson, admittedly a literary gem, is reckoned so on account of the beauty of its style, rather than for the amount of information it gives concerning the great admiral. Much of Southey's matter was derived from other authors, notably Clarke and McArthur, from whose work he seems to have filched whole passages. Clark Russell's Life of Nelson, written for the "Heroes of the Nation" series would seem to meet more nearly the needs of the present day reader, although of course in style it is not to be compared with Southey's masterpiece.

Mrs. Gaskell's Life of Charlotte Bronte is a work that is universally admired but it is unrelieved by a single ray of sunshine. Deeply interesting as the record of a writer who can well be classed among the great novelists of the 19th century, it nevertheless is permeated with such a spirit of gloom as makes it the reverse of cheerful reading. The heart must be hard indeed that cannot be stirred with pity for a family that seemed beset by the very ban-dogs of adversity. The picture that is set before one of the upbringing of Charlotte and her four sisters and brother is a vivid one. Their father, a widower, was perpetual curate of a small village church situated on the Yorkshire moors. He seems to have been a man of peculiar temperament for we are told that he had Spartan ideas as to indulgence in fresh meats and frowned upon all attempts at wearing gay attire. He was a man also of such ungovernable passion that he would relieve his feelings by firing pistols through the back door, sawing the legs and backs off his chairs or throwing the hearthrugs into the fire. Mrs. Gaskell suspects that the children had no books; it is very possible also that they had no playthings. If anything else was needed to add to the gloominess of their lives it was surely to be found in the house that sheltered them, which was a desolate-looking place, surrounded on three sides by tombstones and open on all four to the winds of heaven. One would think there was little enough in such a life to warm the imagination and enable the production of books showing so deep a knowledge of human nature as Charlotte Bronte's books evince. Yet, in the seclusion of Haworth this tender, delicate child thought out life's problems as best she could and depicted its trials and temptations with wonderful accuracy. It was but a proof of the truth of Lovelace's famous lines:

Stone walls do not a prison make,
Nor iron bars a cage;
Minds innocent and quiet take
That for an hermitage.

Most of us know the sad story of the Bronte family; of the deaths one by one of the sisters till Charlotte, alone, was left; of her marriage and early decease; and of the miserable end of her brother, a victim to drink, who in the last effort to assert his manhood insisted on emulating the example of the Emperor Severus by dying on his feet, which he did, supported by his horror-stricken family. The last words he uttered might act as a text for many a preacher, many a pulpiteer;—"I have done nothing either great or good."

TITANIC WIDOW TO MARRY AGAIN

Bride Who Refused to be Parted From Husband Will Wed Again

NEW YORK, DEC. 21.—Unusual interest centres round the engagement just announced of Mrs. Daniel Warner Marvin to Mr. Horace De Camp, a young clubman of this city. The beautiful young widow whose husband went down on the Titanic last year is the mother of a baby boy born some months after the tragedy.

Mr. De Camp and Miss Mary Farquharson that was, have known each other since childhood, their families being old friends. On March 2, Miss Farquharson married Daniel Marvin. It was one of the fashionable weddings of the season. Moving pictures were taken of the ceremony to perpetuate the scene for their family or descendants.

The young couple sailed immediately after for Europe, where they spent their honeymoon. They returned on the Titanic, and when the fate of the vessel seemed certain Mrs. Marvin clung to her husband's side and refused to leave him. Her life was only saved when sailors standing near fairly threw her into the last lifeboat to leave the steamer.

POET'S HARDSHIPS.

Richard Le Gallienne, the poet, was talking in New York about the hardships of a poet's lot.

"Poetry is popular," he said, "but there's no money in it. Have you heard the latest about the well-known poet, Pindar Oade?

"Mrs. Oade nudged her husband in the dead of night and whispered:

"'Pindar, wake up! There's burglars in the house!'

"Well, what of it?' said Pindar Oade sleepily. 'Let them find out their mistake for themselves.'"

Great Britain Has Not Gained The Friendship Of The United States To Detriment Of Canada's Interests

Claimed Professor Grant in a Splendid Address on "International Boundary Disputes," Before a Large Audience at the Normal School Last Night--Britain's Diplomacy Has Resulted in Present Size of Canada.

Has Great Britain, during the past one hundred and thirty years, sacrificed Canada's interests to gain and hold the friendship of the United States?

This question was answered by Professor Grant of Queen's University, in an address on "Canadian Boundary Disputes," before a large audience in the Normal School, last night. The answer he gave was emphatically in the negative, and he pointed out that during the last 130 years the American possessions of France, Spain and Russia had all dwindled down to nothing, whereas, in contrast, and as a result of British diplomacy, British territory in North America to-day was greater than that of the United States.

Mr. D. Walker, Principal of the Normal School, presided at the lecture. Prof. Grant's address was profusely illustrated with slides. A large number of maps, showing the territories in dispute between Canada and the United States were flashed on the screen, and by their aid a vivid idea of the disputes—their real significance, and authoritative incidents, was given the audience. Over 60 slides in all were shown.

Professor Grant opened his address with the remark that the race was greater than the individual, and that "whether we will or not, we are bound up with the past." Yet there were some who said that the twentieth was Canada's century; then why bother with studying about her crude days—of the times when her Dominion was uncertain and her hopes were less? As a general rule, however, Canadian students showed a marked faculty for assimilating the history of the nations, and drawing therefrom the solutions to social and economical problems. But in the study of history in Canadian schools the mistake was sometimes made of referring to Canada as if there were no other country in all the world, as if there was nothing outside her boundaries. While he admitted the importance of local history, he did not feel that it should be taught to the exclusion of a broader outlook on past events.

In conforming with this view the speaker had chosen to speak of some of the international relations of Canada. There was still a general impression that Britain had gained the friendship of the United States by giving away to them pieces of Canadian territory. Public sentiment in a measure, concurred with the late Sir Richard Cartwright in his remark: "All that Canada owes to Britain is a good deal of Christian forgiveness." Personally, the speaker did not. He agreed rather with Sir Allan Aylesworth that "Great Britain has worthily upheld in all her negotiations, the interests of the Empire."

In 1834 Spain, Russia, France and Britain held possessions in North America. To-day Spain and Russia have none. France's portion had dwindled to two unimportant, relatively valueless islands, and Britain alone had kept her colonies.

The "Maine Boundary Dispute" was the first discussed by Prof. Grant. This was settled by a treaty which mentioned in its terms the St. Croix River and the Highlands which divided the rivers flowing into the Atlantic Ocean from those flowing to the St. Lawrence.

The ink was hardly dry on the paper on which the treaty was drawn up when it was learend that two rivers answered the description of the St. Croix, the use of which name had long been discontinued. Thus arose the question "Which is the St. Croix River?"

To settle that point a commission was appointed who found a certain port at the mouth of the southern part of the two rivers. This port was mentioned by an early French explorer, who had built it in the year 1609, at the mouth of the River St. Croix. Thus the south river was taken for the St. Croix, and Canada got seven thousand square miles of fertile, heavily timbered land, which was the territory disputed.

Then it was found that the river divided into two branches. The northern one was the larger and longer, and it was chosen as the boundary. This was a slight concession to the United States but, on the whole, Britain got the lion's share of the disputed territory.

Bay of Fundy Isles.

Then followed the international disagreement as to the Islands in the Bay of Fundy. Commissioners Thos. Barclay and Ward Chipman literally bullied the poor Maine Commissioners into accepting their dictation, and he United States got only two small islands which were of no importance except that they gave them entrance to their own country through their own waters. The important island of Grand Mann, which was under dispute, went to the British.

The "Highlands" Dispute.

The first Ashburton treaty stated that the boundary between the two countries was to run for some distance along the "Highlands" dividing the rivers that flow into the St. Lawrence from those that flow into the Atlantic Ocean. A dispute arose regarding these "Highlands".

This dispute was referred to the king of the Netherlands. This monarch was, at the time, under the thumb of Britain, his territory having been recently cut in two by the revolt and separation of what is known now as Belgium. So it was to be recognized that his decision would be in favour of Great Britain. The United States, however, after having agreed to him as arbitrator, flatly refused to accept his judgment. Lord Ashburton and Daniel Webster were then appointed commissioners. The result of this dispute was that Canada got 900 square miles more than had been given her by the King of the Netherlands.

Two Secret Maps.

The speaker said that much had been made of Webster's secret map. This map had been found among 60,000 others in the French Museum, at Paris. It was supposed to be one made by Benjamin Franklin and it more than justified every claim that Britain had ever made. This was suppressed by Webster.

But another "secret map" was securely reposing in the British Foreign Office, all unknown even to Lord Ashburton. This justified every claim of the United States. This second map was authentic, and authoritative. The former map was of very doubtful origin and consequently not of great value. So John Bull had nothing to learn from the United States in the matter of suppressing maps.

The Oregon Dispute.

In the Oregon dispute the United States' cry was "54, 4" or fight!" But in spite of the danger of war the commissioners for Great Britain succeeded once again in having the boundary go so far south as to give them the better of the dispute. This fixed the boundary between Western Canada and the United States.

The Alaskan Boundary.

The last dispute was that dealing with the Alaskan boundary. When Russia and Britain had come to an agreement, many years before, it was arranged that Russia should have the coast to carry on her sea trade in furs, and Britain the inland, to carry on her inland trade in furs.

Russia sold her domain to the United States after forty years of possession. Thirty years later the dispute arose. It ended in Canada getting a portion of teritory that for seventy years had been the undisputed possession of Russia and the United States.

"While I do not expect that the youngest of us here to-night will live to see it, I believe the time is coming when the British Empire and the United States will unite, and when the Anglo-American Federation, guarding the seven seas of the world, will ensure peace to all nations. Has Britain in her dealings with the United States acted to retain her friendship? Yes. But has she, in doing so, jeopardized the interests of Canada? Emphatically, in my opinion, No!" These were the words with which the lecturer closed his address.

The next address in the course of lectures, of which the one given last night was the first, will be given next Friday night by Mrs. Jean Blewett, the Canadian authoress.

THE RED NOSE.

Some unfortunate persons have been accused of habits of which they were innocent, simply because their nose had a tendency to become beet-coloured. This unusually is due to poor circulation. Such a person not infrequently suffers from cold hands and cold feet. Their hands appear red and awkward. The nose that is red from this cause can be corrected by improving the circulation. A person so afflicted should take vigorous exercise and frequent baths, followed by alcohol rubs (providing always that there is no abnormal condition of the heart which forbids violent exercise). A hot mustard foot bath at night will improve the circulation and tend to draw the blood away from the congested and ungainly hands.

A good tonic will do the rest, that is, if the person observes correct diet —no sweets, acids, or rich pastry, but plenty of good milk, eggs (raw), and green vegetables. At least five glasses of pure water should be taken daily.

Beauty of the Skin

Cleanliness the Essential—Cheap Soaps and Powders to be Avoided

Cheap, inferior soaps and pore-clogging powders are the greatest enemies to the health and beauty of the skin. Skin powders are in reality only white dirt. They absorb the perspiration and form a sort of paste, which seals up the pores and positively stops the natural eliminating action of the skin.

To have a beautiful skin, you should use only the best of soap, and when roughness or irritation of the skin arises the application of Dr. Chase's Ointment will soon restore the natural smoothness and beauty of the skin.

The almost magical effect this ointment has in the cure of eczema, salt rheum, blackheads, pimples and all forms of itching skin eruptions is the wonder of all who use it. It acts as a food for the skin, and is consequently a beautifier of most remarkable effectiveness.

Dr. Chase's Ointment cleans out the pores of the skin and increases the natural activity of the skin as an eliminating agent. If you would have a clear, healthy, beautiful skin, Dr. Chase's Ointment will help you to realize your wish as nothing else can. 60 cents a box, all dealers. TRADES AND LABOUR NOTES

Notes by the Official Scribe

Routine work claimed most of the time at the meeting of the Trades and Labour Council this week. There was a fair attendance of representatives and they assembled in the smaller hall, as being more cosy and comfortable for the winter session.

The Grand Opera House Trouble.

The question was raised anent a member of the I.B.E.W. working at the Opera House whilst the stage employees were being locked out by Mr. Turner. The explanation from one of the representatives of the aforementioned organization was that the said electrical worker was a member who had allowed his card to lapse, consequently was out of the fold by reason of his non-payment of dues. A committee has been apointed to look into the case and report. Also in response to queries from union men as to why the musicians still performed at Opera House, while fellow unionists were outside, the President replied that letters to headquarters had been sent regarding this by himself and the secretary and answers were awaited.

The Great Lakes Disaster.

Sympathy was freely expressed towards those bereaved by the recent violent [illegible] on the Great Lakes. A committee was appointed by the President, whose duty will be to draft a letter of condolence, which will accompany a donation towards the relief of those from whom the breadwinners have been so ruthlessly taken.

First Aid to the Injured.

Representative Lyburn put in a vigorous appeal for the suport of a local class of the St. John's Ambulance Association. He pointed out the necessity of the knowledge of "First Aid," especially by men engaged in hazardous occupations. Great relief can be afforded at the time of an accident by any one possessing the training which is always given voluntarily by some kindly medical man, the only expense being a fee of 50c. for the book and illustrated triangular bandage, also a share of the fee required for the examining medical officer prior to the issuance of proficiency certificates. Union men of the city will no doubt respond.

Labour Conditions In Peterborough

November Report of Labour Gazette

The November issue of the Labour Gazette has the following to say in regard to labour conditions in Peterborough and County:

The demand for labour during October was not as great as during the previous month. Most trades, however, were active. The building trades were busy and from present indications will continue so for the rest of the year. The Toronto Savings and Loan Company has completed arrangements for the rebuilding of the block on the corner of George and Simcoe streets. Mr. A. E. Micks has made a large addition to the premises on Hunter street for the manufacture of tin ware and a planing department will also be in the addition. The third section of the De Laval plant is in operation. A new brick factory is to be built just south of the City. Three hundred acres of land have been purchased, 200 acres being brick clay. Operations are expected to be begun early in the spring. The work of installing the street lighting system in connection with the Hydro-Electric scheme is nearing completion. The present existing contract for the supply of power to the city by the Peterborough Light and Power Company expires at the close of the present year, and the Power Committee of the City Council have instituted expropriation proceedings with a view of obtaining civic control of the Company's distribution service. The work of paving the principal streets will be continued in the spring. Over two thousand feet of sewers will be put in before the end of this year.

The farmers are busy fall ploughing and bringing in the root crops. Shipments of cattle from this district were really considerable and men in the business state that the activity will continue for some time. Poulry is plentiful. Potatoes are more plentiful than last year and of better quality.

Large parties are going back to the timber limits. This coming winter's cut promises to be the heaviest for some seasons.

Most manufacturers were busy during the month. The Vermont Marble Company have commenced manufacturing operations. They have a large number of orders on hand, one from Edmonton to equip a large hotel that is being built there.

Lakefield.—The cement works are running at full capacity and with a long list of orders filed, there is every prospect of a busy winter. The Cavendish Lumber Company's sawmill has closed down and the plant is being moved to Fenelon Falls.

Causes And The Cure Of Tuberculosis

Contributed to The Examiner by the Peterboro' Health Association

Do all the good you can,
To who ever you can,
And when ever you can.

The monthly report of the District Nurse for Tuberculosis and the Nurse, for general work for the months of September and October are as follows:

District Nurse.

Number of patients 27
Number of visits made 172

Donations Received.

6 pairs of pyjamas, 3 suits underwear, 2 quilts, 2 pillows, 1 sheet, 1 ice box, old linen, $12 collected; 6 pillow slips, 6 towels, 2 sheets, old linen.

The nurse for General work has made 309 visits and has 32 patients, medical and surgical.

Donations are thankfully received, especially old linen. These may be sent to the supply room on Water Street. The key may be obtained from Mr. Mason, florist.

In District nursing the actual nursing of the patient is one of the least of the duties which the nurse is called upon to perform for the class of people with whom she meets. To this branch of our work no more appropriate name can be given than instructive nursing, for educational, in the best sense of the word, it should be.

COLLECTED FROM PLEASURE CRAFTS

The rector and church wardens of South Peterborough, wish to acknowledge with gratitude the receipt of the sum of $48.30, from Mr. Jackson, Assistant Lockmaster, at the Peterborough Locks. This sum, Mr. Jackson collected from yachtsmen, steamboats and other friends during the summer months while on duty at the locks.

Kitchener For India

Special Wire to Examiner:

LONDON, ENG., Nov. 22.—It was intimated strongly in official circles to-day that Lord Kitchener, now in Egypt, would shortly succeed Viscount Hardinge as Viceroy of India, the British Government being of the impression that recent disturbances indicated that India needed a stronger guiding hand than that of Hardinge.

TURKEYS IN GREAT DEMAND

Examiner Special:

LONDON, ONT., Nov. 22.—Owing to the unprecedented demand from the United States for Thanksgiving turkeys, Western Ontario farmers are asking big prices for their birds, and big poultry dealing firms here declare their Western Canada business is in jeopardy because the retailers in the west will not pay anything like the prices demanded by Ontario farmers.

THE ANNUAL COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES AT THE COLLEGIATE

Enjoyable Evening With the Students and Graduates—Fine Validictory Addresses By Mr. Meredith Huycke

PRIZES PRESENTED

Commencement is gradually becoming one of the traditions of the Collegiate Institute and is primarily a student affair. But the annual exercises held in the Assembly Hall on Friday night attracted not only a large number of the young Collegians the fair "co-eds," but also many of the graduates of recent and remote years found a peculiar charm in joining with the present generation of students in one of the principal events of the academic year. If future commencement exercises are as pleasant and entertaining as those of Friday night, their popularity will grow not only with the student body but also with the general public of Peterborough.

Dr. Morrison, chairman of the Board of Education, presided during the evening in a most acceptable manner, and the majority of the members of the Board were noticed among the large audience.

In his address, Dr. Morrison stated that commencement brought a great deal of satisfaction to the teachers in the fact that they saw many of their students going forth after completing the various courses. "We feel proud of our efficient staff under very efficient principal. Inspectors have stated and by its results we know that it is the equal of any of the Collegiate Institutes in the province, if not superior to many of them.

Commencement is a source of satisfaction and joy to the pupils, for after twelve years of study, eight in the Public school and four in the Collegiate they have accomplished the first part of their life's work. Some begin the work in which they intend to make their livelihood, others go on to the Normal school or University. Commencement brings a certain sadness and joy to parents, sadness in that for many it means the young people will leave the parental roof to attend the universities, joy in the fact that they have educated their children through the period of youth and equipped them to go out into the world and take part in its activities.

Presentation of Prizes.

The presentation of the various prizes brought out many little character indications that surely left a feeling of satisfaction with the audience. The students were generally natural and unaffected. The prize winners conducted themselves splendidly and they were most cordially greeted by the generous applause of their companions.

The Winners.

Those who carried off the plums that fell with the Entrance examinations were as follows:

Arthur Pitchford, gold watch, donated by J. H. Burnham, Esq., M.P.

Helen Halstead, $5.00, donated by Dr. G. Burnham.

Allan Lord, $5.00, donated by Dr. G. Burnham.

Charles Elliott, $4.00, donated by Dr. M. A. Morrison.

Fred McNeely, $4.00, donated by W. G. Morrow, Esq.

Lillian Frances, $4.00, donated by T. F. Matthews, Esq.

Ewart Petley, $4.00, donated by Dr. McNulty.

Elizabeth Smith, $4.00, donated by Vincent Eastwood, Esq.

Arthur Pitchford of the South Central School, won Mr. Burnham's prize for the highest standing of all the City pupils who passed the Entrance examinations, while Dr. Burnham's two prizes went to the pupils securing the second and third highest standings. Miss Halstead was a convent pupil and Allan Lord was another product of the South Central. The other five prizes were presented by the Board of Education to the pupils who ranked highest in their respective schools and who had not won the highest awards mentioned above.

Mr. Burnham's Remarks.

In presenting his prize to Master Pitchford, Mr. Burnham urged the students to hold lofty aims and to seek to build up character. Not until they reached maturer years will they understand the benefits of their school courses, and look upon some of the points to which they should have given greater attention. He traced briefly the history of the search after knowledge, the achievements of the scholars of early times and the permanent results of their studies. The students of the present day must be prepared not only to learn but to pass on, improved if possible, the facts they acquire, just as truths have been passed on to us.

Mr. Burnham appeared to diverge considerably when he referred to the address given by Mrs. Alice Stebbins Wells in the Collegiate on Thursday evening which to him was incomparably funny. After twenty centuries of Christianity is was necessary to import a policeman, in fact a policewoman from far off Los Angeles, three thousand miles away, to tell us that we must keep our little darlings off the street. This remark drew a round of laughter from many of the adults and students. Mr. Burnham mentioned the fact that Mrs. Wells had been greeted by a large audience, who accorded her remarks with generous applause.

Athletic Prizes.

In presenting the athletic trophies, Mr. J. F. Harvey, B.A., stated that parents should not regard unfavourably this activity of school life. At the annual contests the boys had proved themselves good winners, and above all, good losers. There was keen rivalry, but the best relations prevailed. This spirit was worth fostering for the reason that it developed the best kind of manhood. Athletics did not necessarily distract a student's attention from his studies. He pointed to Meredith Huycke, Douglas Macdonald, Fred Soward and others who had been prominent not only in all the games, but in the literary association, and in the work of their classes.

The Prize Winners.

Senior Championship Staff Cup: Douglas Macdonald.

Senior Championship Medal: Douglas Macdonald, (presented by E. W. Travers, Esq.

Junior Championship, H. S. Macdonald Cup: Fred Soward.

Junior Championship Medal: Fred Soward, (presented by His Worship Mayor Bradburn.)

Girls' Championship Prize: Miss B. Pigeon.

Winners of First Place in One or More Events: aMrgaret Bulmer, Florence Giroux, Lillian Shevlin, Arthur Horsfield, Manley Peever, Stanley Hopkins, Heber Rogers,, Arthur Huycke, Hunter Lewis, Hugh Austin, Gordon Paterson, Jack Green, Fred McNeely, Kyle Hardone.

The Nicholls Scholarships.

Mr. R. R. Hall presented the Nicholls Scholarships, paying a tribute to the memory of Mrs. Nicholls, whose benefactions to Peterborough he enumerated. None would have a more lasting effect, he said, than the scholarships to the Collegiate Institute students. He mentioned the good effects they have had for years, and they will continue to create a feeling of emulation and a desire on the part of the student to do his best work in order to surpass others.

Mr. Hall urged those who had not won prizes to be consoled in the fact that they had studied hard. Let it stimulate them with a new desire to go ahead. After all—

It is in the race and not the prize
That glory's true distinction lies.

The staff of the Collegiate and its students have given Peterborough a splendid standing in the province, and the citizens are proud of what has been accomplished, particularly the results during the past three years.

The Winners.

Pass Junior Matriculation, $15.00—Miss Gladys Fife.

Normal Entrance, $15.00—Clarence McKee.

Faculty Entrance, Part I, $20.00—Joseph Moloney.

Faculty Entrance, Part II, $20.00—Miss Beatrice Malane.

Honour Matriculation and Scholarship, $20.00—Meredith Huycke.

The Valedictory Address.

Mr. Meredith Huycke, of Toronto University, returned to deliver the valedictory and acquitted himself in a most creditable manner. His success at last summer's examination has been previously referred to. He won the Second Edward Blake scholarship of $215 and qualified for four others, but according to the rules of the university could accept only one. He won the Martha Bell scholarship of $260 for classics in Victoria College. During his career at the Collegiate he distinguished himself in every department in which he gave his interests. He won two Nicholls Scholarships, was president of the Literary Society, captain of the baseball team, a good Rugby and hockey player. He was the ideal student, and his former companions gave him a great reception. His address displayed the results of his Collegiate training and was a splendid effort.

Musical Numbers.

A short musical programme proved most enjoyable. Miss Bernice Giroux played the overture to William Tell in a finished manner and responded with Traumerel. Miss Mignon Telgmann delighted the audience with a violin solo and encore number. A Mazurka de concert by Musen and the popular minuet of Rocherini's demonstrated this young lady's skill and natural ability. Her very poise and touch of confidence are inspiring and contribute to a delightful stage presence. She was accompanied by Miss Kathleen O'Brien.

Mr. Maurice Park sang "Ailsa Mine," by Newton, and responded with "Somewhere a Voice Is Calling." Miss Rannie played his accompaniments.

The commencement exercises were indeed a pleasure, and it is hoped that a few extra evenings during the winter will be given.

Notes.

Master Fred Soward, winner of the junior championship, had a broken arm in a cast which did not prevent him from carrying away the silver cup and medal.

Mr. H. R. H. Kenner and his staff received many compliments. The principal was master of the commencement ceremonies.

IMPROVING IT.

A foreigner meeting an American friend said to him, "How are you?" The latter replied, "Out of Sight."

The man considered this very clever and decided to use the expression on the next occasion. Shortly after he was met by a friend, who asked, 'How are you?" With visible pride he answered, "You don't see me."

Recital At St. Andrew's

The organ and vocal recital in St. Andrew's Church, last night, by Mr. Herbert C. Treneer, A.T.C.M., the gifted organist of the Church, and Mr. Frank H. Burt, the well-known Toronto vocalist, was an artistic treat that was enjoyed by a large audience, each artist scoring a triumph.

Mr. Treneer's programme was a varied one and of a nature to demonstrate his ability as an organist, as well as the capabilities of the magnificent organ upon which he played. His offerings ranged from the dainty lightness of transcriptions of Nevin's piano numbers, "Venetian Love Song" and "Good Night," to the dramatic possibilities of Bach's "Fugue in D Minor," the latter being particularly brilliantly played. The final number, the popular overture from Rossini's "Semiramide" was a delightful offering, which Mr. Treneer played with a full appreciation of its beauty.

Mr. Burt's powerful, well-controlled voice was displayed to great advantage, and his numbers were thoroughly appreciated. He was at his best in the recitative "And God Said," and in the aria "Rolling and Foaming Billows," from "The Creation." Tosti's "Good-Bye," a popular song of widely different character, was splendidly sung, as was Sullivan's "The Last Chord." Mr. Burt sings with a refreshing spirit and vim.

Following was the programme:

Organ solo—Marche Religeuse ....Gilmant

(This is a composition of a strictly religious character, in which two main themes are interwoven by the clever employment of counterpoint.

Recitative—And God said; Aria—Rolling and Foaming Billows. From the Creation ..... Joseph Haydn

(a) Andante ..... Merkel

(A composition of a calm, peaceful character, except a short passage in the centre which is full of fiery energy.

(b) Gavotte Mignon ..... Thomas

Vocal—Nature's Adoration ... Holly

(b) Lead Kindly Light .... Howley

Organ—Toccatto and Fugue in D Minor ..... J. S. Bach

(The Toccato in this case is simply a prelude in which the organist has a splendid opportunity to give vent to the fanciful side of his temperament. A Fugue is the highest development of counterpoint. Two or more themes are taken as a basis, and so worked in the composition, that they are constantly reappearing according to the laws of imitation. The present example is of a decidedly dramatic character.)

Vocal—Good-Bye .. ..Tosti

Organ—(a) Venetian Love Song.... ..... Nevin

(b) Good Night ..... Nevin

(These piano transcriptions, as their names imply, depict simply every-day scenes beneath balmy Venetian skies.)

Vocal (a) The Lost Chord .. Sullivan

(b) Honour and Arms .... Handel

Organ—Overture from Semiramide.. ..... Rossini

(The above is simply a medley of airs in various tempos and keys.

ZEPPELIN TRIES ANOTHER DIRIGIBLE

Special Wire to The Examiner.

BERLIN, GERMANY, Nov. 22. — That Count Zeppelin and his followers are not dismayed by the recent terrible end of the dirigible and its twenty-eight passengers was evidenced to-day, when the new Zeppelin, the sixth balloon, soared out of its hangar and rode safely over Lake Constance and back again with Zeppelin and eight others. It carried special safety appliances to guard against a repetition of the former catastrophe. Kaiser Wilhelm had representatives on hand to see the experiment.

ONE WORD MAY COST THE CITY SUM OF $2,500

And Enactment of New Clauses in 1914, City of London Bill—"Public" Means—What?

WITH OTHER COUNCILS

LONDON, Nov. 22.—Because of the legal interpretation of one six-letter word the city of London is faced by an unexpected expenditure of $2,500, and more as well as the necessity of introducing by-laws for the enactment of new clauses in the 1914 city of London bill. The one word is "public." On the city solicitor's opinion of the definition of that word hinges the whole crux of the boulevard question that is now very much "up in the air." During the past year $2,500 and more has been spent by the parks commission on the city boulevards. According to the city solicitor the parks commission had not the legal authority for the expenditure of this money, as the boulevards are still under the jurisdiction of the city council, the opinion of the council and commission to the contrary notwithstanding.

What Does "Public" Mean.

In the city of London bill of 1912, when the case of the parks was handed over to the water commission, it was stated that the "public" boulevards would come under the jurisdiction of that commission. When the parks commission was formed by the water commission the interpretation placed on the word public, by the commission, was that it meant all boulevards. During the past year the city has done $400 worth of weed-cutting on the boulevards and sent in a bill for that amount to the commissioners. The commission called in the city solicitor as to whether it was liable or not, and the solicitor handed down the decision that it was not. He further made the interesting declaration that the word "public" meant only boulevards in front of "public" buildings, and, therefore, the only jurisdiction of the commission was over such boulevards.

Edmonton, Nov. 22.—Ratepayers in Edmonton will be requestedt o vote on a plebiscite at the civic elections, on December 8, upon two proposals, both designed to supply natural gas to consumers at low rates.

Want Utilities Commission.

Kingston, Nov. 22.—It is likely that at the Kingston municipal elections in January the ratepayers will be asked to vote upon the question of placing the civic utilities under a commission.

To Vote on Sunday Cars.

London, Nov. 22.—Mayor Graham, City Clerk Baker and Ald. Saunders of London, waited on the Ontario government and asked that an order be passed declaring the city of London to have a population of 55,026. This is sought to enable the people to vote on the question of Sunday cars at the coming elections in January.

London Raises $1,000.

London city council last night voted the sum of $500 for the relief of the widows and orphans of the sailors who lost their lives in the recent storm on the Great Lakes. The citizens are subscribing handsomely to the fund, more than $1,000 having already been raised. This will be materially increased.

OBJECTS TO THE EXCLUSION OF ULSTER

Special Wire to The Examiner.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—There is likelihood that the premature publication of the government's proposed Ulster concessions in the Times may prevent the offer being made. Opposition to the exclusion of Ulster has since gained force daily. In the Liberal ranks it is common place knowledge that a strong section of the ministers, led by Birrell, Runciman and McKenna regard the exclusion with profound dislike and would only consent to it under extreme pressure. The Liberal newspapers also oppose.

MANY CONSTABLES UNFIT FOR POSITION SAYS SUPT. ROGERS

Report on Provincial Police System Shows Need of Efficient Men

CASES WERE HANDLED

TORONTO, NOV. 22.—"High Constables at $50 per year, and the majority of these officials unfit for the position," is one of the statements in the annual report of Superintendent Rogers of the provincial police, submitted to Attorney-General J. J. Foy, yesterday.

Returns from 36 counties show that 30 have high constables and these receive all the way from $50 to $800 a year. The majority get $50, some $100, some $200, while six counties dispense with the official. The matter will be taken up with a view to compelling the counties having no high constable to appoint one, and compel all the counties to fill the office with a qualified man.

Had 1,256 Cases.

During the year the provincial police handled 1,256 cases and obtained 987 convictions, or 70 per cent. of the prosecutions. Of these 580 persons were fined and 163 sentenced, while 126 were released and 231 discharged. In 25 cases charges were withdrawn. The decrease in the number of cases for the year is 360.

The good work done by the provincial police in the Porcupine strike is pointed out. This cost the province $7,782.91.

The total fines collected during the year amounted to $17,109.50, and constables' fees to $3,600.

The number of persons deported as undesirable was 955, an increase of 243 over 1912.

Liquor Prosecutions.

There were 295 prosecutions by the provincial police under the liquor licenses act and 179 convictions. There were 33 persons discharged, and 17 now await trial. The number of prosecutions was 59 more than the previous year. The total amount of fines collected from this source was $16,949, a decrease of $4,768 compared with the previous year. The seizures were 4,730 bottles of whiskey and 160 gallons of bulk whiskey, two barrels of wine and 13 gallons of bulk wine, 50 gallons of high wines, 186 bottles of gin, 2,188 bottles of beer, and 91 barrels of this beverage.

There were 101 prosecutions under the fish and game laws, in which four persons paid $3,370 in fines, a decrease for the year of $313.

REASSURED.

"He has simply shed a scale."

FATHER GALVIN'S ADDRESS TO THE LADIES' "LIT"

Spoke on "Catholic Men and the Sciences" and Was Listened to by a Large Gathering—Good Musical Programme

A large audience gathered in St. Alphonsus' Lyceum on Friday night to hear Rev. Father Galvin in his address on Catholic Men of Science. He alluded to his address as a dry one, but an evidence of its interest was the fact that he held his hearers' attention every minute.

Father Galvin first referred to Father Kircher, S.J., 1601-1680, who was remarkable for the versatility of his attainments. He was expert in deciphering hieroglyphics. He lectured on physics and Oriental languages in the Roman College and was the first to suspect the presence of bacteria. Father Galvin spoke of Leverrier, the discoverer of the planet Neptune, relating the remarkable and interesting mathematical calculation by which he arrived at the position of this planet. The reform of the calendar was authorized by Pope Gregory XIII., and the results of the results of the men who carried it out are found in the present calendar which takes the place of the old Julian method of enumerating the days and months. Father Perry in England and Father Searle in the United States both occupied prominent places in astronomical circles.

Father Hany was the discoverer of the laws of crystallization which placed mineralogy among the sciences. Nicholas Steno in the 17th century was practically the founder of geology. He was the first to classify the different rocks, and the first to give a satisfactory explanation of the shapes they assumed.

Among discoverers almost all of the important ventures had been made by Catholics. Father Galvin mentioned the Cabots, Columbus, Cartier, Magellan and others.

The Popes always encouraged the study of medicine. The greatest anatomists in the Papal cities of Italy were Vesalius, Eustachius (after whom the eustachian tube in the ear has been named). Fallopius in the 16th century was the founder of modern anatomy. Harvey, the discoverer of the circulation of the blood, was received into the University of Padua. Rialdo Colombo discovered pulmonary circulation, and Fabricius, Harvey's teacher, suspected the facts which his pupil disclosed. Other prominent names mentioned were Gilbert, the celebrated Pasteur, and Theodore Schwan, the famous biologist.

Father Galvin stated that the names of many Catholics have been given to electricity. Galvani, Volta, Colomb, Ampere, Roentgen, Marconi, the familiar names to those who know anything connected with the subject.

Although we are told that science now-a-days is far in advance of that of the middle ages, the fact remains that at that time, when means for experiment were most inadequate, learned men knew, and strove for, the perfection of many of the scientific discoveries that are only at this late day being brought to their consummation. For instance, radium, that most expensive and wonderful of metals, with its proved capacity for changing one element into another, in the transmutation of lithuim into copper, is it not the fabled "philosopher's stone" of the ancient alchemists, whose ridiculed dreams will be realized if, as it is believed, radium can be utilized to change iron into gold. These medical scientists were merely acting on the principle that "in their base all material substances are the same."

In the 13th century Roger Bacon, a Franciscan monk, devoted his time to the study of, and experimentation in, chemistry, music and geometry. On one occasion, when making a number of experiments in connection with explosives, he remarked that in time an explosive would be used for horseless carriages, and to propel boats on the water without men to row. And yet it is not so very long since gasoline has been put to the uses that Roger Bacon predicted so many centuries ago.

The speaker concluded with a reference to the many-sided activity of the Church in scientific matters, and a quotation from one of Gladstone's speeches, in which he said: "The Catholic Church, for the last fifteen hundred years, has marched at the head of human civilization, and has driven, harnessed to her chariot, as the horse to a triumphal car, the chief intelligences and material forces of the world. Her art is the art of the world, her genius is the genius of the world, her greatness, grandeur and glory have been almost all that in this respect the world has had to boast of."

A vote of thanks was moved by Mrs. B. Law, and seconded by Mrs. W. J. Young, and the reverend gentleman rose to exhort all to devote more time and attention to the achievements of the Church.

Miss May Sullivan presided at the meeting and a good musical programme was rendered:

Instrumental solo—Miss Kathleen O'Connell.
Vocal solo—Miss Annie Simons.
Vocal solo—Miss Dorothy Garden.

A Good Work.

Edith was light-hearted and merry over everything. Nothing appealed to her seriously. So, one day, her mother decided to invite a very serious young person to dinner, and he was placed next the lighthearted girl. Everything went well until she asked him:

"You speak of everybody having a mission. What is yours?"

"My mission," said the parson, "is to save young men."

"Good," replied the girl, "I'm glad to meet you. I wish you'd save one for me."

ARTHUR HAWKES MAKES THE THIRD CORNER IN LANARK BYE-ELECTION

Champion of "British Born" Becomes Candidate in Tory Stronghold—"Canada First and Common Sense" Policy

The South Lanark bye-election, delayed by the Government for some eight months, has now become a three-cornered contest, the third candidate being Mr. Arthur Hawkes of "British-born" fame. For months the warring factions within the Conservative party have held the boards and prevented any setting of polling day. At the party convention Dr. Hanna was finally named as the regular candidate of the organization, but friends of Lieut.-Col. Balderson, who believed the latter entitled to the candidature, alleged that they had discovered serious irregularities, to say the least, in the campaign waged to land the nomination for Dr. Hanna. Charges of machine manipulation and other unsavory things were openly made, and the friends of Col. Balderson left the convention with the determination to urge their candidate to remain in the field. The Colonel is a fighting man, and retreat was not in his repertoire. Accordingly he decided to stand, and thus far all efforts of the party politicians have been unavailing in securing his withdrawal.

With this definite split in the party the Government was afraid to bring on the election, and up to the present time no date for poling has been set.

A third candidate has now entered the lists. Mr. Arthur Hawkes, the head and front of the British-born campaign of the general election of 1911, and recently the exponent of a Canada First campaign against the Borden policy of naval contribution, is in the field with an appeal to the franchise of the South Lanark electors. In his election address issued yesterday Mr. Hawkes describes himself as a non-partisan candidate seeking support on a "Canada First and common-sense politics platform."

Mr. Hawkes announces in his journal, The Canadian, that he will conduct a thorough campaign of the riding, opening with a public meeting in the Town Hall at Smith's Falls on Monday evening, the 4th inst., at which Mayor Foster will preside. "If you elect me," Mr. Hawkes states in his address to the people of South Lanark, which is in many respects a unique and interesting document, "I pledge myself to move an amendment to the address in reply to the speech from the Throne, which will be read at the opening of Parliament, declaring that the time has gone by for professing to deal temporarily with so vital a question as national defence; that the Government, without delay, should bring in a permanent naval policy, which must be in harmony with the unanimous resolution of March, 1909, in sympathy with the progress that has been made by Australia, and which will be the final proof of the determination of the Canadian people to provide and control all their means of defence on a basis of blood alliance as between nations, looking always to the maximum of co-operation with the fleets maintained by the United Kingdom and the other sister nations."

ZUFELT'S DEATH RESULTED FROM DRUNKEN ORGY

Chief Ruse, Coroner Elliott and Crown Attorney Kerr went out Monday to complete the inquest on the death of Wm. Zufelt who was found lying in the road in Bryces woods, near Oak Heights, on Saturday, Nov. 8th

A number of witnesses were examined and the evidence showed that Zufelt had been working for Sanford Gleason as a thresher. On Friday, Nov. 7th, he had been paid $20 and after supper, about 6 o'clock, Morris Gleason (the son) had hitched up and drove Zufelt and Wm. Masters towards Zufelt's home. When they reached Boyles Corners they met Walter Russ, and Gleason left them. They had a jug with about half a gallon of whiskey and had been drinking; Russ had a one-seated buggy, Russ and Zufelt had driven away, leaving Masters in a field beside the road. Russ, when placed on the stand, declared that he did not know anything from the time he met the men at Boyles Corners until he woke up some time on Saturday morning sitting in the buggy outside his own gate, the horse standing there, the lines down at its side. He got out, opened the gate, unharnessed the horse, and after feeding it, went to bed and slept until about 8 o'clock. Later he had found a purse in the buggy containing $20, he had gone to Zufelt's house and Mrs. Zufelt informed him that Mr. Zufelt had not returned home. Russ had gone away without mentioning the purse but had returned it to Mrs. Zufelt on Tuesday. Mr. Geo. Pratt and Mr. John Bright who were driving in on Saturday morning saw the body in the road and notified Mr. Couch. When found the body was lying in the middle of the road with the legs crossed and the arms crossed on the breast; blood was dropping from the left ear, and a mark in the road about a foot from the head, with hair and blood on it. Dr. F. A. Aylesworth of Roseneath and Dr. Ivey of Cobourg were called in and made a post mortem examination and found no marks of violence other than a cut back of the ear and two spots on top of the skull The wind pipe and lungs were clogged with mucous and vomit, indicating death by strangulation. The Coroner, in summing up the evidence, said it seems difficult to explain the exact position, how the man would be found in that position almost as if he had been laid out after death with his feet crossed in that way and his arms folded over his chest, and when found rigor mortis had set in which does not happen until several hours after death, so the man must have been dead for several hours before found. Footprints were found on the ground as if some one had stood at the wheel of the buggy talking, and as there were no footprints going away, it was natural to conclude that the person making them had got into the rig. The jury returned a verdict of death from strangulation.—Cobourg World.

WILL INVESTIGATE THE COMPLAINT

Special Meeting of the Board of Police Commissioners Called for This Afternoon to Deal With Complaint of the License Commissioners

MUST PRODUCE EVIDENCE

The Police Commissioners will meet this afternoon at four o'clock, and will, if circumstances demand, deal with the complaint of the Board of License Commissioners. The latter have been invited to submit evidence in respect to the implication that Chief of Police Thompson has been somewhat lax in rendering police assistance to License Inspector Stewart. The complaint was presented in the form of a communication and was received by the Police Commissioners at their last regular meeting.

Action Deferred.

It was then decided to ask the License Commissioners to be more specific in regard to their impeachment and with this object in view, action in the matter was deferred until to-day. It is probable that no action will be taken in regard to the complaint unless the License Commissioners comply with the request of the Police Commissioners, and take steps to substantiate their assertion.

NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE SAVES THE HAIR

And Keeps You Looking Young

Don't look older than you are. It is just as easy to look younger. While lack of hair or poor hair is not always an indication of age, it is frequently accepted as such.

A person well advanced in years possessing a good head of hair is always spoken of as "well preserved."

Everyone can retain beautiful, luxuriant hair if they make the effort. In almost every instance poor hair or the loss of hair may be traced to the activity of the dandruff germ. Newbro's Herpicide prevents the scale-like accumulation and puts the scalp in a perfectly healthy condition. With the elimination of the dandruff the hair no longer drops out. The itching of the scalp stops almost at once.

Newbro's Herpicide is the remedy for which there are many substitutes, preparations claimed to be "just as good." You don't have to accept a substitute. Insist upon having genuine Herpicide.

Newbro's Herpicide in 50c and $1.00 sizes is sold by all dealers who guarantee it to do all that is claimed. If you are not satisfied your money will be refunded.

Applications obtained at good barber shops. Send 10c in postage to The Herpicide Co., Dept. R., Detroit, Mich., for sample and book.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

TWO GREAT PLAYERS WHO LEFT NEWCASTLE UNITED

The Tyneside People Are Searching the Country For an Outside Right---Sky Pilot is a Notable Figure in Football Circles---See Late Edition of The Examiner For To-day's Football Results.

Scott Duncan to Rangers and Jack Rutherford to Woolwich—two great players who have left Newcastle United this season. Now the Tyneside people are searching the country for an outside-right and they have approached Chelsea for Douglas, the Dumfries youth, who had had an International honour. Newcastle will have to pay. When they are after players, clubs talk in thousands.

—x—

Asked why he left Newcastle, Jacky Rutherford said: "In the first place, I left Newcastle solely on account of Mrs. Rutherford. My wife has been in poor health for some time, and the doctor said it would be advisable to go south. And now we'll be able to do that. After all, Mrs. Rutherford is my first consideration, and it is only right, too, don't you think?"

"And what about Newcastle United?"

"Well," said Jack, "I'm not going into details over what grievance I have had with the club, but first of all, Newcastle, to my mind, didn't treat me fairly at the back end of last season, and I did not care to play second fiddle when I was fit and well enough to be in the first team."

—x—

Among the rapidly dwindling band of football players who resort to the old style of vigorous charging, the Rev. K. R. G. Hunt is a notable figure. The rev. gentleman is a half-back who can play almost equally well in any of the three positions, and he has achieved his great distinction by sheer virtue and merit. He plays footbal because it was born in him and had to come out; always the game is a glorious pastime to him, not a thing to be taken too sedately, but a tonic and an inspiration. Tall, and of fine physical proportions, he has never scrupled to use his weight, and why should he? Sheer strength is just as much a distinct factor in football as ball cleverness or shooting ability. In the best sense of the word the fame must always be "rough," and by that I mean that it must always have just that spice of risk in it without which it would cease to be a game that matters.

—x—

One would think that in Scotlnad—the cradle of the game—they would not be averse to a little wholesome charging, but the fact remains that Hunt aroused quite a storm of protest not so long ago by the manner in which he knocked Scotia's sons about in an international game. Some of the critics sitting in well-padded comfort on the grand stand were inexpressibly shocked at the rev. gentleman's lack of refinement, which was all extremely silly. For Hunt in that particular match was always scrupulously fair, as he always is; surely the Scottish critics would not have preferred a little clever ankle tapping to shoulder charging! Whatever would they have said if they had seen Lord Kinnaird on one of his "happy" days?

—x—

John Buchan, brother of the Sunderland forward, has signed on for Bradford. He is an outside right, and 18 years of age.

Oldham's supporters have fine lungs if we may judge by the row one of them made at Anfield.

Palmer is a player of no mean parts. He has a scientific touch of beating backs that is novel.

Blackburn Rovers are said to have their eye to Dawson, the Heart of Midlothian centre forward.

Bolton Wanderers' opening dash was more than the Middlesbrough defence could stand.

The hat trick of the Bury inside left put them on the High Peake of the second division table again.

Fourteen thousand people watched the Sunderland-Rovers match last season.

Harrison was strongly recommended to "Mersey," and has justified the Leicester jury's "rider."

The veterans, H. Vickers and W. Marshall, played exceedingly well for the Bolton Tram men at Bury.

OLD RACING TERMS

Fine Distinction Between Stake and Purse Often Overlooked

The old and well defined term "stake" receives some rough handling on the trotting turf when races are reported by art critics, golf experts, baseball writers or any person who happens to be available when the trotters come to town. Some of the trade papers of the trotting turf and even track officials themselves seem at times unable to recognize the plain distinction between a purse and a stake.

From the earliest period of racing the term stake, or sweepstakes, has always been used to designate a race for which the prize is the total amount of money contributed by the nominators, all of which belongs to the winners. This is the definition incorporated in the rules of the National Trotting Association, and the same meaning is given to the term sweepstakes in the New York Jockey Clunb's rules of racing. A race is still a stake when money or other prizes are added to the entrance fees or subscriptions, but is never a stake if the prize is less than the total amount paid by the nominators. In a "stake" the association promoting the race merely holds the entrance money in trust for the nominators.

A purse is a fixed sum offered by the promotor of the race, to which the nominators do not contribute. All entrance fees in such a race belong to the association, and if they amount to more than the purse, as often happens on the trotting turf, the association profits to that extent, and the purse remains the same as if there were only two or three entries.

Ever since instalment purses came into vogue on the trotting turf, there has been a tendency to call all early closing races stakes. As a matter of fact there are few—very few—stake races on the trotting turf, most of the promoters preferring to offer purses so that they need not pay out all the entrance money in case this exceeds the face of the purse. Even the futurities in harness racing are nearly all purses instead of stakes, and for the reason just mentioned.

HOCKEY

HAMILTON, Nov. 21.—The Hamilton junior O.H.A. players are losing no time in getting down to business. Manager Graham had a large squad out again last evening at the Alerts' rink and a splendid practice was enjoyed. Parker, Sloan, Green and Boyd, of last year's team, were in uniform, while McEwen, a likely lad from Stratford, Wettlauger, a good Berlin youth, and Connor, a local lad who is showing up well, were also on hand. There was fully twenty players on the ice and Manager Graham put them through a stiff workout. The next practice will be held Monday, when McClung and several others will make their first appearance. There is no doubt but that a pretty tidy little team will be rounded up.

STRATFORD, Nov. 21.—The signed contract of Reg. Rankin, the local goalkeeper, has been forwarded to Manager Murphy, of the Ontarios, one of the Toronto N. H. A. teams. Friends of Rankin in Stratford and other western Ontario towns and cities, have no hesitation in saying that he will make good from the moment he steps into the net. His work has been a bright feature of many of the O.H.A. games played in this city for a number of years. Rankin had numerous offers, but preferred the contract submitted by the Ontarios.

TORONTO, Nov. 21.—Manager Murphy of the Ontarios last night received word from Howard McNamara, of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., to the effect that he would be in town in a few days to talk over the matter of signing for the coming season. McNamara has been in the north woods for three weeks on a hunting expedition, and reports that he is even now in condition to get into the game.

George McNamara, who, with Howard, was the backbone of the Tecumseh team last season, will also be with the Ontarios, provided a suitable contract is offered him. With the "Dynamite Twins" and Reg. Rankin of Stratford, for a defence, the new team needs only a good forward line to get right into the running from the start.

MONTREAL, Nov. 21. — Didier Pitre will take Lalonde's place in the west. George Kennedy, managing director of Les Canadiens, has received a wire to that effect from the Patricks. They are willing to take him in exchange, if Kennedy can make satisfactory arrangements.

He was getting a salary of three thousand dollars for his two months' play, and through neglect he allowed himself to be fined seven hundred and fifty dollars.

From what can be ascertained, Pitre, although at first he did not like the idea of the change, now seems to have decided that a trip to the coast won't do him any harm.

MONTREAL, Nov. 20. — Word reached President Lichtenheim, of the Wanderers' Hockey club, that at the meeting of the N.H.A. directors in Toronto next Saturday an attempt will be made by the Ottawa club to fine him for a breach of the laws of the association. Mr. Lichtenheim says he is accused of tampering with Ronan.

Mr. Lichtenheim says that he did not make overtures to Ronan, but can prove that the Ottawa player was approached by officials of the British Columbia League.

BERLIN, Nov. 21.—The Toronto professional hockey club, known as the Ontario hockey club, is after the services of Otto Soloman, the fast left wing man of the Berlin O.H.A. intermediates. Manager James Murphy, of the Torontos, has written "Solly," stating that he was favourably impressed with his showing the last time he saw him perform. Murphy writes that he would like to have Soloman try out with his team as soon as the season opens, and assures him that it will not interfere with his amateur standing should he decide to adhere to the amateur ranks.

"Solly" does not feel disposed to jump into the professional ranks. In fact, he has decided to stay with the amateur game and will be seen with the local intermediates this year.

BUCKHORN BASS WEIGHED MORE BUT DID NOT LAND THE STAR PRIZE

Toronto Star: After protracted consideration the Star has decided to award the prize rod for the largest small-mouthed black bass caught in the Province of Ontario waters during the season of 1913 to Mr. R. J. Eacrett, Inspector for the Board of License Commissioners of Brantford, Ontario. Mr. Eacrett's fish measured 12 inches in length, 16 inches in girth, and weighed 5 lbs. 12 ounces, eight hours after it was caught.

Seldom, if ever, has the Fishing Editor had a harder task to make the award in the Star's Black Bass competition than this year. It is only after prolonged and patient investigation that a decision could be reached. Several very fine fish were entered, but owing to obvious discrepancies in the figures submitted as to their weight and dimensions, it was impossible to judge the winner on the evidence originally furnished. Correspondence necessitating the lapse of considerable time followed. In the various replies to our requests for specific data and explanatory details, we have been asked to calculate upon well-nigh all the elements applicable to the possibilities of the case at issue. We have had to make due and undue allowance for the idiosyncrasies of human nature, also. Such problems as the calculation of the shrinkage of a fish skin mounted two weeks after the fish was caught by an unskilled taxidermist versus a skilled one have been thrust upon us. We have been constrained to believe contradictory evidence sworn to bfore north country justices of the peace with their wives as witnesses. It has been proved by solemn declaration that some black bass may measure more and weigh less than other bass that measure less and and weigh more; maybe bigger though lighter in the one case, heavier but smaller in the other.

In short, all the ideas as to the average proportions of black bass formulated by some 13 years of experience in this annual competition have been assailed and almost overwhelmed. But not quite.

Under these circumstances discretion must be left with the Fishing Editor, in the exercise of this discretion. Accordingly the Fishing Editor awards the rod to Mr. Eacrett.

Four Striking Instances.

1.—Weight 6 lbs. 8 ounces, length 22 inches, girth 14 5-8.

2.—Weight 4 lbs. 15 ounces, length 23 1-2 inches, girth 17.

3.—Weight 6 lbs., length 21 inches, girth 15 1-2.

4.—Weight 4 lbs., length 20 3-4, girth 15 1-2.

Take the first two, for example. A 6 1-2 pound fish measures 22 inches by 14 5-8, while a fish measuring 23 1-2 by 17, only claims to weigh 4 lbs. 15 ounces.

Take the second pair. A fish weighing 6 lbs., measures 21 by 15 1-2, while the other one, measuring practically the same, or to be exact, 20 3-4 by 15 1-2, is only able to register 4 lbs., on the scales.

The Buckhorn Case.

The first case considered when the competition closed on September 15, was that of the fish caught by Mr. J. D. Montgomery at Green's Lake near Hall's Bridge on Buckhorn Narrows, Trent River waters. The Star's representative visited Buckhorn and interviewed the witnesses. These are Mr. John Jones, the local justice of the peace, his wife, and others in the village. Apparently everybody connected with the entry stand in good faith. The fish was measured by Mr. Jones, himself, who is by trade a carpenter and accustomed to close measurements. Mrs. Jones wighed the fish. She keeps a little grocery store. Mr. Jones is Postmaster of the village, and has a summer tourist boarding house as well as the store scales which Mrs. Jones used to weigh the fish had been inspected by G. H. Howson, the proper district officer of the Weights and Measures Department, on May 20th, 1913, and certified as correct. The certificate was produced for the Star to see. And the fish weighed 6 pounds 8 ounces, thought it measured only 14 5-8 inches in girth and 22 inches in length. Mr. Montgomery is a guide of 40 years' standing, a county constable, and a fish warden during the close season from April 15 to June 15 each year. The fish was weighed and measured two days after it was caught. The question arises, why did it not measure more in girth? If shrinkage is to be allowed for, shrinkage and weight is usually more notable than shrinkage in measurements. The fish was not photographed, nor mounted. The only explanation possible in this case, in view of comparative figures, is that some mistake must have been made.

Rambling through the park one afternoon a gentleman took a seat on one of the numerous benches, and while in this restful position he noticed a small boy lying close by.

"What's the matter young man?" he kindly asked, addressing the youngster. "Why don't you play with the other children?"

"I don't want to play," answered the boy.

"But why don't you want to play?" insisted the gentleman.

"I'm just waitin'," was the startling response of the boy. "A feller painted that bench about fifteen minutes ago and I want to see you get up."

THE DOWNIE STREET CREEK

Bone of Contention May be Revived Next Spring—Want Concrete Work Extended

FALSE WORK REMOVED

The wooden framework supporting the new concrete bridge which crosses Edinburgh Street, and which forms a part of the notorious Downie street waterway, has been removed. This represents the last phase in the diversion of Downie Street creek and at the same time elminates a familiar bone of contention in municipal politics.

The owners of the properties bisected by the creek are well satisfied with the work and it is understood that steps will be taken to have the concrete work extended at both ends of the present section. This work will no be commenced before spring however, when the approaching municipal elections will have been disposed of.

The Black Bottle.

A large black bottle containing documentary evidence of the diversion and its attendant vicissitudes, has been embedded in the concrete retaining wall. The bottle contains a copy of the agreement which was enacted between the City and Mr. Thomas Blodgit, through whose property the creek has been diverted. It also includes a list of the city officials.

PROBABILITIES.

Fresh winds, mostly southerly; fair and very mild to-day. Some showers during the night and on Sunday.

Genuine Pity.

"Mr. and Mrs. Whiffer never have any arguments."

"How does that happen?"

"Mr. Whiffer won't argue."

Stock Markets

A. H. Stratton & Co., Brokers, report the following:

To-day did not develop much of a stock market. The tendency is to restrict daily trading for the time being until developments come out in the currency situation and Mexican matters shall have assumed a more favourable position. We find an improvement in the best quarters compared with two months ago, the undercurrent of sentiment is not nearly so pessimistic. There is a strong disposition to analyze news to its lowest terms rather than to accept off-hand professional construction. Attention is focussing upon the presentation of the rate claims Monday. If this is satisfactory it is expected that a recovery will follow in the stock market based upon the realization of the shortage which is very large. It seems to be the impression in high quarters of the street that the Mexican situation may drag along for some time to come and that before settlement many changes will have to be evolved in the speculative policies.

GUARDED BY "ARMY"

Sylvia Pankhurst is Not Arrested by the Police

OUTRAGES ARE REPORTED

LONDON, Nov. 24.—Supported by a large force of her "people's army," Miss Sylvia Pankhurst addressed a meeting at Bow last evening and then marched under the escort of the army from the hall to her residence. No attempt was made to arrest her. The strictest precautions had been taken to exclude detectives from the hall.

Incendiary outrages by the suffragettes occurred on Saturday, the boathouse at Eastville Park, Bristol, and a portion of the grandstand in the sports ground at Blackburn being burned.

The police have not sought to arrest Sylvia, who is still at liberty, though her "cat-and-mouse" license expired four weeks ago. The mystery of Scotland Yard's apparent inefficiency is cleared up in a statement that the detectives were cautioned by headquarters not to run the risk of getting into a fight with the armed bodyguard nicknamed "Sylvia's east end army." That the so-called army is no myth was admitted by a Scotland Yard official, who, however, said there was no ground for taking much stock in stories about "well-drilled battalions numbering thousands." The army, he declared, consists of a gang of toughs, some hire and others attracted by the hope of an affray with the police. According to Scotland Yard, the army probably does not exceed 400. Both sexes are enrolled, and the amazons inspire the detectives with even more nervousness than the men, although the latter are said to be armed with whalebone staves loaded with lead on the end.

Jim Larkin Denounces Social Reformers in Dublin

LABOUR LEADER A FORCE

LONDON, Nov. 24. — Jim Larkin was given an enthusiastic reception at Cardiff yesterday afternoon. Addressing a large meeting, he denounced the low wages of many shop assistants. Speaking of Dublin as the richest town in Britain, he said that they had at Head Castle a clique, Earl Aberdeen and his good lady, who got $25,000 a year. Their only function, as far as he could gather, was in calling meetings and having exhibitions. At the exhibitions they had lecturers who were paid five and ten guineas to show how to feed a family of seven on eight shillings and sixpence a week.

Larkin is the man of the day. Tens of thousands listened to his fiery and rude eloquence in Albert Hall and other huge buildings incapable of accommodating the would-be audiences last week, and hundreds of thousands more have read the newspaper reports of his speeches. A labor paper which is printing them has found its circulation going up with such leaps and bounds that its affairs have been transformed in one week from the verge of bankruptcy to comparative affluence. Organs which generally make an appeal to the conservative class have been found speaking of Larkin in terms of high praise. "He is the will and the fate to the multitudes," wrote The London Times, adding "this rough dock laborer has fascinated idealists and poets and the followers of the high ideal and the heroic."

"Whether we like it or not," says another London paper, "Jas. Larkin is the man with whom we have to reckon. He drops his 'h's' and uses violent language. He talks a strange dialect, half Lancashire, half Irish, and all his own, a crude, unlettered dock laborer in fact, but you cannot listen to him without being conscious of unusual force. You forget the roughness of his speech in the fierce energy that blazes through it. You seem to hear murmurs of poor struggling utterance, and if the utterance is defiant and challenging, it is not that of a mere tub-thumper. It has sudden flashes of insight, swift and unexpected transitions, a certain largeness of motive and at times a generosity of statement that suggests something more than a firebrand. He is not at the mercy of his audience like the demagogue who follows the line of readiest cheer. He is its master and snubs its shallower humors."

Larkin is the man upon whom it is no exaggeration to say that the whole course of British politics seems to pivot. Time alone will show what influence his personality will exercise upon the nation whose destinies he is now shaping, but, judged by present appearances, it is likely to prove deep and real. The revolt of the rank and file against what it called "red tape officialism" of the Labor party's Parliamentary leaders has grown apace in the past week.

TO EXTEND CHARITY.

Roman Catholics Plan To Devote More Funds To It.

TORONTO, Nov. 24—A pronouncement from Archbishop McNeil, ushering in a new era of charitable work among Roman Catholics, was read in all the Roman Catholic churches in the Archdiocese of Toronto yesterday. After drawing attention to the modern trend away from individualism and towards co-operation, the archbishop outlined a program of social and charitable work, which will involve collection and distribution of more money than the church has devoted to social service in previous years.

A special Sunday will be appointed next year and called Charity Sunday, and on that day a collection will be taken up sufficient to finance the charitable works of the diocese throughout the year, without any collections on the part of sisters. A special collection is also to be taken up in every parish of the diocese during December of this year, at which $8,000 will be raised for charity work. This amount will be independent of the charity donations received through regular collections.

Five hundred dollars of the special December collection will be handed over the relief of the widows and orphans of those who perished in the great lakes storm.

The archbishop remarked on the work of the National Sanitarium Association. He emphasized the duty of Roman Catholics to unite with others in support of the association, as it is impracticable to build a Roman Catholic hospital for the care of consumptives.

MEXICAN FEDERALS AND REBELS APPROACH AT JUAREZ

Provincial President Martin's Seeming Serenity in Face of Depleted Treasury and Reverse of Government Troops --He is Keeping the Facts of Rebel Advance From Populace.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 24.—Resigned apparently to those conditions which make it necessary to carry on a dilatory campaign against his enemies, President Huerta and his official dependents appeared serene yesterday, convinced that the United States will not take more drastic measures toward the Mexican Government than those already taken.

It has been rumored that Congress would not continue to meet; that it would be automatically dissolved, and that Gen. Huerta was about to quit office. All these have been disproved by Congress launching itself into what promises to be a prolonged session. It is expected that to-day Congress will take up the ratification or nullification of the Presidential elections, and it is understood that these will be annulled, that new elections will be called and that President Huerta will remain at the head of affairs.

According to his intimates no one realizes more fully than Gen. Huerta the desperate straits of his Government, but he has reiterated his intention of pounding away at his enemies until he or they have won.

The financial situation is the most serious that Huerta is facing. The fact that the national treasury is practically empty is not hidden even from the most ignorant peon in the city, and that measures recently adopted to obtain funds have been such as are calculated to remove any doubt remaining. The new stamp tax, which will go into effect Dec. 1, will practically double the revenue from that source. Special taxes have been imposed, and the taxing of articles imported by parcel post is being discussed.

The military situation throughout the country is little understood in the capital. It is almost impossible to obtain accurate news of operations not fifty miles away, and practically all the news published in the local papers is distrusted by the public, who realize that it is given out by the departments of the Government and that the proofs of all the Mexican newspapers are revised by censors.

Federals Retreated.

EL PASO, Tex., Nov. 24. — The principal fighting that has featured the northward advance of the federals took place Friday evening near Samalayuca, 32 miles south of Juarez, when a rebel scouting party of 100 men under Rodolfo J. Fierro moved to attack a party of federal soldiers who had detrained there. According to Fierro, the Huerta troops had unloaded two cannon from the train, which was the leading one in the group of eight, which were carrying the federal soldiers northward.

"They turned their cannon on us when we were several miles away," says Fierro, who accompanied Villa to Juarez yesterday morning. "We had no artillery, but kept moving toward them. My men were not mounted, but they did not hesitate a moment to go against the enemy, who outnumbered us greatly. Imagine our surprise when we got within a mile of the train to see the federals reload their artillery and back down the track. No member of my command was killed or wounded by the firing."

"I have placed my army in position 12 miles south of Jaurez," said Gen. Pancho Villa yesterday morning. "The extreme right wing rests at Bauche, on the Mexico Northwestern Railway, 12 miles from Jaurez. The extreme left is at Mesa, 13 miles from here, and on the Mexican Central Railway. The front extends for a distance of 12 miles between these two points.

"Between 5,000 and 6,000 men, cavalry, infantry and artillery, are camped along this line, which has been fortified with the cannon I took from the federals at Torreon and Juares. The country in that section is hilly and admirably fitted for defence.

"The story that I am planning to evacuate Juarez is absolutely false," continued the constitutionalist commander-in-chief. "When I do evacuate, it will be only because federal bullets drove me out, and that is highly improbable. I have left an army 12 miles outside the city so that I can give protection to families living here and across the river."

Huerta at Bullfight.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 24. — Gen. Huerta attended the bullfight yesterday. Accompanied by only two members of his staff, but guarded by a score of detectives, the President entered the bull ring, where 20,000 persons had gathered to see Gaona Mexico's greatest matador, inaugurate the season.

Gen. Huerta occupied a box close to the arena. The band played the nation hymn and the people arose to their feet, but there was no cheering. The President left after the killing of the fourth bull.

TRADE IS GROWING.

Canadian-Australian Exchange Doubles In Three Years.

OTTAWA, Nov. 24. — Australia buys from Canada six times what Canada buys from Australia. This seems to be a result of the policy of the business men of the Antipodes, for Australia's trade within the Empire is nearly double that with foreign countries. However, Canadian trade with Australia has grown much during the past year.

During 1910, Canada bought goods from Australia to the value of just about half a million dollars, while the value of Canadian goods bought by Australians was $4,016,225. In 1912, according to figures just received from the Canadian trade commissioner, Canada bought Australian goods to the value of $807,975, a very satisfactory increase. Australia's purchase of Canadian goods increased in 1912 by about $780,000.

The causes which have led up to the total trade of $64,000,000 between the United States and Australia are effective representation, either by direct travelers or through resident agents, and the services of reliable commission houses. Cheap transportation from factory to shipping port, and low ocean freight rates have been a factor in the growth of trade.

As opposed to this the Canadian trade commissioner notes that the exports to Canada would have been larger had there been sufficient cold storage accommodation on the Canadian-Australian steamers.

After the small boy emerged from the quick lunch place he opened a paper bag and revealed a club sandwich. Glancing furtively around, he lifted off the top slice of bread, took out a piece of chicken, ate it, and replaced the bread. A few moments later he again removed the "lid," extracted a piece of bacon, and repeated this process as he shuffled along Market Street until all the bacon was gone and most of the chicken. A man who had watched the process with curiosity tapped the boy on the shoulder and inquired:

"Say, kid, why don't you eat your sandwich instead of picking at it that way?"

"Dasn't!" replied the youth. "'Tain't mine!"

"That Affair Next Door"

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

"The house in which this dead girl was found?"

"Yes,"—impatiently.

"Did you think she might throw herself at his feet there?"

"She said she might; and as she is romantic, foolishly romantic, I thought her fully capable of doing so."

"And so you did not seek her in the morning?"

"No, sir."

"How about the afternoon?"

This was a close question; we saw that he was affected by it though he tried to carry it off bravely.

"I did not see her in the afternoon. I was in a restless frame of mind, and did not remain in the city."

"Ah! indeed! and where did you go?"

"Unless necessary, I prefer not to say."

"It is necessary."

"I went to Coney Island."

"Alone?"

"Yes."

"Did you see anybody there you know?"

"No."

"And when did you return?"

"At midnight."

"When did you reach your rooms?"

"Later."

"How much later?"

Two or three hours."

"And where were you during those hours?"

I was walking the streets."

The ease, the quietness with which he made these acknowledgments were remarkable. The jury to a man honoured him with a prolonged stare, and the awe-struck crowd scarcely breathed during their utterance. At the last sentence a murmur broke out, at which he raised his head and with an air of surprise surveyed the people before him. Though he must have known what their astonishment meant, he neither quailed nor blanched, and while not in reality a handsome man, he certainly looked handsome at this moment.

I did not know what to think; so forbore to think anything. Meanwhile the examination went on.

"Mr. Van Burnam, I have been told that the locket I see there dangling from your watch-chain contains a lock of your wife's hair. Is it so?"

"I have a lock of her hair in this; yes."

"Here is a lock clipped from the head of the unknown woman whose identity we seek. Have you any objection to comparing the two?"

"It is not an agreeable task you have set me," was the imperturbable response; "but I have no objection to doing what you ask." And calmly lifting the chain he took off the locket, opened it, and held it out courteously toward the Coroner. "May I ask you to make the first comparison," he said.

The Coroner, taking the locket, laid the two locks of brown hair together, and after a moment's contemplation of them both, surveyed the young man seriously, and remarked:

"They are of the same shade. Shall I pass them down to the jury?"

Howard bowed. You would have thought he was in a drawing-room, and in the act of bestowing a favour. But his brother Franklin showed a very different countenance, and as for their father, one could not even see his face, he so persistently held up his hand before it.

The jury, wide-awake now, passed the locket along, with many sly nods and a few whispered words. When it came back to the Coroner, he took it and handed it to Mr. Van Burnam, saying:

"I wish you would observe the similarity for yourself. I can hardly detect any difference between them."

"Thank you! I am willing to take your word for it," replied the young man, with most astonishing "aplomb." And Coroner and jury for a moment looked baffled, and even Mr. Gryce, of whose face I caught a passing glimpse at this instant, stared at the head of his cane, as if it were of thicker wood than he expected and had more knotty points on it than even his accustomed hand liked to encounter.

Another effort was not out of place, however; and the Coroner, summoning up some of the pompous severity he found useful at times, asked the witness if his attention had been drawn to the dead woman's hands.

He acknowledged that it had. "The physician who made the autopsy urged me to look at them, and I did; they were certainly very like my wife's."

"Only like."

"I cannot say that they were my wife's. Do you wish me to perjure myself?"

"A man should know his wife's hands as well as he knows her face."

"Very likely."

"And you are ready to swear these were not the hands of your wife?"

"I am ready to swear I did not so consider them."

"And that is all?"

"That is all."

The Coroner frowned and cast a glance at the jury. They needed prodding now and then, and this is the way he prodded them. As soon as they gave signs of recognizing the hint he gave them, he turned back, and renewed his examination in these words:

"Mr. Van Burnam, did your brother at your request hand you the keys of your father's house on the morning of the day on which this tragedy occured?"

"He did."

"Have you those keys now?"

"I have not."

"What have you done with them? Did you return them to your brother?"

"No; I see where your inquiries are tending, and I do not suppose you will believe my simple word; but I lost the keys on the day I received them; that is why—"

"Well you may continue, Mr. Van Burnam."

"I have no more to say; my sentence was not worth completing."

The murmur which rose about him seemed to show dissatisfaction; but he remained imperturable, or rather like a man who did not hear. I began to feel a most painful interest in the inquiry, and dreaded, while I anxiously anticipated his further examination.

"You lost the keys; may I ask when and where?"

"That I do not know; they were missing when I searched for them; missing from my pocket, I mean."

"Ah! and when did you search for them?"

"The next day—after I had heard—of—of what had taken place in my father's house."

The hesitations were those of a man weighing his reply. They told on the jury, as all such hesitations do; and made the Coroner lose an atom of the respect he had hitherto shown this easy-going witness.

"And you do not know what became of them?"

"No."

"Or into whose hands they fell?"

"No, but probably into the hands of the wretch—"

To the astonishment of everybdy he was on the verge of vehemence but, becaming sensible of it, he controlled himself with a suddenness that was almost shocking.

"Find the murderer of this poor girl," said he, with a quiet air that was more thrilling than any display of passion, "and ask him where he got the keys with which he opened the door of my father's house at midnight."

Was this a challenge, or just the natural outburst of an innocent man? Neither the jury nor the Coroner seemed to know, the former looking startled and the latter nonplussed. But Mr. Gryce, who had moved now into view, smoothed the head of his cane with quite a loving touch, and did not seem at this moment to feel its inequalities objectionable.

"We will certainly try to follow your advice," the Coroner assured him. "Meanwhile we must ask how many rings your wife is in the habit of wearing?"

"Five. Two on the left hand and three on the right."

"Do you know these rings?"

"I do."

"Better than you know her hands?"

"As well, sir."

"Were they on her hands when you parted from her in Haddam?"

"They were."

"Did she always wear them?"

"Almost always. Indeed I do not ever remember seeing her take off more than one of them."

"Which one?"

"The ruby with the diamond setting."

"Had the dead girl any rings on when you saw her?"

"No, sir."

"Did you look to see?"

"I think I did in the first shock of the discovery."

"And you saw none?"

"No, sir."

"And from this you concluded she was not your wife?"

"From this and other things."

"Yet you must have seen that the woman was in the habit of wearing rings, even if they were not on her hands at that moment?"

"Why, sir? What should I know about her habits?"

"Is not that a ring I see now on your little finger?"

"It is; my seal ring which I always wear."

"Will you pull it off?"

"Pull it off?"

"If you please; it is a simple test I am requiring of you, sir."

The witness looked astonished, but pulled off the ring at once.

"Here it is," said he.

"Thank you, but I do not want it. I merely want you to look at your finger."

The witness complied, evidently more nonplussed than disturbed by this command.

"Do you see any difference between that finger and the one next it?"

"Yes; there is a mark about my little finger showing where the ring has pressed."

"Very good; there were such marks on the fingers of the dead girl, who, as you say, had no rings on. I saw them, and perhaps you did, yourself?"

"I did not; I did not look closely enough."

"They were on the little finger of the right hand, on the marriage finger of the same. On which fingers did your wife wear rings?"

"On those same fingers, sir, but I will not accept this fact as proving her identity with the deceased. Most women do wear rings and on those very fingers."

The Coroner was nettled, but he was not discouraged. He exchanged looks with Mr. Gryce, but nothing further passed between them and we were left to conjecture what this interchange of glances meant.

The witness, who did not seem to be affected either by the character of this examination or by the conjectures to which it gave rise, preserved his sang-froid and eyed the Coroner as he might any other questioner with suitable respect but with no fear and but little impatience. And yet he must have known the horrible suspicion darkening the minds of many people present and suspected, even if against his will, that this examination significant as it was, was but the forerunner of another and yet more serious one.

"You are very determined," remarked the Coroner in beginning again, "not to accept the very substantial proofs presented you of the identity between the object of this inquiry and your missing wife. But we are not yet ready to give up the struggle, and so I must ask if you heard the description given by Miss Ferguson of the manner in which your wife was dressed on leaving Haddam?

"I have."

"Was it a correct account? Did she wear a black and white plaid silk and a hat trimmed with various coloured ribbons and flowers?"

"She did."

"Do you remember the hat? Were you with her when she bought it, or did you ever have your attention drawn to it in any particular way?"

"I remember the hat."

"Is that it, Mr. Van Burnam?"

I was watching Howard, and the start he gave was so pronounced and the emotion he displayed was in such violent contrast to the self-possession he had maintained up to this point, that I was held spell-bound by the shock I received, and forebore to look at the object which the Coroner had suddenly held up for inspection. But when I did turn my head towards it, I recognized at once the multi-coloured hat which Mr. Gryce had brought in from the third room of Mr. Van Burnam's house on the evening I was there, and realized almost in the same breath that great as this mystery had hitherto seemed it was likely to prove yet greater before its proper elucidation was arrived at.

"Was that found in my father's house? Where—where was that hat found?" stammered the witness, so far forgetting himself as to point towards the object in question.

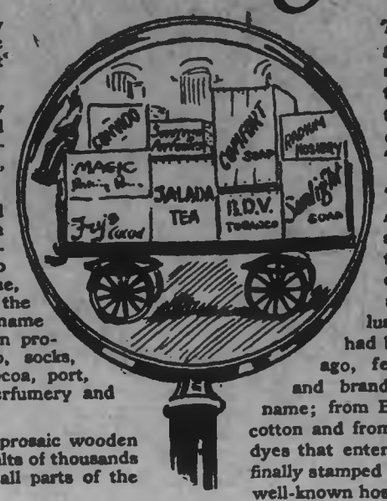
The Tale The Wagons Tell

My office window faces a street, close to the railway freight sheds.

All day long a steady stream of trucks and lorries lumber by—loaded with boxes, barrels and bales.

One truck I noticed the other afternoon was particularly interesting. No two boxes were the same, and stencilled on the end of each was the name of some well-known product—soap, tobacco, socks, breakfast food, cocoa, port, tea, chocolates, perfumery and baking powder.

Gathered there in prosaic wooden boxes were the results of thousands of hand's labor in all parts of the world.



The cocoa had been grown in Brazil, shipped to Bristol, transhipped to Montreal and finally distributed from Toronto.

The tea was gathered by swart-skinned natives of the romantic island of Ceylon; from sunny Portugal the luscious, big grapes had been gathered years ago, fermented, bottled and branded with a famous name; from Egypt had come the cotton and from South America the dyes that entered into the product finally stamped with the brand of a well-known hosiery.

There, behind that obviously prosaic truck-load of freight was the whole romance of modern commerce—the skilled production, the universal demand for food, drink and raiment, and the world-wide distribution of the things we use every day.

And then I speculated why we use these things every day, instead of some other things; and that brought me plump back to my own job of advertising.

The names of some of the boxes on the lorrie were known everywhere to-day, but had been unknown a few years ago; and I saw then more clearly than ever before that Advertising is really a great channel digger. It is like the Panama Canal. You can sail from Montreal to Vancouver now, around the Horn. You can get there, but it is going to take months. A year or so from now you will sail through the Panama Canal and chop the journey to less than half. A new channel will have been dug.

The great names in commerce to-day are those of the manufacturers who have let modern advertising steam-shovel a channel across the isthmus of distributing difficulties.

The great names in the commerce of to-morrow will be those of men who widen and dredge this channel so that the greater traffic may pass smoothly and quickly from the source of production to the homes of the consumer.

THE TELEPHONE A MYSTERY.

Any One Can Use It, Yet Nobody Is Able to Understand It.

The telephone business is not like any other business on the face of the earth. It is the most remarkable combination of science and mystery, of human and mechanical, of wire and wits, of highly skilled specialists and the general public.

Any little child can be the engineer of a telephone talk train. Any little baby can send its coolngs hundreds of miles along the wire to its father at the other end. And yet, at the mystery end of the telephone, not even John J. Carty, master of telephone science, can explain or even comprehend some of the phenomena of a telephone exchange.

I once asked Alexander Graham Bell if he really understood the workings of a telephone receiver, and he replied: "Why, of course not. Nobody does." I also asked Mr. Emile Berliner if he could explain exactly what happened in a telephone transmitter, and he replied: "No, I can't. It is as great a mystery to-day as it was thirty years ago."

Think of the marvel of it! Here is an intricate network of wires and disks and electric currents and electric lights and keys and jacks and bells and cords and cables. This mechanism is so delicate that it is actually operated by the slightest sound. It is not set in motion by steam or gasoline, but by breath. The slight vibration of the vocal cords is actually the power that puts the vast telephone mechanism in operation.

A telephone system is an immense and widespread mechanism of voice machinery. There is nothing else like it. It stands by itself as a marvelous thing which any one can use and which nobody can understand.

A dispatch from Paris says that women have stopped drinking tea because it makes their teeth long. It is recommended, however, by Mrs. Pankhurst, because it makes the tongue sharp.

Admiral Dewey's statement that our navy is in admirable shape will have great weight with European countries, especially Spain. The Spaniards put entire faith in Dewey's judgment of navies.

The latest English war craft is called a "destroyer of destroyers." Presently there will be a "destroyer of destroyers of destroyers." Why not designate them by mathematical powers, thus: Destroyer², Destroyer³ and so on.

Mapmaking.

The earliest maps of which we have any knowledge were made in Egypt. They were wooden tablets, on which were traced land and sea, roads, rivers, highways, etc. Marinus of Tyre, 150 A. D., was the first to attempt a map on scientific principles. The maps in use by the Greeks and Romans were fairly accurate, so far as they went, but those in use during the middle ages were alarmingly inaccurate. It is only within recent years, say since the middle of the last century, that it was possible to make a complete and reliable map of the world, and even yet the best map is subject to slight changes.

After the small boy emerged from the quick lunch place he opened a paper bag and revealed a club sandwich. Glancing furtively around, he lifted off the top slice of bread, took out a piece of chicken, ate it, and replaced the bread. A few moments later he again removed the "lid," extracted a piece of bacon, and repeated this process as he shuffled along Market Street until all the bacon was gone and most of the chicken. A man who had watched the process with curiosity tapped the boy on the shoulder and inquired:

"Say, kid, why don't you eat your sandwich instead of picking at it that way?"

"Dasn't!" replied the youth. "'Tain't mine!"

"That Affair Next Door"

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

"The house in which this dead girl was found?"

"Yes,"—impatiently.

"Did you think she might throw herself at his feet there?"

"She said she might; and as she is romantic, foolishly romantic, I thought her fully capable of doing so."

"And so you did not seek her in the morning?"

"No, sir."

"How about the afternoon?"

This was a close question; we saw that he was affected by it though he tried to carry it off bravely.

"I did not see her in the afternoon. I was in a restless frame of mind, and did not remain in the city."

"Ah! indeed! and where did you go?"

"Unless necessary, I prefer not to say."

"It is necessary."

"I went to Coney Island.'

"Alone?"

"Yes."

"Did you see anybody there you know?"

"No."

"And when did you return?"

'At midnight."

"When did you reach your rooms?"

"Later."

'How much later?"

Two or three hours."

"And where were you during those hours?"

I was walking the streets."

The ease, the quietness with which he made these acknowledgments were remarkable. The jury to a man honoured him with a prolonged stare, and the awe-struck crowd scarcely breathed during their utterance. At the last sentence a murmur broke out, at which he raised his head and with an air of surprise surveyed the people before him. Though he must have known what their astonishment meant, he neither quailed nor blanched, and while not in reality a handsome man, he certainly looked handsome at this moment.

I did not know what to think; so forbore to think anything. Meanwhile the examination went on.

"Mr. Van Burnam, I have been told that the locket I see there dangling from your watch-chain contains a lock of your wife's hair. Is it so?"

"I have a lock of her hair in this; yes."

"Here is a lock clipped from the head of the unknown woman whose identity we seek. Have you any objection to comparing the two?"

"It is not an agreeable task you have set me," was the imperturable response; "but I have no objection to doing what you ask." And calmly lifting the chain he took off the locket, opened it, and held it out courteously toward the Coroner. "May I ask you to make the first comparison," he said.

The Coroner, taking the locket, laid the two locks of brown hair together, and after a moment's contemplation of them both, surveyed the young man seriously, and remarked:

"They are of the same shade. Shall I pass them down to the jury?"

Howard bowed. You would have thought he was in a drawing-room, and in the act of bestowing a favour. But his brother Franklin showed a very different countenance, and as for their father, one could not even see his face, he so persistently held up his hand before it.

The jury, wide-awake now, passed the locket along, with many sly nods and a few whispered words. When it came back to the Coroner, he took it and handed it to Mr. Van Burnam, saying:

"I wish you would observe the similarity for yourself. I can hardly detect any difference between them."

"Thank you! I am willing to take your word for it," replied the young man, with most astonishing "aplomb." And Coroner and jury for a moment looked baffled, and even Mr. Gryce, of whose face I caught a passing glimpse at this instant, stared at the head of his cane, as if it were of thicker wood than he expected and had more knotty points on it than even his accustomed hand liked to encounter.

Another effort was not out of place, however; and the Coroner, summoning up some of the pompous severity he found useful at times, asked the witness if his attention had been drawn to the dead woman's hands.

He acknowledged that it had. "The physician who made the autopsy urged me to look at them, and I did; they were certainly very like my wife's."

"Only like."

"I cannot say that they were my wife's. Do you wish me to perjure myself?"

"A man should know his wife's hands as well as he knows her face.'

"Very likely."

"And you are ready to swear these were not the hands of your wife?"

"I am ready to swear I did not so consider them."

"And that is all?"

"That is all."

The Coroner frowned and cast a glance at the jury. They needed prodding now and then, and this is the way he prodded them. As soon as they gave signs of recognising the hint he gave them, he turned back, and renewed his examination in these words:

"Mr. Van Burnam, did your brother at your request hand you the keys of your father's house on the morning of the day on which this tragedy occured?"

"He did."

"Have you those keys now?"

"I have not."

"What have you done with them? Did you return them to your brother?"

"No; I see where your inquiries are tending, and I do not suppose you will believe my simple word; but I lost the keys on the day I received them; that is why—"

"Well you may continue, Mr. Van Burnam."

"I have no more to say; my sentence was not worth completing."

The murmur which rose about him seemed to show dissatisfaction; but he remained imperturable, or rather like a man who did not hear. I began to feel a most painful interest in the inquiry, and dreaded, while I anxiously anticipated his further examination.

"You lost the keys; may I ask when and where?"

"That I do not know; they were missing when I searched for them; missing from my pocket, I mean."

"Ah! and when did you search for them?"

"The next day—after I had heard—of—of what had taken place in my father's house."

The hesitations were those of a man weighing his reply. They told on the jury, as all such hesitations do; and made the Coroner lose an atom of the respect he had hitherto shown this easy-going witness.

"And you do not know what became of them?"

"No."

"Or into whose hands they fell?"

"No, but probably into the hands of the wretch—"

To the astonishment of everybdy he was on the verge of vehemence but, becaming sensible of it, he controlled himself with a suddenness that was almost shocking.

"Find the murderer of this poor girl," said he, with a quiet air that was more thrilling than any display of passion, "and ask him where he got the keys with which he opened the door of my father's house at midnight."

Was this a challenge, or just the natural outburst of an innocent man? Neither the jury nor the Coroner seemed to know, the former looking startled and the latter nonplussed. But Mr. Gryce, who had moved now into view, smoothed the head of his cane with quite a loving touch, and did not seem at this moment to feel its inequalities objectionable.

"We will certainly try to follow your advice," the Coroner assured him. "Meanwhile we must ask how many rings your wife is in the habit of wearing?"

"Five. Two on the left hand and three on the right."

"Do you know these rings?"

"I do."

"Better than you know her hands?"

"As well, sir."

"Were they on her hands when you parted from her in Haddam?"

"They were."

"Did she always wear them?"

"Almost always. Indeed I do not ever remember seeing her take off more than one of them."

"Which one?"

"The ruby with the diamond setting."

"Had the dead girl any rings on when you saw her?"

"No, sir."

"Did you look to see?"

"I think I did in the first shock of the discovery."

"And you saw none?"

"No, sir."

"And from this you concluded she was not your wife?"

"From this and other things."

"Yet you must have seen that the woman was in the habit of wearing rings, even if they were not on her hands at that moment?"

"Why, sir? What should I know about her habits?"

"Is not that a ring I see now on your little finger?"

"It is; my seal ring which I always wear."

"Will you pull it off?"

"Pull it off!"

"If you please; it is a simple test I am requiring of you, sir."

The witness looked astonished, but pulled off the ring at once.

"Here it is," said he.

"Thank you, but I do not want it. I merely want you to look at your finger."

The witness complied, evidently more nonplussed than disturbed by this command.

"Do you see any difference between that finger and the one next it?"

"Yes; there is a mark about my little finger showing where the ring has pressed."

"Very good; there were such marks on the fingers of the dead girl, who, as you say, had no rings on. I saw them, and perhaps you did, yourself?"

"I did not; I did not look closely enough."

"They were on the little finger of the right hand, on the marriage finger of the same. On which fingers did your wife wear rings?"

"On those same fingers, sir, but I will not accept this fact as proving her identity with the deceased. Most women do wear rings and on those very fingers."

The Coroner was nettled, but he was not discouraged. He exchanged looks with Mr. Gryce, but nothing further passed between them and we were left to conjecture what this interchange of glances meant.

The witness, who did not seem to be affected either by the character of this examination or by the conjectures to which it gave rise, preserved his sang-froid and eyed the Coroner as he might any other questioner with suitable respect but with no fear and but little impatience. And yet he must have known the horrible suspicion darkening the minds of many people present and suspected, even if against his will, that this examination significant as it was, was but the forerunner of another and yet more serious one.

"You are very determined," remarked the Coroner in beginning again, "not to accept the very substantial proofs presented you of the identity between the object of this inquiry and your missing wife. But we are not yet ready to give up the struggle, and so I must ask if you heard the description given by Miss Ferguson of the manner in which your wife was dressed on leaving Haddam?

"I have."

"Was it a correct account? Did she wear a black and white plaid silk and a hat trimmed with various coloured ribbons and flowers?"

"She did."

"Do you remember the hat? Were you with her when she bought it, or did you ever have your attention drawn to it in any particular way?"

"I remember the hat."

"Is that it, Mr. Van Burnam?"

I was watching Howard, and the start he gave was so pronounced and the emotion he displayed was in such violent contrast to the self-possession he had maintained up to this point, that I was held spell-bound by the shock I received, and forebore to look at the object which the Coroner had suddenly held up for inspection. But when I did turn my head towards it, I recognized at once the multi-coloured hat which Mr. Gryce had brought in from the third room of Mr. Van Burnam's house on the evening I was there, and realized almost in the same breath that great as this mystery had hitherto seemed it was likely to prove yet greater before its proper elucidation was arrived at.

"Was that found in my father's house? Where—where was that hat found?" stammered the witness, so far forgetting himself as to point towards the object in question.

NEW CONVENIENT TRAIN TO WINNIPEG.

CANADIAN PACIFIC

The popularity of Canadian Pacific service, and the excellence of that road's equipment, has been so greatly appreciated by the travelling public that it has been found necessary to put into service an entirely new Through Standard Express Train between Toronto and Winnipeg.

Commencing Sunday, October 26th, the "Gate City Express" will leave Toronto at 2.30 p.m., and will run daily thereafter, arirving Winnipeg at 8.25 a.m. second morning. The train will consist of the highest-class modern equipment; Observation Compartment Car, Standard Sleeping Cars, Tourist Sleeping Car, Dining Car, First-class Coach and Colonist Car. This will be found the most convenient and best train between Toronto and Winnipeg on account of the daylight departure from Toronto at an hour when the Union Station is not badly congested, and also on account of the early hour of arrival at Winnipeg.

The present "Vancouver Express" will continue to leave Toronto at 10.20 p.m. daily and will consist of the same equipment as the "Gate City Express." This train is the best to take for points west of Winnipeg, but for Winnipeg and east the "Gate City Express" is the right train to travel by.

UNGRATEFUL ALL THE HUMAN RACE

"O Come, Let Us Give Thanks Unto the Lord; For He Is Good!"

HIS DIVINE MERCY ENDURETH

Ingratitude a Sin and a Shame—All Should Render Praise—Though Not All May Pray—The Difference—Causes For Thankfulness Why So Few Respond—Causes of Ingratitude and Discontent—Dumb Brutes More Grateful—The Remedy.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its insertion.]

Indianapolis, Ind., November 23.—Pastor Russell gave two addresses here today. We report text, "O give the one from the thanks unto the Lord; for He is good; for His mercy endureth forever!" (Psalm 136:1.) The Pastor said in part:

Ingratitude is one of the least excusable sins. But alas, it is everywhere manifested. Rich and poor, learned and ignorant, appear to be growing in the spirit of ingratitude, unthankfulness, discontent, murmuring. And all this is in the face of the greatest blessings that the world has ever known. With the dawning of the New Era God seems to be opening His hand and showering blessings everywhere. "He openeth His hand and satisfieth every living thing" — except rebellious man. The more blessings coming to man, the more intelligence he attains, the less he seems to recognize the Fountain, the Source, of his favors. It seems paradoxical, but yet it is true, that the day of the greatest favors the world has ever known is the day of the greatest ingratitude and discontent.

The brute creation look up to man as their god—and properly so; for this is the Divine arrangement, that man should be the god to beasts, fish and fowl. Man is in the likeness of his Creator, who is the God of the Universe. With what shame do we realize that the ox knoweth his owner and the ass his master's crib, yet man ignores his Maker, and seems bent upon forgetting Him!

There is a reason for all this. This formation of the human brain shows us that reverence and gratitude to God would be the natural disposition of humanity. The organs of veneration, worship, spirituality, lie at the apex of the human constitution. In nothing therefore could man, rightly guided, find so much pleasure, peace and satisfaction as in the recognition of his God and the acknowledgment of obligation to Him. Why, then, the aversion to God, the endeavor to forget Him? the ignoring of His blessings and mercies, and the attempt to account for them all as matters of chance, operations of nature? Why is it that the family dog exhibits more of the spirit of loyalty, reverence, obedience and confidence in his master than man, with a higher intellect and capability, exercises toward the God of all grace, the Father of Mercies?—2 Corinthians 1:3.

Our Lord in the parable of the Wheat and the Tares declares that He sowed good seed—pure Truth, intended to bring forth true, loyal children of God, children of the Kingdom. He tells us also that when the Apostles had fallen asleep in death the enemy, Satan, oversowed the wheat-field with tare seed—false doctrines. St. Paul designated these "doctrines of devils." (1 Timothy 4:1.) In due time the tare seed brought forth in the Church a terrible crop of demon doctrines, which have gone forth to the whole world to misrepresent God and His purposes.

Undoubtedly it is these doctrines of demons that have gotten their hold in our minds from childhood's hours, which have effected such a poisonous influence upon humanity as to drive the masses away from God—some in fear, some in disgust, some in total unbelief. Is it any wonder that intelligent people should try to convince themselves that there is no such God as the creeds have represented? It is not strange. It really is to their credit that they refuse to worship a being pictured in the creeds as far worse than the most depraved human being that ever was born.

It is no wonder that men try to disbelieve in a God who, they are told, had plotted the eternal torture of the race long before He created it, and has made every preparation for human torture to all eternity! Is it any wonder that the world repudiates the Bible, and desires to repudiate it, since Christians tell us that the Bible is the authority for all the atrocious theories respecting the Almighty's purposes?

We need not wonder. We are merely reaping in the present unbelief and discontent the results of the false doctrines handed down to us, and believed by us to be the Word of God, without the proper exercise of our heads or hearts to prove these and to see that they are doctrines of devils, wholly separate from and contrary to the teaching of God's Word.

Notice how contrary our text is to everything we have been taught respecting the Heavenly Father. It gives us the true basis for things—an appreciation of God's goodness: "O give thanks unto the Lord; for He is good!" Then follows the assurance that Divine mercy endureth forever. Ah! this is the merciful God which our souls have hungered after! When St. Paul declared that the heathen were feeling after God that they might find Him, it was this true God whose mercy endureth forever that they were feeling after. And when we presented to them a horrible misrepresentation, showing Him to be the instigator of eternal torture for all our race, this blasphemy has served to turn their hearts from Him and from the Bible.

It is high time that we realized the terrible mistake we made. It is high time that we began to preach the Message of our text, "His mercy endureth forever." This expression respecting the endlessness of Divine Mercy is repeated twenty-five times in this one Psalm alone. And yet we as Christians have denied this statement, and have declared instead that God's mercy is only for the Elect; that the thousands of millions of heathendom and other hundreds of millions in Christendom will have no mercy.

Knowing that the majority of minds are darkened through sin, ignorance, and superstition; knowing that the Apostle declares that Satan has blinded the minds of all unbelievers; knowing that the Lord through the Apostles and the Prophets has declared that the coming Age of Messiah's Kingdom is the time when all the deaf ears will be unstopped and all the blinded eyes opened, and that the glory of the Lord shall cover the whole earth—in spite of all this we have cried out to the world that there will be no mercy for them beyond the grave, that God's mercy does not endure forever, but merely for the time we call the present life.

Why do we thus contradict the Almighty? What motive is there behind this? In seeking to restrict the grace of God to the present unfavorable time of blindness and darkness, we have had the encouragement of Satan, and the visions, messages and dreams caused by the fallen angels. St. Paul pictured our day exactly, saying, "Many shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils."

It is time for all who love the Lord and the Bible to get straight themselves and then to help others. It is time that the world knew what real cause it has for gratitude to God and for contentment with the blessings now being enjoyed. It is time to toll them that the death of Christ is to be the full offset of the sin of Adam, and that the death penalty of Adam's sin is to be fully lifted. It is time to tell them that during Messiah's Reign of a thousand years the world will rise again out of sin and death to righteousness and life everlasting—the reversal of the present reign of Sin and Death.

It is time to tell them that God indeed has been electing, or selecting saintly ones, but not to the injury of the non-elect; that the work of the Elect, in association with Jesus for a thousand years, will be the blessing of all the families of the earth—the non-elect.

It is time to tell the world that the Bible hell is the tomb, Sheol, Hades; that from it all will be redeemed and will have opportunity for resurrection to perfection of life everlasting; and that only the wilfully wicked will die the Second Death, symbolically illustrated by Gehenna. It is time to tell them that all—both good and bad, rich and poor—have been going to the Bible hell, the tomb; and that the First Resurrection will be constituted only of the saintly, the Church, who are to be associated with Christ in His Kingdom.—Revelation 20:6.

It is time to tell them that none except those begotten of the Holy Spirit since Pentecost will ever reach the Heavenly condition and share the Divine nature. It is time to tell them that God's blessed provision for Adam and the remainder of his race is Restitution—restoration to human perfection from which they fell, and to a world-wide Eden—God's footstool made glorious.

It is time to tell them that all the thorns, thistles, trials, difficulties, sorrows and tears of the past six thousand years are part of the penalty, "Dying, thou shalt die." It is time to tell them that God during Messiah's Kingdom, by uplifting the race, will wipe away the tears from off all faces. It is time to let them know that He is indeed a God whose mercy endureth forever; and that although His mercy is as yet extended only to the Church and to Natural Israel, eventually in the coming Age it shall extend to every member of the race for which Christ died.

On the basis of this knowledge of God, knowledge of why sorrow and death prevail, the world would be ready to acknowledge the grace of God, His boundless mercy, the willing and glad to give thanks to Him.

We make a sharp distinction between the privilege of prayer and thanksgiving. All who appreciate God's goodness may offer worship in the sense of thanks, acknowledgment, appreciation. Prayer is a wholly different matter. None have the privilege of prayer with the assurance it will be heard except those who approach God through the great Advocate whom He has appointed. And none can approach through this Advocate except on the Divine terms that they become His disciples, and take up their cross and follow Him.

Thus the number privileged to approach the Throne of Heavenly Grace and obtain help in time of need is limited to the Church of Christ. These have special guidance in all their affairs, because they have come into the family of God. But even those who are aliens and strangers may pay homage in the presence of the great King—just as only the citizens of a country may have the ballot or other privileges of citizenship, but the foreigner may uncover his head, hail the ruler and acknowledge blessings enjoyed, even though he has not become a citizen and does not enjoy the privileges of the ballot, etc.

A beautiful and appropriate custom prevails in the United States—the setting apart of the last Thursday in each November as a day of special thanksgiving to God for the harvest bounties and all the blessings of the year past. With the majority it has deteriorated into a mere formalism—a holiday. The cause of this is the growth of unbelief, and unbelief has grown with higher education; for the educated, repelled by the false pictures of the Almighty, have turned from the God of the Bible and from any conception of a personal God, and are instructing the flower of the rising generation in infidelity, unbelief in the Bible—we might almost say, in atheism.

This is the key to the situation. The only way back to God, to faith, contentment, thanksgiving, is through the dissemination of the knowledge of the glory of God, that He is a God of Love, that His mercy endureth forever, that He has only begun His salvation in the gathering of the Church, and that eventually it shall extend to every creature, during Messiah's Thousand-Year Reign.

Let us not wait for denominational movement, which will never come. Let us each feel a personal responsibility. Let each one who receives the blessing "show forth the praises of Him who called us out of darkness into His marvelous light." Let each one who appreciates the true basis of thankfulness report the Message of the Kingdom to others, that they, too, may be blessed.

The Bible, however, does not lead us to hope for any such condition at the present time. On the contrary, it tells that the present unbelief and discontent will increase, and will involve the entire world in a Time of Trouble, the climax of which will be anarchy.

However, the Bible proceeds to tell that in man's extremity, when faith shall have largely fled from the world, when discontent shall have burst into anarchy, when the present social fabric shall have collapsed, then God will, nevertheless, be merciful; for His mercy endureth forever.

God's mercy will then be manifested in the prompt establishment of the Messianic Kingdom. Man's extremity will be God's opportunity for showing forth His great mercy and love; for He loved the world when they were yet sinners.—Romans 5:8.

If our hearts have not been overcome by the tidal waves of unbelief sweeping over the world, it is a cause for gratitude to God, and for a resolution that, by His grace, we will seek to know Him better, appreciate Him more, and increase our thankfulness. If we have a faith that recognizes Divine providence, especially in the affairs of the Church, and also in the affairs of the world, let us be grateful, and let us remember that faith can be cultivated or can be dwarfed.

With the disciples of old let us pray, "Lord, increase our faith"; and let us use the means the Lord has provided for the increase of our faith. Let us note in God's Word the fulfilments of His promises and the application of the Scriptures to our own personal experiences. Let us grow in appreciation of the truths of the Bible, in increased energy in the study of the Bible and in the application of its Message to our own hearts. Let us also grow in increased thankfulness and effort to show forth the praises of the Lord and to assist others out of darkness into the light which we ourselves are more and more enjoying.

While we are not to think of God in the way we do of man, that He would be similarly hurt or pleased or offended or happified, nevertheless we know that man was made in God's image. We are justified, therefore, in assuming that as we would appreciate thankfulness, gratitude, in the heart of those who are sharers of the bounties—our children or our servants or our dumb animals—so God is surely pleased with those who are appreciative of His goodness, who think upon His favors and who make acknowledgment of them, who seek to show forth His praises to others and who by faith are trusting Him even where they cannot trace Him.

My hope is that not only the audience I am now addressing will have a very happy and appreciative Thanksgiving Day on Thursday next, but that the same blessing may extend to all of the larger congregation which I address weekly through the public press. Even if but a few shall be made more thankful to God for His mercies, that few, I am sure, will be made more happy themselves, more pleasing to God. And if they be not already of His consecrated people, I am sure that the gratitude arising from their hearts in sweet incense to our Maker will react upon themselves favorably and help them to that condition of heart and mind in which they might become holy and acceptable sacrifices to God through Jesus Christ. — Romans 12:1.

Suffered Intense Agony With His Back.

Kidneys Were The Cause.

Weak back is caused by weak kidneys, and on the first approach or evidence of kidney trouble Doan's Kidney Pills should be used, and serious trouble avoided.

Doan's Kidney Pills go right to the seat of the trouble, cure the weak aching back, and prevent any further complications arising.

Mr. John Briggs, Whitewood, Sask., writes:—"I am sending you this testimonial out of pure gratitude, as I am not a believer in patent medicines, but I got so run down, that I became quite willing to give anything a trial. I paid a visit to our local druggist, and told him I was suffering intense agony with my back. He told me I had kidney trouble, and handed me a box of Doan's Kidney Pills, saying it was the best thing he could possibly give me. I tried them, and the effect was certainly marvelous. They are worth $10.00 a box of anybody's money, and I would not be without a box by me. I certainly owe my present condition to Doan's Kidney Pills."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

When Buzzards Are Helpless.

Some of nature's most active creatures show strange helplessness under certain conditions. Place a buzzard in a pen six or eight feet square entirely open at the top, and the bird will be as absolutely a prisoner as if it were hermetically sealed in the inclosure. This is because buzzards never begin a flight from the ground without starting on a run of three or four yards. If they cannot have that preliminary run they either cannot or will not attempt to fly, and so a buzzard will remain a prisoner for life in a jail with a wide open top.

So with the bumblebee. One of these lively insects dropped into a goblet or tumbler will remain there always unless taken out, because it never notices the means of escape at the top.—New York Sun.

Eating Your Meals.

A perfect digestion is the secret of the buoyancy and vitality of a really healthy man. The state of your body and mind at the time you partake of a meal are a big feature as to the ultimate good the food will do you. If physically and mentally tired always rest for at least ten minutes before eating. Bad temper is enough to give you indigestion, while cheerful company and interesting talk causes the muscles and juices of the stomach to work properly. It seems incredible that such ulterior forces should be of importance, but science will not be denied. Sooner than eat when not properly hungry, miss a meal. Never take food more than three times a day; use will soon accustom you to this habit. Take your meals in a well ventilated room

One Hundred Varieties of Marble.

Although Vermont occupies only a small space on the map when compared with the great area of some of the other states of the Union, yet its mineral resources are very important. This little state leads the world in the production of marble and granite, and the deposits apparently are inexhaustible. The greatest center of the marble industry of the world is in the vicinity of Rutland, Vt., particularly at Proctor and West Rutland, while the greatest center of the granite industry of the world is in and around Barre and Hardwick, Vt.

Although twenty-six states furnish marble, Vermont supplies about 70 per cent of the finer grades suitable for monumental work and statuary. This state furnishes 41 per cent of all the building marble used in this country, and the demand for this kind of stone is increasing. There are about a hundred varieties of marble quarried in Vermont, ranging from the purest white, suitable for statuary, to jet black.—Walter H. Crockett in National Magazine.

Probably the acme of uselessness is expressed by the harbor of Pompeii, which was discovered the other day. It is 3,750 feet inland.

A Baltimore scientist has returned to America with 20,000,000,000 malignant germs which he will study. If you don't believe it count 'em.

With the new law staring them in the face, it seems probable that some people may undergo a considerable bookkeeping decrease of income.

Train and Track.

Nuremberg, Germany, is to spend $762,000 next year for street car lines and extensions.

Electric street cars are superseding the old compressed air cars in the streets of Paris.

The Pennsylvania has completed its new automatic signal system between Harrisburg and Altglen, on the middle division. The work cost the railroad about $650,000.

If plans for standardizing the gauge of the railways of Australia as recommended by the chief engineers of the different lines be carried out it will mean an expenditure of $180,000,000.

The Secret of Good Digestion

In perfect health, with regular and healthful action of the liver and kidneys, you need not know there is such a thing as digestion or indigestion. Unfortunately, however, modern life is artificial, and not many people avoid suffering more or less from troubles of this nature.

The great secret lies in keeping the liver and kidneys in health and vigour, for then the food is passed quickly along the alimentary canal, the nutritive portions being assimilated in the blood stream and the poisoned waste materials are passed out of the body.

When the liver and kidneys get wrong you will obtain relief most promptly and effectively by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. If chronic indigestion is to be cured it must be by enlivening the action of these filtering and excretory organs. To persons who have thought only of the stomach as being the offending organ this may seem strange, but any competent physician will tell you this is correct.

LONDON AND BERLIN TANGO MAD — DOINGS OF KING AND QUEEN

Tango Reigns at Opening of Berlin Dancing Season, but Society Only Looks

The United States Ambassador Occupies a Box, with Professor Archibald Coolidge, Major G. T. Langhorne and Mr. Willing Spencer Among His Guests.

AMERICAN CHURCH LADIES ELECT OFFICERS

[SPECIAL DISPATCH.]
BERLIN, Nov. 22

THE dancing season was inaugurated this week by a big charity ball for the benefit of the Convalescent Home for Policemen, a philanthropic institution of which the German Crown Princess is royal patron. Taking advantage of the tango epidemic, the committee in charge of the arrangements gave this irresistible cachet to the programme, which was dedicated to dances and fashion.

It was hoped that society would take part in the dancing competition, but, as at Baden Baden, society sat and watched the professional dancers from various cafés dansant. One room was devoted to the mysteries of the tango, and here the spectators were three deep, with chairs furnishing a vantage point for the rearmost. The United States Ambassador occupied a box, having as guests Professor Archibald Coolidge, Major G. T. Langhorne, Mr. Willing Spencer, Herr von Kliest, Captain Roesler, Secretary of the Olympian games, and Mr. Lanier Winslow.

At a business meeting of the Ladies' Union of the American Church the following board of officers was elected:—President, Mrs. Anna B. McElree; Vice Presidents, Mrs. Stephen H. McFadden and Mrs. Bernard Goldsmith; Recording Secretary, Mrs. Grace Mackenzie Wood; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. Arthur Dunning; Treasurer, Mrs. Ernest L. Elliot.

Post for Mrs. Gerard.

A motion was unanimously received to invite Mrs. J. W. Gerard to become honorary president of the organization. Mrs. Gerard will identify herself at once with the work of the American Woman's Club, in which she is very much interested. When Mrs. Thackara leaves for Paris the duties of acting president will be assumed by Mrs. Gerard. This office has been held by the wives of two previous American Ambassadors to Germany. Mrs. Andrew D. White was always in the chair whenever she was in the city, and Mrs. Charlemagne Tower was also chief officer of the club pending the arrival of Mrs. Elizabeth Pickerall, who served the interests of the club with such efficiency two seasons ago and who is now returning to resume her connections with some department of the organization of the club under temporary management.

This week a check was received from the headquarters of the Red Cross Society in Washington reimbursing the club treasury for $400 advanced by Mrs. Thackara, acting for the club, for the purpose of sending a Red Cross outfit to the corps of American physicians who did such efficient work in the Balkans.

Tea for Mrs. Thackara.

Mrs. Albert S. Wilkie was hostess of the largest tea of the week, given for Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Thackara. Mrs. S. B. Conger and Mrs. George N. Allen assisted in receiving the guests, among whom were the American Ambassador and Mrs. J. W. Gerard, the Cuban Minister and Señora de Quesada, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Clark Grew, Mr. Willing Spencer and Mr. Theodore Sutro, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Spiering, Mr. and Mrs. Bertram Shapleigh, Señorita de Quesada, Dr. John Crosser, Mrs. Arthur N. Davis, Dr. R. W. Drechsler, Miss Eleanor Thackara, Miss Luise Cavalli, Mr. C. De Witt Poole, Mr. Alfred R. Thompson, Mrs. T. Stewart White, Dr. George H. Allen and Mr. Walter McClintock.

A very important wedding in German circles this week was that of Frau Ulrike von Levetzow to Herr Rudolph Hamel, a wealthy sportsman. The bride is a descendant of her namesake, Goethe's great friend, and has inherited all the relics of the great German poet belonging to her great-aunt.

When she was presented at court last season Frau von Levetzow was much admired for her wit and her dancing, being one of the young women chosen to dance with the Garde du Corps officers, to whom the place of honor immediately in front of the throne is always assigned. The wedding took place in the historic old Trinity Church and was followed by a dinner at the Hotel Esplanade.

Mrs. Haseltine Gives a Dinner.

Mrs. Charles Haseltine, of Grand Rapids, Mich., who is in Berlin to see her daughter, Countess Adolph Montgelas, entertained at dinner at the Hotel Cumberland for Mrs. T. Stewart White, also of Grand Rapids. Among those present were Count Montgelas, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Clark Grew and the Consul General and Mrs. Thackara.

Mrs. John Cleves Symmes gave a tea for Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Waite, of New York.

The Hon. Mary Portman and Miss Amy Hare have issued invitations for a big dinner and dance on November 24 for the American Ambassador and Mrs. Gerard, and also as a farewell for the Consul General and Mrs. Thackara.

Too Much Sugar in Beer.

Quite an exciting scene occurred one night this week in a Bohemian resort in the so-called American quarter in Berlin, much frequented by American music students and members of the colony in general. A young American woman, who persisted in sportively sugaring her neighbor's beer in spite of his lively protest and repeated warnings, was deluged with a glassful of foaming beer. In a jiffy the young American was on his feet, taking sides vehemently in the altercation, until the proprietor, finding suasion of no effect upon his inflamed spirits, unceremoniously ejected the entire party.

'SHARK-SWISH' TANGO, WITH A SIDEWAYS DIP, LONDON'S NEWEST FORM OF CRAZE

MISS PHYLLIS MONKMAN IN THE POM-POM GOWN

What of the tango now? asks the Sketch in publishing a new freak in dress. This is called the "pom-pom," and is being shown by an actress in the British capital. London, as well as Berlin, is tango mad, but possibly these cities may change their ideas now and go in for the "pom-pom," whatever that may be.

Dancers Use the Easy Motion of the Well Known Fish When It Turns in the Water to Seize Its Prey—Otherwise Society Is Not Very Busy in the Ante-Christmas Season.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH.]
LONDON, Nov. 22.

OF social gayety, comparatively speaking, very little is going on, though the last week has been very busy. The hotels were full, the restaurants crowded for luncheon and dinner and the opera and theatres all doing well.

Dancers are still conspicuous by their absence, though the tango craze is growing. The "shark swish," a new form of tango, won first prize at a semi-bohemian ball given by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Klein to two hundred guests. The dance gets its name from the fact that the dip sideways of each couple is accentuated with an easy motion as of a shark turning in the water to seize its prey. It is danced sideways altogether and necessitates the newest creation in free motion tango dresses.

Mr. H. B. Irving, actor, and Mr. Henry Arthur Jones, dramatist, upheld the author's interpretation of the tango, but it looked like a minuet compared with the latest innovations danced here some years ago.

It would have been possible usually at this time in November to make a forecast of the ante-Christmas season, but it seems this year difficult so to do, for the political situation is affecting matters considerably.

Skating Club Opening.

So far not a single dance is announced in any private house this month, and as far as can be seen there does not appear to be any hostess who is likely to do any entertaining.

A considerable number of well known persons were present at the opening of the Holland Park Sunday Skating Club. Among those skating were Lady Exmouth, wearing black velvet with a white velvet sailor collar and a small black hat, and her daughter, the Hon Georgina Pellew, in tailor made brown serge.

Lady Musgrave was in black and Lady Southwell in tweed when both were skating. Also present were Lady Rivett-Carnac and Lady Fandel-Phillips, watching her daughters, Mrs. Charles Tufton and Miss Fandel Phillips, skating.

Earls Court also will be a busy place this winter. The season there began tonight under the direction of Mr. F. W. Payne with the opening of the new Queen's Rink and the Palais de Danse. The Queen's Rink is a fine building, four hundred feet in length and beautifully decorated to represent the interior of a palace courtyard. At one end there is a succession of terraces on which persons may get light refreshments served and from which they have an uninterrupted view of the skaters. Half way down the rink is a big salon, decorated in novel fashion, suggested by a famous Parisian dressmaker. The scheme is entirely in black and white.

Titled Hostesses.

The Olympia Skating Club, of which Viscount Crichton is president, will be housed here on Sundays, and on November 27 there is to be a rink meet, at which twenty-six titled women, one for each borough of the metropolitan area, will act as hostesses under the presidency of the Marchioness of Tweeddale. Among the society women acting as hostesses will be the Duchess of Marlborough, the Duchess of Somerset, Catherine Lady Dudley, Lady Neumann and Lady Maud Warrender. The proceeds will go to a special fund for providing pure free milk to the London poor. An interesting programme is being arranged and the famous tango dancers now appearing at the Queen's Theatre will introduce the tango on skates for the first time.

From the rink a covered way leads to the Palais de Danse and a huge hall will be furnished as a superb dancing floor, and dancing will take place there nightly, from half-past eight to midnight.

A few weeks before Christmas also is the season when thoughts turn to charity, and many such events are now occurring. Princess Marie Louise of Schleswig-Holstein was at the parish room of Holy Trinity, Brompton, and opened a sale of curios from many lands in aid of the Ada Leigh homes in Paris for American and British girls. The curios offered included a prayer book dated 1627, once the property of a Bishop of Ontario; a "Breeches" Bible, a bonbonnière of Royal Copenhagen porcelain, presented by Princess Alexander of Teck; the prie-dieu of Marie Antoinette and a Louis XIV. rosewood inkstand.

Sales for Charities.

Lady Hillingdon, wearing sables and a brown dress with a blue feather in a velvet hat, opened the sale organized by Adeline Duchess of Bedford in aid of the Belgravia and Pimlico Association for the Care of Friendless Girls.

The Earl and Countess of Strathmore held a sale of useful Christmas gifts at their home in St. James square in aid of the General Lying-in Hospital in York Road.

Lady Wakefield is organizing a Christmas sale for the Home Arts Industries Association at her residence in Hyde Park Gardens next week.

Derby's race meeting took many away from London for two or three days, but the meeting was not a great social function. It used to be when the late Duke and Duchess of Devonshire entertained large parties at Chatsworth and Rangemore, Breby Castle and Byrkly Lodge were all filled for the week. The present Duke and Duchess of Devonshire do not care for racing and have never entertained for this meeting.

Dowager Lady Burton had a party stopping at Rangemore and Mr. and Mrs. Miller Mundy also were hosts at Shipley Court, but owing to mourning Lady Carnarvon was unable to entertain at Bretby.

The season of amateur theatricals also is beginning and from now until the middle of Lent these entertainments will be given not only in London but in the country in aid of charities. Every day fresh recruits join the ranks of the amateur players.

The noted Windsor Strollers soon are to give a series of performances in the Royal Borough, some very clever persons taking part, including Lady Crutchley and Mr. Ralph Alderson.

Amateurs in Performance.

Lady Menx gave an entertainment at Kings Theatre, Portsmouth, on Wednesday in aid of the Naval Disaster Funds. Every seat was sold and the programme included "Heard at the Telephone" and a pantomime rehearsal. Parties were gathered in all the notable houses of the neighborhood for the performances.

Lady Muriel Paget Arranges Great Picture Ball for London

Queen Mary Promises Her Patronage to Christmas Carnival, Which Will Be Outstanding Event of Coming Winter Social Programme.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH.]
LONDON, Nov. 22.

LADY MURIEL PAGET, aided by Mr. G. Sherwood Foster, is arranging the first of the great semi-public balls which for some years have been such notable events.

Last winter it was "The Pantomime Ball," in which about twenty of the prettiest girls of society made up a procession of "dancing princesses." In June it was the summer ball and pageant, a spectacle of magnificence and beauty entitled "The Court of Versailles."

A prince of the blood royal impersonating Louis XIV., with the Countess of Dudley as the French Queen. Nearly every prominent woman in the fashionable world was in one or other of the "royal progresses." There were as many kings and queens in the great space of the Albert Hall as could be found in a mixture of a dozen packs of cards. In the royal box watching the scene was Queen Mary, accompanied by princesses, royal duchesses and other exalted personages.

This winter's ball promises to be equally successful and even more interesting. It is to be known as "A Picture Ball and Christmas Carnival," and again the Queen has promised her patronage. It will take place on December 3 in the Albert Hall, and the proceeds from the tickets, of which the first thousand are to be sold at £1 ($5) each, are to be devoted to the funds of the Invalid Kitchens of London.

The list of gentlewomen who have already promised to assist by forming groups for pictures and in bringing parties of young dancing people to the ball includes the Duchesses of Marlborough, Norfolk, Somerset and Bedford, the Marchionesses of Winchester and Tullibardine, Countess Fitzwilliam, Countess of Kenmare, Cora Countess of Strafford, Countess Pappenheim, Viscountesses Ridley, Gladstone and St. Cyres, Lady Leith of Fyvie, Frances Lady de l'Isle and Dudley, Lady Ashby St. Ledgers, Lady Herbert, Lady Speyer, Lady Bering, Lady Edmund Talbot, Lady Constance Hatch, Lady Diana Manners, Lady William Cecil, Lady Julia Duff, Lady George Campbell, Mrs. Arthur Grenfell, Baroness d'Erlanger, Mrs. Harcourt and Mrs. Walter Reubens. Each group will illustrate the development of pictorial art from the earliest times to the present.

Generally speaking, costumes of spectators and dancers not in the groups may represent any period from early Egyptian to Victorian. The various groupings of pictures will represent the schools of early Egypt, the Grecian, Byzantine, Spanish, Flemish, French, Dutch, eighteenth century English and pre-Raphaelite. The tableaux and living pictures will be the pageant of the night, a change from the somewhat prolonged quadrilles and interminable processions of the pantomime and Versailles balls.

A small band of fashionable women, under the guidance of a royal princess noted for her deep art culture, will group special features representing great masters, from the time of Cimabue, Gotte and the early Italian masters.

British Nation Will Acquire Remarkable Costume Collection

Mr. Talbot Hughes' Display, Which Is Record of Fashions of Olden Times, May Go to South Kensington Museum.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH.]
LONDON, Nov. 22.

THE most complete collection of English costumes owned privately is to be purchased for presentation to the nation, and it will probably be placed in the South Kensington Museum, thus making the national collection a comprehensive record of fashion's changes down to the seventies.

For nearly a quarter of a century Mr. Talbot Hughes, the artist, who owns the collection, has been adding to this historic wardrobe. He has passed an immense amount of time and spent money in accumulating specimens, and even now he intends to add to them as occasion offers.

"I started collecting these costumes," he said, "for the purpose of my paintings, but gradually the fascination grew upon me and the collection increased."

All parts of the country have been laid under contribution, not only for men's and women's costumes, but for old lace, &c. The artist's hobby became known and dealers have long been on the lookout for interesting specimens.

The splendid preservation of the collection is a silent tribute to the quality of the hand-loom work of Spitalfields, now experiencing a notable revival. Silks, satins and brocades, the "glad rags" of cavaliers, the flowered flounces of the English women of long ago, are surprisingly perfect in shape and texture. There are specimens that would impart a note of elegance to the smartest costume ball.

In view of the desire nowadays for perfect accuracy, whether in the theatre or the ballroom, the collection will prove to be invaluable.

"Prints," said Mr. Hughes, "are all very well in their way, but the student cannot examine them as in the case of the original costume."

Mr. Hughes' collection of early English boots and shoes is the only one of its kind. Apparently worthless pieces of leather, found in many curious places, have been turned out, under his deft reconstruction, as typical examples of the early shoemaker's art. Primitive enough are some of them. Others have been unearthed from the plague pits of London. This collection of shoes dates back to the fourteenth century.

There are about 450 specimens in all, and the observer may follow the evolution and the passing of the high heel and pass in review the fashions in footwear as they affected the ballroom and the market place. There is a shoe worn by a child at the time of Edward VI., and near it is a quaint specimen of the fourteenth century shoe with the familiar curled toe.

Mr. Hughes has proved conclusively, he says, that while "there's nothing like English leather," the native craftsman has likewise always held his own. It is generally believed that the French hold the supremacy in this respect, but Mr. Hughes says decidedly "No!" A topboot of the time of Charles II. is a notable piece of work, far in advance of anything fashioned by the French craftsmen of that day.

King George and Queen Mary To Be at Chatsworth Five Days

Sovereign Will Shoot Pheasants During Visit to Duke of Devonshire—Riding Judges Believe Princess Mary Will Become Finest Horsewoman in England.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH.]
LONDON, Nov. 22.

PREPARATIONS are already being made at Chatsworth for the reception of the King and Queen, who are to be the guests of the Duke and Duchess of Devonshire from December 8 to December 13. This will be their first visit to the Duke's Derbyshire mansion since their accession, although as Prince and Princess of Wales they frequently stopped there as guests of the late Duke.

The estate affords the finest shooting in the Peak district and the coverts have been carefully preserved for the visit of the King, who will have three days' sport among the pheasants.

It is probable that Princess Mary will accompany her father and mother, as among her most intimate friends is Lady Maud Cavendish, eldest daughter of the Duke and Duchess. The entertainments arranged for the royal visit include a theatrical performance in the fine theatre erected at Chatsworth by the late Duke, and a ball, to which many of the Duke's Derbyshire neighbors will be invited.

The Duchess of Devonshire is quite restored to health after her long sojourn at Bad Nauheim and will be able to discharge personally the duties of hostess during the royal sojourn at Chatsworth. The Duchess was abroad during the greater part of the London season and made her first official appearance as Mistress of the Robes since Easter on the occasion of the marriage of Prince Arthur of Connaught.

Queen Mary and Queen Alexandra, although resembling one another in some ways, are not at all alike as regards setting duties beforehand. Queen Mary is very precise in these matters; the day and hour for keeping an appointment are not only fixed long before, but when fixed are strictly adhered to.

Queen Alexandra, on the other hand, dislikes very much to be tied down to a particular day or hour. Particularly in the matter of journeying, there is almost always a change of arrangements at the last moment.

Such was the case recently when it had been announced that the two Queens would travel to Sandringham together. Queen Alexandra at the last moment postponed her departure for twenty-four hours, whereas Queen Mary started on the day that had been fixed.

Princess Victoria's dislike of the trammels that surround royalty and its proceedings shows itself chiefly in going about incognita on every possible occasion. Recently she went to stop on the Kent coast with her former governess, Mrs. Johnson, under an assumed name, and to her great satisfaction managed to escape recognition.

The same kind of thing transpires almost every day when Queen Alexandra and her daughter are in residence at Marlborough House, for Princess Victoria, whenever possible, leaves quietly by a side door, accompanied by a friend or some one connected with the royal household, and invariably on foot. In this way she goes shopping and to the park and the picture galleries without the discomfort of being stared at or saluted by a loyal but over-demonstrative public.

Princess Mary is becoming quite a queen in riding circles. It is thought by good riding judges that she will develop into the finest horsewoman in the country. If you want to rouse the grooms attached to the royal stables at Windsor to the highest pitch of enthusiasm, you have only to mention Princess Mary. And they are all particularly proud of the Princess' horses.

"That one, sir, can jump like a stag," said one of the head grooms to a visitor the other day, "and he has to when the Princess is riding him across country."

Prince John seems also certain to grow into a brilliant horseman. When at Windsor he passes much of his time with his little ponies, and has even had the temerity to mount the polo ponies of his brother, the Prince of Wales. The young Prince passes hours in the royal riding school, and is fond of being present when the grooms are banging tins, blowing horns and whistles and shouting to accustom the royal carriage horses to bands and crowds.

Palace in London No Longer 'Ugly'

English Speed Record Is Broken in Transforming King's Buckingham Residence.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH.]
LONDON, Nov. 22.

BUCKINGHAM Palace, under the restorer's hand, is now scarcely recognizable as the same building, and when the King and Queen return they will find that it has ceased to be the ugliest palace in Europe.

The whole of the main building has been refronted. In place of the old, crumbling, dingy front, fine white Portland stone, worked into graceful architectural composition, meets the eye.

The work has been one of considerable magnitude. At one time 300 men were kept busy, 400 in the daytime and the other half by night, when the building was illuminated by electricity. Nearly 100,000 cubic feet of stone have been used, and many modern inventions not generally employed in the building trade were utilized.

Perhaps the most remarkable aspect of the work has been the speed with which it has been carried out. The new front was designed by Sir Aston Webb, R. A., and the drawings were approved by the King last year. It was, of course, impossible for the work to be carried on while the King was permanently in residence, so that only three months in the year could be allocated to Messrs. Leslie & Co., the contractors.

They were offered two "years," but undertook to finish the work in one "year" of three months, and they began operations on August 5. The most careful drawings were made, and two stone yards were kept hard at work to supply the material required. Each stone was numbered, so that when brought to the palace it could be fitted at once into its proper place. Special precautions were taken against suffragettes, and not a single untoward incident occurred, with the exception of the death of one employe.

The statues which once figured on the front have been replaced by a simple balustrading on the roof. Their chipped surface and crumbling bases suggest that they are worthy only of the rubbish heap, but experts who have examined them have selected a few to set up in the gardens.

The refronting has to some extent revived the suggestion, often mooted in court circles, that the palace might be thrown open to the public when the King and Queen are not in residence. While the King is anxious that the great treasure it contains should be accessible to lovers of beautiful things, there are stated to be certain objections which stand in the way.

In addition to the refronting, workmen also are engaged in redecorating the interior of the palace. A special suite of rooms is being prepared for the Prince of Wales. While the King's apartments overlook the gardens, the Prince is stated to prefer the outlook toward the Mall, and his new rooms will be almost in the centre of the facade.

So pleased is the King with the work that he entertained all the workmen at dinner at the King's Hall of the Holborn Restaurant recently.

Evening Suits in Blue Are Worn

Mr. H. Dennis Bradley Devises Startling Fashions for Men in "Are You There?"

[SPECIAL DISPATCH.]
LONDON, Nov. 22.

STRIKING fashions for men are seen in "Are You There?" at the Prince of Wales' Theatre. The producers of the play called in the assistance of an expert in men's clothes, Mr. H. Dennis Bradley, to evolve new fashions for the piece, and gave him a free hand.

Three distinct color schemes have been carried out for the dressing of the first act, in which the men wear lounge suits of various shades of blue, brown and gray. All the usual shades of dark navy blue have been passed over as being too ordinary. In their place are four distinct shades of blue—purple blue, royal blue, plum blue and china blue.

The brown suits are mostly in autumnal shades—warm browns with tints of red in them. One is, appropriately enough, a "nut" brown. The gray suits vary in shade from black and white grays to bright silver grays. In striking contrast to these is Mr. Lawrence Grossmith's smartly cut black-braided jacket, fastened at the waistline with one button.

In the second act all the chorus wear evening suits of blue, the coat being faced with blue silk. A new kind of evening overcoat—blue with blue silk facings and fastened with only one button—has been specially devised for this act. Another new kind of evening overcoat is worn by Mr. Alec Fraser. It has silk lapels rolling right down to the bottom of the coat—hardly an overcoat for the very cold weather, but an extremely smart coat to slip over evening clothes. Mr. Fraser's bright blue evening suit, with its white corded waistcoat, is one of the sartorial successes of the production.

Mr. Lawrence Grossmith wears an evening suit of another shade of blue, and with it a silk waistcoat of a light biscuit shade.

He Should Frolic.

"I HAVE GAINED FIFTEEN POUNDS

Since Taking "Fruit-a-tives" And Feel Like A New Person"

DEVSDALE, ONT., June 15th, 1913.
"I am a general storekeeper at the above address and, on account of the great good I have experienced from using "Fruit-a-tives", I recommend them strongly to my customers. They were a great boon to me, I can tell you, for about two years ago, I was laid up in bed with vomiting and a most terrific pain at the base of my skull. This pain nearly drove me mad. Doctors feared it would turn to Inflammation of the Brain, but I took "Fruit-a-tives" steadily until I was cured. I have gained fifteen pounds since taking "Fruit-a-tives" and I verily believe they saved me from a disastrous illness".

LIKE FATHER, LIKE SON.

When Willie's father came home to supper, there was a vacant chair at the table.

"Well, where's the boy?"

"William is upstairs in bed." The answer came with painful precision from the sad-faced mother:

"Why, wh-what's up? Not sick, is he?" (An anxious pause.)

"It grieves me to say, Robert, that our son, your son—has been heard swearing on the street. I heard him."

"Swearing? Scott! I'll teach him to swear."

And he started upstairs in the dark. Halfway up he stumbled and came down with his chin on the top step.

When the atmosphere cleared a bit, Willie's mother was saying sweetly from the hallway, "That will do, dear. You have given him enough for one lesson."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Three Red Heads

Each Was Used as a Pawn by Fate

By EDWARD C. ALSTON

One day as I was entering a court room I met a lawyer coming out. Something in my appearance attracted his attention. I knew very well what it was, for from childhood I had been used to exciting the attention of all who saw me. It was not I, but a head of hair of a peculiar redness. Words describe only color; they seldom suggest an especial variety of color. Mine was of a variety that few persons had ever seen before. The lawyer stopped me with the words "One moment" and stood looking at me, turning something over in his mind. Presently he said:

"Your name, please."

I gave it.

"Come in here."

He led me into an office and said something to a man at a desk, who filled in a blank and read me a subpoena. I was ordered to be present that afternoon in the courtroom as a witness.

When I appeared I found that I was wanted in a trial for murder. What astonished me was that the accused, who was a very respectable looking man, possessed a head of hair the same color as my own.

I was placed beside him, and a woman who was giving testimony was called upon to say which of the two, myself or the accused, was the man she had seen kill her husband. She looked us both over with a puzzled expression and finally pointed to me.

The incident produced quite a sensation in court and naturally filled me with consternation. The lawyer at once called for the discharge of the prisoner, which was granted. As for me, I was required to prove where I had been at the time of the murder, and I had no difficulty in substantiating the fact that I was not within a thousand miles of where the deed was done.

The only feature about the man whose acquittal I had secured that fixed itself on my memory was his hair. He was between thirty-five and forty, while I was not more than twenty. Being in limbo, he had no opportunity to thank me for having saved him from the gallows, where he would have gone had it not been for the similarity of our hair, but I noticed him looking at me with great interest. I did not live in the place where he had been tried and left it as soon as I had proved an alibi. So I did not see anything more of him.

Twelve years passed, years that had not brought me success. I was thirty-two and had not a cent in the world. Neither had I wife or children or home. I think it was the color of my hair that told against me. On applying for a position the person to whom I went would look at my head and simultaneously reply, "There are no vacancies just now." And wherever I applied I received the same reception. The consequence was that from twenty to thirty-two I was most of the time out of employment.

But the end of this period brought a change. One afternoon just before the closing hours of business I entered a mercantile house and asked to see the head of the concern. A gentleman with coal black hair, in which there was, despite his fifty years, not a single gray strand, sat at a desk in a private office. So great was the contrast between his and my own top adornment that I was sure I would receive a curt refusal and was about to turn away when he lifted his eyes and saw me. His gaze was first fixed on my head, then was directed to my countenance. There was nothing for me to do but approach him and make the usual request.

"I'm hunting a job," I said. "I've been hunting one for months. Indeed, I'm so run down financially that I'm ready to work for a song."

I received no reply for awhile. The man sat staring at me with a strange look in his eyes, and I suspected that he was thinking of something else. Without waiting for his answer I was turning away when he stopped me.

"What can you do?" he asked.

"Any ordinary work."

"Your name?"

I gave it to him, and, taking up a check book, he wrote a check for $50 payable to my order and handed it to me. I looked at it dumfounded.

"I haven't earned anything yet," I stammered.

"You look tired and hungry," was the reply. "Report here tomorrow morning and you shall have a job."

I was so used to attributing my misfortunes to the color of my hair that I now laid my good luck to the same cause. I had an idea that the man's action had something to do with the contrast between the glossiness of his raven locks and the disagreeable redness of mine. Probably his had brought him good fortune as mine had brought me misfortune and made him sorry for me. At any rate, this was the only interpretation I could put upon it.

I found it very easy to cash his check and spent a part of it in buying a good dinner. The next morning I reported myself to Mr. Marston—such was his name—and after a brief conversation, during which he questioned me with a view to learning what line of work I would prefer, he said that perhaps I had better try several different departments successively in order to learn for which I was best adapted.

My advancement with the Marston company was something extraordinary. I had not been with the concern a month before I was placed in charge of a department. There were employees who represented various holdings of the stock of the company who, seeing me jumped from one position to a better one, conspired against me. But with all their machinations they found it impossible to budge me. Among other things they accused me of being the cause of the loss of one of the best customers of the concern. The very next day I received an advance in salary of a thousand dollars a year.

Though there was no satisfactory explanation of all this, I knew that Mr. Marston, who owned six-tenths of the stock of the company, was at the bottom of it. I was a hard and efficient worker, but there were other employees who worked as hard and as efficiently as I. The matter was more a mystery to me than to the others, for employees of a concern managed by one man power are used to seeing that man take very sudden and inexplicable fancies among those who serve him. While I was filled with wonder, my fellow workmen were simply playing an ordinary game to pull me down and build up themselves.

I had not been with the concern long when Mr. Marston asked me to dine at his house. It was evident the moment I appeared at his home that I was an object of great interest. Mrs Marston's grasp of the hand, the intensity of her gaze at receiving me, would have astonished me had it not been that I had received so many surprises already. The children all gave evidence of the same interest. I was treated as affectionately as if I had been some dear relative. When I took my leave I was urged to make their home my home, coming and going without ceremony.

I became sufficiently friendly with one of the heads of departments to ask him one day what he considered the cause of Mr. Marston's and his family's kindly treatment of me. He said that Mr. Marston was a very singular man. He had been accustomed to rewarding the employees of the concern for faithful and valuable service suddenly and with no reference to what the reward was given for. It seemed to be a fancy with him, and no one ever questioned or discussed anything he did. This gave no inkling of the reason for my preferential treatment, for it had begun before I had had a chance to earn it.

In two years I was made vice president of the company, and Mr. Marston, who was getting tired of the business, began to throw a great deal of the responsibility he had theretofore taken to himself upon me. I must have developed a certain amount of business capacity or I would not have been able to bear this burden for any considerable period. It was about this time that I married, and Mr. Marston gave me a house. At the time of this gift I led the way for him to tell me why he had so favored me, but he did not avail himself of it. He turned away with a grunt, saying:

"We can't avoid fate, which is much more liable to strike than to coddle us. In the first case it does no good to grumble, and in the second it does no good to wonder. In either event we must accept what she has in store for us."

The secret came out in time. Mr. Marston was taken ill and sent for me to come to see him. I went and, when ushered into the bedroom where he lay, stood transfixed with astonishment. He had been ill two months, during which period I had not seen him. His hair had grown and for about an inch from his scalp was red and the same shade of red as my own, the rest being black. It was evident that he had been accustomed to dye it and during his illness had ceased to do so.

"It is time," he said to me, "that I let you know the reason why I have helped you. It is because some twenty years ago I would have suffered the death of a felon had it not been for you. A third person, who also had red hair like yours and mine, committed a murder. I would have been identified as the murderer had it not been for your opportune appearance with the same or a like shade of hair as the other two. You deserve no credit for having saved me from an ignoble death, but it has given me no end of pleasure and comfort to reward you as the unintentional cause of my escape. I have done it selfishly and for my own satisfaction, not yours.

"I have sent for you to tell you this and to say to you that I shall not again return to the management of the business. Fortunately for us both, you have shown yourself capable of managing a large business like that of the Marston company. I have decided to give you one-twentieth of my holdings of the capital stock of the company, for I think that the manager of a business should be interested in that business with its shareholders, and, with the holdings of my family, you will be able to keep the control. At the election which comes off next month you will be made president. I have no doubt the interests of all concerned will be well served so long as you hold the office."

Why Mr. Marston so long kept from me the cause of his preference for me he did not tell me, but I can see advantages in it. If I did not show myself worthy it would be easier for him to drop me out of the business or leave me among the lower grades of employees. But, as has been said, he was an odd man and had an odd way of doing things.

A WONDERFUL CURE OF AN ABSCESS BY Burdock Blood Bitters.

Mr. A. W. Dryden, Amherst, N.S., writes:—"I am going to tell you what Burdock Blood Bitters has done for us. My son "Vance," when only nine months old, got an abscess on his cheek bone. I took him to a doctor in St. John, N.B., and he lanced it, and told me it would get well in a few days, and wanted me to keep it squeezed out. It did not seem to get any better, so my wife took him back. The Doctor told her to take him home and it would soon get better. It would gather and break, and it went on that way until he was over four years old.

"He lost four pieces of bone out of where it was lanced, and two pieces came from his mouth; he has lost all of his cheek bone, and his eye was drawn down. I took him to doctors in St. John, Moncton, and Amherst, and all wanted me to let him go under an operation. He was so small I told them that if he was going to die he might as well die as he was as to go there and be all cut to pieces, so I declined to have the operation done. I told them I was going to try Burdock Blood Bitters, as I had heard my mother talk so much about it. I got a bottle, and when it was about half gone noticed it was doing good, and before many days the sore stopped running, and healed up, and the abscess has never broken out again. This happened nearly six years ago, so you can see I have great faith in Burdock Blood Bitters, and I can say with all my heart that it is the best blood medicine in the world."

Checkers.

Checkers is said by some to be a very old game, while others declare it to be of comparatively modern origin. Whence it came is absolutely unknown. The game is also called drafts, and there are many varieties of it—Chinese, English, Polish, Spanish, Italian and Turkish. It is also found among the native tribes of the interior of New Zealand.

The Changing Age

Girls and boys from 14 to 19 years of age undergo physical changes which tax their strength to the utmost and the strain is always apparent from pale cheeks, colorless lips, and tired bodies—sometimes eruptions of the skin and the utter lack of the ambition and animation with which their younger years were filled.

Budding into womanhood and manhood, with the duties of school or business, demands concentrated nourishment which is readily convertible into red blood corpuscles, energy and strength, and the very best thing for this changing age is the medical nutriment in Scott's Emulsion—it possesses the rare blood-making properties of cod liver oil in a predigested form; hypophosphites for the nervous system, with the healing, soothing qualities of pure glycerine.

Its nourishing force promotes assimilation, yields direct returns in abundant, red blood, fills hollow cheeks, tones the nerves, makes all good food do good, and does it in a natural easy manner.

The sustaining nourishment in Scott's Emulsion is so helpful to this changing age that it should never be neglected—every druggist has it.

TIRED OUT KIDNEYS

Kidney troubles are so frightfully common because the kidneys are so easily upset by overwork or excesses of eating and drinking. Cure is effected not by whipping them on to renewed effort, but by awakening the action of liver and bowels by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This rests the kidneys and makes them well. Backache and urinary disorders then disappear.

Not Enough Cake For Public.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—Numerous requests for a piece of Jessie Wilson's wedding cake caused the issue at the White House Saturday of a statement describing the size of the cake as too small to gratify the desires of the public. The statement says:

"On account of the erroneous and extravagant statements as to the size and cost of the cake which has been baked for the wedding of Miss Jessie Wilson, Mrs. Wilson wishes it stated that the cake is nine inches high and 22 inches in diameter. It is the usual kind of bride's cake and it is not at all elaborate."

SARANAC LAKE, N.Y., Nov. 24.—his head pierced from temple to temple by a revolver bullet, Knight E. Rogers, 38 years of age, a manufacturer of South Manchester, Conn., is alive to-day, 3 hours after he shot himself.

Rogers, who is an invalid, came here last July in search of health, and has been living with his wife at an expensive apartment hotel. He went for a ride alone in a hired Victoria Saturday morning, and when about two miles from town fired a bullet into his brain, aiming the revolver by the aid of a hand mirror he had brought with him. The driver galloped his horses to a local hospital, where surgical attention was given, but Rogers' recovery is considered impossible. The bullet passed completely through the front lobes of his brain.

The Skin Troubles of Childhood

School Records Show Much Time Lost From Eczema.

Chafing and skin irritation, whether from changing temperature, rough winds, strong soap or the action of the clothing, naturally develop into eczema, spread over the body and defy ordinary treatments.

Most doctors do not give much attention to skin diseases, and, consequently, it is necessary for parents to select some treatment which has proven a cure for such ailments. If records of cures count for anything, then you can turn to Dr. Chase's Ointment with fullest assurance that in this you will have the means of controlling itching skin diseases.

By affording prompt relief from the terrible itching, Dr. Chase's Ointment puts an end to suffering, and removes the cause of scratching. As the fires of eczema die away the ointment sets up the process of healing, and brings about thorough and lasting cure. As a treatment for the skin troubles of children nothing has ever proved so satisfactory as Dr. Chase's Ointment.

NOW BEFORE SENATORS.

U. S. Currency Bill Enters on Hard Struggle To-day.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Nov. 24.—The administration currency bill, with the amendments, proposed by the divided Senate banking and currency committee, was laid before the Senate Saturday and debate on the measures will begin to-day. The two factions of the committee headed by Senator Owen and Senator Hitchcock, filed their divergent view on the measure and the bill passed by the House was made the unfinished business of the Senate.

Senator Owen will fire the opening gun in the debate for the administration forces. His speech probably will occupy the entire day. On Tuesday, Senator Hitchcock will begin the attack on the administration's proposals in a speech setting forth the position of his faction of the committee. From Monday until the end of the special session a week-off, Senators will make set speeches discussing the currency reform problem.

ANOTHER COMES ASHORE.

Body of Sailor of Hydras Is Picked Up Near Goderich.

GODERICH, Nov. 24.—Slowly and stubbornly Lake Huron is giving up the victims of the wrecks of the vessels lost in the recent great storm. To-day another body was found by an Indian fourteen miles to the north of Southampton. The body was circled by a lifebelt bearing the name Hyrus, a Cleveland steamer, and so far it is the first victim found from that steamer.

The Indian, with the superstitions of his race, would not touch the body, but he willingly went to the authorities and told of his find.

There will doubtless be many bodies found within the next few days. A strong northwesterly wind has been blowing over the lake since Saturday night, stirring up the waters, and the Government steamer Lambton and the tug Horton started this morning on a patrol.

Making Steel Pens.

Briefly described, steel pens are made as follows: First the steel is rolled into big sheets and then cut into strips about three inches in width. The strips are heated to a bright red and are then allowed to cool gradually, which tempers them. They are next rolled to the necessary thinness and are cut into blank flat pens, and the pens while but are usually stamped with the brand or the name of the manufacturer. To shape the pens is the next process. The rounding makes them hold the ink and distribute it more evenly than could be done if they were flat. To harden them they are heated to a cherry red and then suddenly cooled. This not only hardens them, but makes them elastic. The polishing, pointing and finishing come next, and then they are ready for use. The little holes in the pens at the end of the slits serve to make them more elastic and to facilitate the flow of the ink.

Washing While Travelling.

Sir Francis Galton held that washing when on a journey has its drawbacks. In the "Art of Travel" he remarks that "there is no denying the fact, though it be not agreeable to confess it, that dirt and grease are great protectors of the skin against inclement weather and that therefore the leader of an exploring party should not be too exacting about the appearance of his less warmly clad followers. Daily washing, if not accompanied by oiling, must be compensated by wearing clothes. A dog will sleep out under any bush and thrive there so long as he is not washed, groomed and kept clean. There must be a balance between the activity of the skin and the calls upon it, and, where the exposure is greater, there must the pores be more defended."—London Globe.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur ad alcohol added, will turn grey, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant; remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use tonic, costing about 50 cents a large bottle, at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," thus avoiding a lot of muss.

Thin wispy, grey faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all grey hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger.

Swallowed 17 Needles.

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—The deportation of Bessie Rymarczuk, 19 years old, who swallowed 17 needles in an attempt to commit suicide, is being considered by the United States immigration authorities. They believe she is mentally unbalanced. The doctors attending the girl report that they have recovered seven of the needles. Ten are still some place in her anatomy and seem to be causing little trouble.

THE WORLD'S WORK DEPENDS ON THE WORLD'S DIGESTION

From the captain of industry to the hod carrier—from milady in the auto to the woman with the scrubbing brush—the accomplishments of every one of us depend absolutely on the accomplishments of our stomachs. Backed by a good digestion, a man can give the best that is in him. When his stomach fails, he becomes a weakling.

To this loss of power no one need submit. Right habits of eating, drinking, sleeping and exercise, aided by Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets, will restore and maintain the full efficiency of the human mind and body.

Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets contain the active principles needed for the digestion of every kind of food. They go to the assistance of the weakened stomach, and enable the sufferer, right from the start, to assimilate and get the benefit of the food eaten. With this assistance, the digestive organs regain their tone, and soon the use of the tablets is no longer necessary.

If your stomach is not working properly, try Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets 50c. at your druggist's. National Drug and Chemical Co. of Canada, Limited, Montreal. 143

COMPLAINT OF LICENSE INSPECTOR STEWART AGAINST CHIEF OF POLICE

Was Threshed Out—Police Commissioners Heard From Both Officials on Saturday Afternoon—Two Cases Dealt With.

NO ACTION TAKEN

The complaint of the Board of License Commissioners against Chief Thompson, to the effect that he was not giving License Inspector Stewart the assistance he should, was threshed out at the meeting of the Police Commissioners on Saturday afternoon.

Two cases were specified by the License Inspector, in which he did not think the Chief had acted fairly toward him, and did not render him the assistance he should have received. Both Mr. Stewart and Mr. Thompson were present at the meeting.

The Gravelle Case.

Mr. Stewart was asked to explain the charges, and he dealt with the case of Chas. Gravelle first. In this case, he said, the information was laid against Gravelle on the 10th of July, 1912. He was convicted on the 17th of August and was given 30 days to pay his fine. Before the thirty days were up, he heard Gravelle had left the City, but a few weeks later he heard Gravelle was working at the Nicholls Hospital. He told the Chief that Gravelle was in the City, and was boarding at Head's hotel on Charlotte Street. Gravelle was not arrested, however, and about six weeks later he saw the man on George Street. He went to the police station and informed the Chief, and Gravelle's arrest followed. He (Stewart) followed the police and Gravelle to the police station, and when he got there the Chief was ringing up Archie Moore to see if he would pay the fine. The Inspector said he had not intended to say anything about this, until the McCoy case was brought before the Commissioners. It was then that he decided to speak of it.

The Chief's reply to this charge is given in full below. He states that both times he took action to arrest Gravelle he found he was out of the City, but when he returned he was arrested and the fine was collected. The Chief said that on November the 9th, he did not get word from License Inspector Stewart, nor did he 'phone Mr. Moore. The first he heard of Gravelle's arrest was when Detective Newhall told him over the 'phone, and it was Newhall who communicated with Archie Moore regarding the payment of the fine.

The McCoy Case.

Mr. Stewart said that this case was an unusually unfortunate one. John T. McCoy, was on the black list, but he heard almost daily reports to the effect that he was drunk and abusing his wife. His wife did not, however, want to appear in police court against him, so that nothing was done. Mr. Stewart told Mrs. McCoy if he ever saw her husband drunk he would appear in court against him, himself. This was what Mrs. McCoy wished.

But one night Mr. McCoy was so badly under the influence of liquor that he went across the road and walked right into the home of the Rogers family, where he made things hot for everyone. His conduct was so bad that his wife decided she would appear against him, and Mrs. Rogers, too, consented to act as a witness. So the information was laid on October 28th, it being understood that McCoy should appear in court on Tuesday. Tuesday morning, about seven o'clock, Mrs. McCoy called up Inspector Stewart on the telephone. Her sister was ill in Kingston and she received a telegram urging her to go. Mr. Stewart told her that the case came up that day, and Mrs. McCoy wept bitterly to think that she could not go to Kingston.

About 9 o'clock that morning the Chief 'phoned him, and asked him if he would accept a plea of "guilty" from McCoy. He replied that he would not unless McCoy would tell him where he got his liquor. The Chief replied that McCoy would do so, so he agreed to take the plea of "guilty."

The Cause of it All.

That afternoon he was called over the telephone by Mrs. McCoy and given the worst setting out he ever received in his life. She told him that he was not fit for the office, and applied to him many terms that could not be mistaken for complimentary under any circumstances. He went out to her house that afternoon, and she told him that she had not been served with a subpoena, nor had Mrs. Rogers. Mr. McCoy, she said, had come home at dinner time, telling her that he didn't have to appear in po

TO INVESTIGATE ALL ACCIDENTS

Policemen Must Protect City's Interest by Securing Names of People Who Could Act as Witnesses in the Event of a Suit Against the City

COMMISSIONERS ACT

At a meeting of the Police Commissioners on Saturday afternoon, a communication was received from the legal committee of the City Council, requesting that the policemen be instructed to investigate accidents when they occur, and hand in a report to the City Clerk.

Mayor Bradburn explained that at present, the first notice the City received of an accident was a few weeks after it happened, when a letter was received from some lawyer, giving notice of an action against the City. What the Council asked was that the policemen investigate accidents, and secure the names of people who were eye-witnesses, or near at the time, who could be called as witnesses in the case by the City Solicitor. This would ensure a square deal to the City, and protect its interests.

The request was granted, the motion to do so being passed unanimously.

Women's Council, Mrs. Alice Stebbins, And The Examiner

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—I read with interest your editorial on the lecture given by Mrs. Wells, last Thursday evening, under the auspices of the Women's Council, and agree with most of your statements in regard to parental control, enlargement of police force and amendment of the curfew law, etc.

The latter part of your editorial, (perhaps unintentionally) casts a reflection on the Society that brought the lecturer here, by stating "that we don't need lectures by women police," also the statement that the situation does not call for "sentimental hysteria and neurotic enthusiasm," leaves the inference to those who were not at the lecture that these were features of the occasion.

This lecture was notable for its sane, quiet, impressive effect upon a large audience more than ordinarily interested in a vital moral condition presented without oratorical effect or sentimental embellishment, its key note was cooperation and prevention; its appeal was to thought, not emotion; it was an education of public opinion, the first essential to better laws and their enforcement.

As for the lecturer coming from another country, we have outgrown the provincialism that would limit us to mere national lines in the acquisition of knowledge or experience on this or any other subject of public interest.

The lecture was free from any uncomplimentary comparisons, and urged the conservation and improvement of the better conditions with which we are favoured.

This City is indebted to the Women's Council for the public service they have rendered, and those of us who are parents are especially grateful for this beginning in awakening of necessary public interest in social and moral evils and their improvement and remedy.

The supervised playground question to which Mr. Dumble referred, at the close of the lecture, is also a very vital question. We trust the Women's Council may be the means of stirring public interest and thus helping us who are parents, in the greatest commission the Creator has given us—the protection and development of the children.

Yours truly,
A Father.

A REHEARSAL OF THE WEDDING

President's Daughter Goes Through the Ceremony To-day as it Will Be Performed To-morrow

GUESTS NUMBER 1200

Special Wire to The Examiner.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Nov. 24.—Even the President's daughter must have a wedding rehearsal, and at three o'clock to-day Miss Jessie Wilson and Francis Bowes Sayre, her prospective husband, with the minister who is to tie the knot, and the best man and the bridesman assembled in the east room of the White House and went through the wedding ceremony just as it is to be performed to-morrow in public. One hundred police, the finest Washington can muster, and a couple of squadrons of cavalry will assist in handling the crowd at the executive mansion. Dr. Wilfrid T. Grenfell, the Canadian hero of Labrador, who is to stand up with the bridegroom, arrived this morning.

To-morow's ceremony, which is set for 4.30 p.m., will be witnessed by one of the most brilliant and distinguished assemblages ever gathered in the executive mansion. It was the early desire, not only of Miss Wilson, who was most concerned, but of the President and Mrs. Wilson, that the wedding should be celebrated in a manner comparatively quiet and that it should be a family affair. This, it shortly was disclosed, could not be gratified. Only about 400 guests, mostly relatives and intimate friends, will witness the ceremony, but nearly three times that number have been invited to attend the reception that will follow.

FAMILY IS IN ROCHESTER

Mr. J. R. Pollock, 244 Antrim street, has received a letter from the Chief of Police of Rochester, N.Y., informing him that the relatives of May Phillips, of this city, had been located there.

According to Mr. Pollock, May Phillips, a bright young girl of 18, has worked in the employ of a local family, as maid. The family left town suddenly, dismissing her, and leaving her without any means of sustainance. Mr. Pollock, he says, informed the local Children's Aid Society authorities, and took the homeless girl into his own house, and wrote to the Rochester Chief of Police. He received the following reply this morning:

TWO YEARS LESS ONE DAY IN CENTRAL FOR MAHAFFY

Prisoner Convicted of Various Thefts is Sentenced This Morning by Police Magistrate Dumble—Suspended Sentence for Johnson.

ON ACCOUNT OF HIS WIFE.

Walter Mahaffy, the local young man who pleaded guilty to three charges of theft, was sentenced by Magistrate Dumble this morning, to two years, less one day, in the Central Prison. Chas. Johnson, his partner in crime, was allowed to go on suspended sentence. Mr. G. N. Gordon defended Johnson, and Mr. Wood, Crown Attorney, conducted the prosecution against both men.

In imposing the sentence on Mahaffy, the Magistrate said: "Mahaffy, I am going to send you to Central Prison for two years You are a confessed criminal!"

"I wish you would give me one more chance, your Worship," interrupted Mahaffy from the prisoner's box.

"No, you have had too many chances," replied Mr. Dumble. "You are a criminal by choice. But if you behave yourself the prison authorities may allow you out on ticket of leave before your time is up."

Mr. Gordon pleaded for leniency in Johnson's case. It was over eleven years ago since he had committed the only crime of his life, and he had his wife and children to support.

"What have you to say before I pronounce sentence upon you?" Johnson was asked.

"Nothing except that I wish, for the sake of my wife and children, you will be as lenient as possible. This is my first offence since I was married, and if you let me off, I will not get into trouble again."

"I will let you go on suspended sentence," said the Magistrate. "If I make a mistake in doing so, it will come back on you. It would be a terrible thing for your wife and children to suffer."

Mahaffy and Johnson pleaded guilty to several thefts, and they both admitted they had been robbing rigs, left in hotel yards, and otherwise preying upon the residents of the city. Johnson was found guilty of making a night excursion to Mrs. Turner's in North Monaghan, loading 17 of her choice fowl on his waggon, and carting them back to his place in Smith Township. When the police searched his home in Smith Township, three miles from the city, they found clothing, tools, furnishings, etc., as well as seventy or eighty fowl. While they had already collected a large amount of goods, their operations were nipped in the bud. They were arrested by Walter Kitney and P. C. Sills, in the act of going through the rigs in the Munro Hotel yards.

Mahaffy pleaded guilty to stealing a raincoat, valued at $7, a coat and hat, valued at $3.50, and a knee rug valued at $2.50.

Johnson admitted stealing the raincoat, and hat and coat, and was convicted on the charge of stealing 17 hens (valued at $20) from Mrs. Turner in North Monaghan. He had been convicted once before, that was for theft in St. Catharines 11 years ago.

Mahaffy's record was not so good. On the 18th of October, 1910, he was convicted of getting money under false pretences. On October 22nd, 1911, he was found guilty of shopbreaking and theft. On October 20th, 1909, he was convicted of theft. On August 14, 1908, he was sentenced to three months for theft, and on October 23, 1907, he was sentenced to 22 months on two charges of theft. To this is added two years in Central Prison on three charges of theft, on November 24, 1913.

Johnson lives in Smith Township, and is a scavenger. Mahaffy was in his employ when arrested. Their crimes form a curious parallel to those of the Giles brothers, who were sentenced to a year in Central Prison some time ago.

Splendid Recital Saturday Evening

On Saturday evening a splendid recital was given in the Conservatory of Music Hall by Miss Jeanette Killmaster, assisted by Miss Jean Hill.

A large audience gave the two well-known musicians a very hearty reception, ever number receiving well-merited applause. Miss Killmaster's voice won the favour of the audience from the opening bars of her first selection. Her range, power and accuracy combined to make her voice wonderful in her rednitions of the difficult selections.

Miss Jean Hill displayed remarkable talent in her piano solos. She accomplished the unusual feat of playing the four or five instrumental solos, all of them difficult, without using a note of music. Miss Katie Leary played the second accompaniment with Miss Hill in a duet, very acceptably.

The recital was a musical treat of the choicest description and one of the most enjoyable given this year:

The programme was as follows:

"SAVING THE GIRLS."

On the first page of this issue of The Examiner is found a letter from "A Father" referring to an article in Saturday's Examiner upon the subject of "Saving the Girls." Our esteemed correspondent while agreeing in the main with this article courteously takes exception, to a passage that is regarded as reflecting upon the society under whose direction the policewoman addressed the audience present on Thursday night. The Examiner had not the slightest intention to reflect in the slightest way upon the work of this society, which is doing what is urgently necessary — arousing public opinion on the subjects it deals with Our phraseology may have been unfortunate, but the idea and intention were good The statement that "we did not need lectures by policewomen, or any other kind of policemen," was qualified by the statement that what we did need was a proper curfew law sanely enforced; and in this regard we maintain our contention. We want less talk and more action. These remarks, suggested by a specific condition, had a general bearing—a reference to the universal practice of talking subjects to death, instead of combining advocacy and action. In this regard the same applies to the criticized sentence—"The matter of saving our boys and girls from the dangers that roaming the streets at nights brings, does not call for sentimental hysterics and neurotic enthusiasm." Here the reference is to general conditions and not to a specific case. There was no intention to apply this to the lecture or the lecturer in question. The context shows that the remarks were general and only became specific insofar as their application to existing conditions in Peterborough might be justified, and the idea of criticising Mrs. Stebbins or the Local Council of Women, was only included, as far as they might be related to the general subject.

We do not regret that the terms complained of were used. Their application was general not local, and they have served the purpose of all speaking and writing upon any subject of the kind—they have aroused interest and provoked discussion—they will lead people to use their minds for thinking and help to promote action which is the one thing needed. We agree with our correspondent that "this city is indebted to the Women's Council for the public service they have rendered"; and that public service will be all the greater, the more it excites public interest, and creates a public opinion that will result in a demand for action. If they do this, as they are doing, they will have made great progress. This is the first step, but it will obviously lead to little result unless it leads to specific and effective action. An electric fire alarm is a splendid thing, but it is useless unless accompanied by practical means of extinguishing the blaze of which it gives warning. The invaluable work of the Local Council of Women is expressed in its sounding the note of warning and exposing the existence of undesirable conditions by lectures and otherwise; but their work to be really fruitful must lead to, or be attended with, doing something. This implies a demand upon the authorities—to make proper statutory provision that will include effectual enforcement by local authorities.

TUBERCULOSIS SUNDAY.

Tuberculosis Sunday was observed in the city churches yesterday, and as a result there will be excited a new interest in the subject, as the main object of the project of the propaganda is to prevent the spread of the disease, and promote curative or palliative treatment. There is no desire to present alarming figures; but in order to estimate the need of public cooperation, the submission of some figures to indicate the prevalence of the disease is necessary. The local Health Association has studied the records and the compaartive statement is made. In the past four years in the city of Peterborough, the deaths from pulmonary tuberculosis, not including other forms, totalled 116, while in the same period the mortality due to typhoid was 10, to scarlet fever 3, and to diphtheria 1. If we had had in that time 116 deaths from typhoid fever, instead of ten, there would have been a public revolt and a desire to jail the Water Commissioners.

At the present moment it is stated that we have 117 cases of tuberculosis in Peterborough. These figures need create no alarm; but they should stimulate action. Tuberculosis is not an inherited disease, but it is a contagious disease. It is curable if proper methods are adopted in the earlier stages of its manifestation. Upon these considerations is founded the demand for the adoption of every possible means for preventing contagion and applying some curative or ameliorative treatment. Isolation is one of the conditions demanded, and this cannot be secured in the average home or in our general hospitals. The law provides for the erection of local sanitaria, devoted to the care of tuberculous patients, the government sharing a part of the cost of buildings and paying a portion of the maintenance cost of patients. This suggests municipal action—city or city and county combined. At present that splendid body, the Peterborough Health Association, is the only substitute for a sanitarium. In the treatment of tuberculosis, nourishing food in a compact form, a form that combines all the body building elements, like milk and eggs, is demanded. Obviously many homes afflicted with the disease, cannot provide these and other articles of diet, and the patient has not a fair chance. But the Health Association, which employs two district nurses, has provided for patients during the past two years, 300 dozens of eggs and 30 quarts of milk, besides bedding, clothing, etc.

It is evidently our duty as a municipality or municipalities to encourage and extend this good work. There are three or four good reasons why. Common humanity calls upon us to alleviate suffering. Common prudence and the altruistic spirit call upon us to protect others. Tuberculosis is contagious and every effort should be made to prevent the spread of the contagion. Another reason is found in the fact that medical and sanitary science have proved effectual in the battle against the spread of the disease and in its cure or amelioration. In the province of Ontario considerable improvement has been made. In 1901 the death rate from tuberculosis was 150 per 100,000 of population. In 1908 the rate of deaths per 100,000 had become reduced to 112. Another reason consists in the fact that by persistent fight against tuberculosis, we shall improve the physical quality of our citizenship, not only by preventing spread of the disease, but by relieving afflicted homes of the care of members of the family, and releasing those charged and tied down and exhausted by their care, for active discharge of duty in the world. We should at least pay the same amount of municipal and sanitary attention to tuberculosis as we do to typhoid and the common contagious diseases which are, however, as our local statistics show, a hundred times less common than tuberculosis. Tuberculosis can be prevented and cured. Shall we unite to take the necessary measures to these important ends? Our interest should not cease with the passing of tuberculosis Sunday.

A MONSTROUS SYSTEM.

The Macdonald election, the foulest election crime in Canadian history, has been set aside and the member unseated, and evidently that is all we are to hear about it. The election crimes are to go unpunished or even officially unexposed. That is a monstrous system of dealing with election irregularities.—Calgary Albertan.

PRAISE FOR THE "WATER WAGGON."

The time has come when the man who drinks cannot keep in the front ranks of the procession. He must fall back with the laggards and the incompetents, even though his ability and energy, under proper conditions, entitle him to higher rank.

In the last ten years there has been a marked advance in the cause of sobriety. Fewer intoxicated men are seen in business, and virtually none now is trusted in any position of responsibility. The gulf has been widening gradually between the drinker and his sober brother. And while the battle against the "Demon Rum" is far from a rout as yet, certainly much progress has been made.

A striking illustration of the improvemnt achieved is shown in the statement of Lady Howard, daughter of the Countess of Carlisle, a noted English woman, who, after a prolonged visit to America, has sailed for home.

"Americans are more sober than Englishmen," said Lady Howard. "In all my knockings around your great city I saw only one man intoxicated, and I may have been mistaken as to his condition. He was coming out of the subway when I saw him reeling. Maybe it was the effect of the subway."

It is quite possible this "suspect" was not drunk, but only dizzy from the whirr of the underground railway. In any event, the distinguished visitor paid a high tribute to the intelligent manhood of New York.

There is less drinking here. Men are more and more realising whisky and work won't mix.—New York American.

THE BIG DEMAND OF NEWSPAPERS ON PULP WOODS

The abundance and cheapness of newspapers and other printed matter is one of the most salient features of our modern life. We take a complacent pride in comparing our one-cent 12-page productions with the insignificant six-penny "Times" of a hundred years ago. We seldom give it a thought that all this wealth of morning and evening editions, sporting extras, magazine sections and comic supplements, is making a tremendous drain on our forests of spruce.

One large daily paper in New York consumes in the course of a year as much spruce as can be cut from four to five thousand acres. If the proprietors of this newspaper maintained a forest, sufficiently large for the annual growth to supply them with all the pulp necessary for a year's consumption of paper, they would require a tract about 14 miles square.

The demand for spruce is not only large but rapidly increasing. In the United States, the cut of 1909 was double that of 1899 and six times that of 1889. It is not surprising, therefore, to learn that Mr. Pinchot has estimated that there is only from 10 to 30 years' cut in sight in the various states. Already, the production of pulpwood south of the border seems to have reached a maximum, having decreased from 1,786,000 cords in 1906 to 1,474,000 cords in 1910. This decreasing supply, operating in conjunction with the increasing demand, has led to a great augmentation in the imports from Canada.

At the present time, pulpwood is made almost entirely from spruce and principally by the mechanical process. In Canada, in 1912, the aggregate of wood used was 866,042 cords, and of this 677,747 cords were spruce. The aggregate of pulp manufactured was 682,632 tons, of which amount 499,226 tons were made mechanically. These figures represent an increase of about 44 per cent. over 1910. Canada has by no means yet reached the limit of her production, but it can only be a question of time till the operation of the same forces brings about the same situation as in the United States.

In the circumstances, the question of finding substitutes for spruce becomes of peculiar interest and it is interesting to learn that, assisted by a grant of $30,000 from Congress, experiments are now being carried on in Wisconsin with a view to testing the efficacy of such woods as hemlock and jack-pine as substitutes for spruce in the manufacture of paper-pulp. With regard to jackpine, it may be said that if it could be utilized in the making of paper, we might turn to profitable account a tree which, at present, has very little commercial value.— Conservation.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

JUNIOR CITY LEAGUE TEAM FOR PETERBOROUGH HOCKEY CLUB

Will Enter a Seven in Local Organization in Order to Develop Young Players for Use in O. H. A. Circles.

A CHANCE FOR YOUNGSTERS

With the younger hockey players of the city all clamouring for it, there is every reason to expect that a Junior City League will be organized this season. The Boston Exploits and Alerts have already signified their intention of joining such a league, and it is altogether likely that the Peterborough Hockey Club will place a team in the league in order to encourage and develop junior players.

A large number of candidates intend to try out for the O.H.A. team this year and it is the intention of the manager of the juniors after he has selected his O.H.A. seven to pick a City League team from the remaining candidates in order to bring along the young material. In view of the number of candidates turning out it would be possible to place a strong team in the City League ranks, and the youngsters would be coached and trained, ready to fill any gaps in the O.H.A. team and form the nucleus for faster company next season Other years it has been only found possible to handle at the most eight or nine men, but if the City League idea is carried out the Peterborough Juniors will have about eighteen youngsters in line. All young players who wish to try out should lose no time in handing in their names.

The City League team will be known as the Reserves.

"But Brickley Kicks 'em Higher Than Your Ends Can Ever Jump"

Grantland Rice seems to have the happy knack of uncovering a hunch in his clever jingles. Here are two verses he turned out last week under the title, "A Tip to Yale."

You have a line to make the fight,
As in the days of old;
You have your tacklers, left and right,
To face the Crimson fold;
You have your fighting ends to span
Each foeman with a thump;
But Brickley kicks 'em higher than
Your ends can ever jump.

You have an oldtime fighting bunch
To roll J. Harvard back;
From end to end you've got the punch
To meet the Red attack;
Your weight and speed, upon the bound
Is something more than fair;
Right well you have patrolled the ground—
But how about the air?

The sequel came on Saturday when Brickley, Harvard's great full back, kicked five goals from the field, Harvard winning by 15 to 5.

SHE WAS SAFE.

Little four-year-old Mabel was running down hill, holding her dress tightly.

"Be careful," called her mother, "or you will fall."

"Oh, no, I won't," replied Mabel, "'cause I'm holding tight to myself.

TWO BOOKS OF LOCAL INTEREST

Roughing It In The Bush
By Mrs. MOODIE

Lost In The Back Woods
By Mrs. TRAILL

The Authors of both of these Books lived in Peterboro' County and were well-known to people who are living in this vicinity.

"Roughing It in the Bush" gives a graphic and interesting account of the hardships of the Pioneers of this County in the days of the Rebellion of 1837 and the description of the Trip to Stony Lake in 1834 is very interesting. It is beautifully bound in cloth with gilt top and contains eight full page Coloured Illustrations of Rice Lake, the original Strickland Home at Lakefield, Cobourg, Toronto and other places mentioned in the story.

"Lost in the Backwoods" is of intense local interest—the scene of the story is cast on Rice Lake and the Otonabee River and will be re-read with a great deal of interest by the Public of Peterboro' and Northumberland Counties. It is published in cloth binding and contains several interesting illustrations.

Both of These Books will make Ideal Christmas Presents. The former is published at $1.50 and the later at 75c.

Many New Managers Next Year

Only Man Sure of His Job Seems to be Frank Shaughnessy

LONDON, Nov. 24.—With six and possibly seven new managers in the field, next season's fight for the Canadian League pennant will prove a hot one. At the present time the only man sure of his job in 1914 is Frank Shaughnessy, the famous base ball manager, football coach, crab, and other things too numerous to mention. But even Shaughnessy is thinking of retiring, and he says that next season will be his last.

Davy Rowan May Go Also.

At the present time six clubs are casting about for a leader. Davy Rowan has not yet been fired from Peterborough but rumour has it that he will be, so that it is not unlikely that seven new pilots will be found in the league when the curtain is rung up again next May. Of course, one must consider the move to oust Guelph and Berlin and if a six-team circuit is decided upon, there will then be only four or possibly five new men.

London and Guelph Running a Race

London is among those who are looking for a manager. The local club has been looking for a new manager every winter since the league organized. London and Guelph have been running a great race to see which club can hire and fire the greatest number of managers in the shortest possible time. Guelph has the edge so far, but London is just one behind. The Maple Leaf management has changed hands five times, while the local club has boasted of four managers. Both are looking for a new man for next season, so that by this time next year London may be able to catch up. Starting with Jo Jo Keenan, the London club has been handled in three short seasons by Frank Bowerman, Albert V. Barnett and Rube Deneau, and for a couple of weeks Louie Bierbauer was a sort of acting manager. Keenan and Deneau put in a full season each. Under this bunch of pilots the London club has always managed to finish in the first division, so that the local club has not suffered much from bad management. The Guelph Club has had the opposite experience. Its management has been bad, very bad at times.

Would it Pay?

If Frank Shaughnessy's six-club circuit idea is put through, which it likely will be if Erie and Niagara Falls cannot be secured, the League will revert back to its original size. The Canadian League started as a six-club League. Each team has a greater mileage to cover, and with the increased distance of Ottawa and Peterborough, it is just a question if a six-club league without Guelph and Berlin would be as good a paying proposition as an eight-club league with these poor-paying cities.

Taking No Chances.

An old man who had led a sinful life was dying, and his wife sent for a nearby preacher to pray with him.

The preacher spent some time praying and talking, and finally the old man said:

"What do you want me to do, parson?"

"Renounce the devil! Renounce the devil!" replied the preacher.

"Well, but, parson," protested the dying man, "I ain't in position to make any enemies."

INTERESTING AND EDUCATIVE ADDRESSES ON TUBERCULOSIS

Statistics Show Alarming Death Rate—Over 20,000 Victims a Year.

MEANS OF PREVENTION

Yesterday was observed as "Tuberculosis Sunday" in the local churches. Addresses were delivered by local doctors and others on the cure and prevention of tuberculosis. Dr. J. W. S. McCullough, of Toronto, Provincial Health Officer, and three local doctors, namely Dr. A. Moir, Dr. F. C. Neal and Dr. G. S. Cameron, were among those who contributed instructive and educational addresses.

Dr. Neal, who has made a special study of tuberculosis presented some veryvery startling and significant statistics in which he stated that a city the size of Peterborough is practically wiped off the map every year, from deaths due to tuberculosis, while over 80,000 are affected every year.

Coming still closer home, namely the Province of Ontario, at the present death rate, over 170,000 of the present generation are doomed to die of tuberculosis, if we do not take steps to prevent it. Now regarding the financial side of the question, it has been estimated, that the loss in wages, etc., in the United Kingdom amounts to £400,000 annually, while in the United States, Professor Fisher, of Harvard, estimates the annual loss to be $140,000,000 per year, as the death rate there is over 250,000 annually.

Coming now to our own city, said Dr. Neal, we have prepared a couple of charts, to which I wish to draw your attention.

The cost of tuberculosis is fourfold.
(1) The cost in lives.
(2) The capital cost.
(3) The cost in disability.
(4) The cost in unhappiness.

Re cost in money. The average age at death from tuberculosis is for males, 37.6 years, and for females, 33.4 years.

If we assume tuberculosis absent, and that those who now die would conform to the ordinary mortality, we find that each death from tuberculosis cuts life short in the average 29.4 years for males, and 34.5 for females, or 32 for all persons. Of this loss the major part occurs in the working period of life which is conservatively assumed to be the period between the ages of 17 1-2 years, and 60 years.

Males lose of this working period an average of 19.3 years, females 23.4 years, and both sexes combined, 21.4 years.

But putting it at the lowest figure, we find that death from tuberculosis cuts off, at least 24 years, of which 17 are in the working period before mentioned.

Local Application.

These statistics applied to our own city show us that in 116 deaths recorded since 1910 the city has lost on an average 17 years of working time to each patient, and calculating that each patient on an average would earn $500 a year, this means a loss in earning power of $986,000,000.

First Chart.

Number of deaths between 20-30. 1 out of every 3.

2. Number from column of pneumonia and bronchitis should be in column one.

3. In malaria, smallpox, yellow fever, Malta fever, leprosy, typhus fever, and other infectious disease the object is to remove source. Trying to do the same here, namely by education, and caring for advanced cases.

Now taking up the other side of the question, namely, the reason why we are optimists.

First of all it is necessary to get free from the old idea, that tuberculosis is hereditary, for such is not the case, and hereditary does not aid us in the diagnosis of the disease, but aids us in prognasis, of this curable, and preventable trouble.

From a scientific standpoint there is no disease, that makes such a strong effort to cure itself, as does tuberculosis. In fact it is the most curable chronic disease we have, and what a blessing it is that such is the case, for expert pathologists, and X-ray experts, have shown that over 80 per cent of the people have evidence of healed tuberculous lesions, while Von Pirquet has shown that the larger majority by the age of 14 years react to tuberculin, showing that they have been infected sometime during their lives, while only about 1 out of 7 give clinically, evidence of disease, thereby showing that the others have thrown off the trouble.

Again Dr. Trudeau after 40 years' experience says: "I have lived through many of the long dark years of ignorance, hopelessness, and apathy, when tuberculosis levied its pitiless toll of human life, unheeded, and unhindered, but I have also lived to see the dawn of a new knowledge, to see the fall of the death rate, to see hundreds who have been rescued, and to see whole communities of men and women, whose lives have been saved, and who are engaged in saving the lives of others. I have lived to the dawn of a new light from Nation to Nation, until it has encircled the globe."

Or if we take the result from other sources we find that during the last few years, the death rate in Ontario has been lowered 11.6-9.8; that Dr. Phillips in Edinburgh has reduced the mortality 42 per cent., or that from some of our institutions 60-70 per cent. of the patients have been cured, and back again at full work, and in our own county to-day some of the leading politicians, financiers, and professional men, have in the past suffered from tuberculosis.

Again comparing our mortality in Peterborough with mortality in Hamilton, where the work against the disease has been engaged in for six years, we find they have reduced their mortality 50 per cent., and with a population of over 80,000 last year, only 64 deaths occurred, as compared with 128 deaths a few years ago.

What Tuberculosis Is.

Coming to a description of the disease itself, we would define tuberculosis as a communicable, preventable, and curable disease, caused by a vegetable parasite, continued Dr. Neal.

This parasite, which is a minute form of plant life, is rod-shaped and motionless, and unable to multiply outside the body. They are from 1-10000 in. to 1-5000in. in length, and about 1-5 to 1-4 as wide. In fact they are so small that 16,000,000 could be placed in a single layer on a 2 cent postage stamp without crowding.

Besides, each parasite has a distinct coating of lipoid material, or wax, and it is this coating that protects the germ. From a scientific standpoint, it is this wax that is responsible for a great deal of damage done to the human system. The parasite, once lodged in the body, destroys some of the tissues, and by its growth, develops toxins, or poisons, which give rise to the symptoms which vary according to the part of the body invaded.

If it starts in the lung, it is known as pulmonary tuberculosis; if in the joints, as arthritis or white swelling; if the glands as adenitis or scrofula; if in the abdomen, as peritonitis; if in the brain coverings, as meningitis, or as lupus if it is located in the skin.

Mode of Infection.

In regard to the way the germ gains entrance to the body, it may be by—
(1) Inhalation, when the germ enters directly into the lung, and starts disease, or it may be swallowed and thus enter the circulation.

bility of infection, there are numer-

(2) By use of infective food, such as meat or milk, from tuberculous cattle. This has been shown by the British Royal Commission after nine years of study, to occur, in a certain percentage of cases, hence the necessity for dairy and meat inspection.

(3) Finally a few cases occur by inoculation or infection of wounds.

However, in addition to this possible predisposing causes, which may occur in the individual, such as—

(1) A hereditarily weak constitution.

(2) A weakened physical condition, resulting from sickness, such as pneumonia, la grippe or measles, any of which may light up an infection that has remained dormant for years, or cause catarrhal conditions, and thus form suitable soil. People usually attribute these cases to a neglected cold.

(3) Again, alcoholic excess, and dissipation are strong predisposing causes, as is also overwork, either physical or mental, which directs too much energy from organs concerned in making blood, and fatigue favours plantation of tuberculous germs, or in another word, overwork is the "sunshine that ripens the crop of tuberculosis germs." In addition to the predisposing causes in the individual, there are those of environment:

(1) Darkness and foul air, permits of activity of germs, which will remain ateive for months in dark and damp places. Sunshine is the best possible disinfectant, hence a house, where little fresh air and sunshine enters, is the granary for tuberculous germs, and every member of the family is doomed to get inplantation of seed.

(2) Dust from any source. All workers in dusty occupations, as polishers, brass-workers, tool-makers, grinders and many others, show high mortality, and strongly set forth the necessity for good ventilation, and all the necessary contrivances to keep down dust.

(3) Finally privation, especially under feeding, is a marked factor, or in other words, "Starvation and tuberculosis pass through, the world linked arm in arm."

Early Symptoms.

Once infection occurs, what are the early symptoms? Not cough, as is commonly supposed, but fatigue, irritability, loss of colour or anaemia, pains in the chest, stitches in the side, hoarseness, rheumatism (so-called) in the shoulders, loss of appetite, loss of weight, afternoon temperature, and a rapid pulse. At the onset it may be closely simulate, so-called la grippe, asthma, or bronchitis, and any cough persisting for more than six weeks, requires careful attention.

No child should lose weight, for such an indication shows that something is radically wrong. Early recognition is of the greatest importance, for the earlier the recognition, the greater the possibility of cure, while the farther the disease progresses the

High Court Opens Tuesday

Quartette of Cases to Be Tried by Mr. Justice Middleton—A Breach of Promise Suit

The Peterborough Cold Storage Company, Limited, versus John Hawley, Commission Merchant of Toronto.

George C. McBain vs. Cavan Township Council.

Thomas Brightman of Peterborough versus M. J. Quigley of Toronto.

Ellen E. Smart versus Charles E. Janett. No defence offered.

The foregoing quartette of cases represent the number of actions that have been entered for settlement at the non-jury sittings of the High Court which open in Peterborough to-morrow afternoon, before Mr. Justice Middleton.

In the first case, the plaintiff, Mr. Scott, proprietor of the Peterborough Cold Storage Co., seeks to recover the sum of $1,979.77, together with interest at five per cent., dating from March 28th, 1913, and costs of action. He alleges that he contracted to supply the defendant, John Hawley, with 1500 cases of eggs but only 900 were accepted. The latter quantity were resold at a price considerably lower than the original contract price. Plaintiff seeks to recover the difference, together with interest.

The defence claims that the eggs were musty and that owing to said condition he lost a number of old customers. He has entered a counter claim of $2,500 from defendant. Johnston, McKay, Dodds and Grant are acting for the defendant, and Bennett and Goodwill for the plaintiff.

McBain Vs. Cavan Township Council.

Mr. G. C. McBain is named as plaintiff in a suit against the Cavan Township Council for damage to his pasture land as the result of the diversion of the Lang swamp drain, which circled through his property. He claims damages for a breach of agreement and asks for a mandatory order directing the Council to carry out the terms of the agreement respecting the keeping of the course of the stream clear. Bennett and Goodwill are acting for G. C. McBain and Ruddy and Burnham for the Cavan Council.

Brightman Vs. Quigley.

Thomas Brightman, the well-known leather dealers of this City is plaintiff in an action to recover the sum of $2,34.00 from Mr. J. Quigley of Toronto. The plaintiff claims that the defendant, through one John Walsh, applied for a loan of $2,344. Plaintiff demands repayment of the loan together with interest and costs of action.

Hall, Medd and Davidson are appearing for the plaintiff, and Henderson and McGuire of Toronto, for the defendant:

Smart vs. Jarrett.

This invovles a breach of promise suit instituted by Ellen E. Smart, to recover from Charles E. Jarrett the sum of $1000 and costs. The parties to the case formerly resided in Cavan Township. No defence having been offered interlocutory judgment has been duly entered with damages to be assigned by th Court. Mr. R. E. Wood is acting for the plaintiff.

Home Re-union Association

Will Bring Four Natives of Scotland to This City—Have Already Brought 100 Here

The Home Reunion Association met in Mr. G. N. Gordon's office on Saturday night, and decided to bring four more people to Peterborough. The four immigrants are coming from Scotland, direct to this City, and their expenses will be met by the Association.

Up to the present, the Home Reunion Association have augmented the population by 100. They have advanced the money necessary for their coming to this country, and in every case they have been repaid every cent.

This speaks well for the class of people the Association is bringing to the City, and of the value of their efforts in regard to Peterborough's progress. The four natives of Scotland are expected to arrive within the course of the next two weeks.

Mr. H. W. Fobin Has Been Transferred to the West

The many friends of Mr. H. W. Fobin, who has for some time past been teller of the local branch of the Bank of Montreal, will be sorry to learn that he is leaving the city, having been transferred to the Winnipeg Branch of the bank. Mr. Fobin has made a host of friends in this city. Last season he was vice-president of the Peterborough Hockey Club, and he has taken a keen interest in all branches of sport.

RECEPTION AT THE ARMOURIES

A Reception will be held in the Recreation Room, Armouries (southwest entrance) on Wednesday, 26th inst., in connection with the bazaar to be held in aid of St. George's Church, South Peterborough.

All ladies and gentlemen are cordially invited to come with offerings, small or large, to fit up a booth for canned goods.

Mrs. Pretty and Mrs. Palmer have kindly consented to receive the guests from 3:30 to 6 p.m., and from 8 to 10 p.m.

ST. JOHN'S A. C.

Members of St. John's Athletic Football Club are reminded of the picture which is being taken at Roy's studio to-night at 7.30 prompt. This picture was unavoidably held over from a week last Saturday.

St. John's ended their football season last Saturday afternoon, when several players, taking advantage of the good weather, were seen out with the leather on the Exhibition ground. The club made much progress since its formation in the spring, and next season should see St. John's with a team in the Midland League.

Some eighteen members were on the Y.M.C.A. gymnasium floor on Saturday night and are making good headway in this branch of physical development, under the able instruction of Mr. Thompson. St. John's A. C. made a good move when they joined this institution as a club, and are now proving that they are nearly as good physically as socially.

"RAILBIRDS" AT THE POLICE COURT

Lawyer Would Have the Names of Police Court Frequenters Published

The usual coterie of "railbirds" congregated at the police station this morning. Many of their faces are more familiar to the Magistrate than some of the habitual inebriates that appear in police court from time to time. It has frequently been remarked that if a man loitered around the streets in the same manner as some of the "railbirds" loiter at the police court hearings, he would be arrested as a vagrant.

More than one lawyer has suggested a remedy be applied in the form of corrective punishment. A common suggestion is that a man be subject to a fine who appears in the spectators' gallery on three successive occasions. Another legal light would publish the names of police court frequenters.

Priests Rescue Sacred Vessel

Examiner Special:

NEW YORK CITY, Nov. 24.—While six hundred people knelt in the street praying for their safety, six priests braved the flame and smoke this morning to rescue the sacred vessels from the burning St. Mary's Church. They staggered out with the sacred vesesls high in the air, but none of them badly damaged. The church was wrecked.

CHRISTMAS IS NIGH! BUT WHERE ARE THE SIGNS?

One calendar month from to-morrow lands us on to Christmas Day. Yet so far one sees but few signs of the approaching festival season in our stores, to say nothing of the conspicuous absence of advertisements of Christmas goods, whether of toys, dress or cheer, in our daily papers.

Our home storekeepers must look lively if they desire to win their laurels, or they will find the Toronto mail-order houses capturing the Peterborough trade for which the man on the street understands they are about to make a powerful bid.

WITH OTHER COUNCILS

At the next session of the London City Council, Ald. Hubert Ashplant will introduce a motion for the establishment of civic works during the winter months that will provide work for the unemployed. His plan is a little more comprehensive than the municipal depot idea advocated by City Engineer W. N. Ashplant. The engineer's plan is for the employment of city labourers on cement and other departmental work during the winter, while the alderman's is for employment of as many unemployed citizens as possible. The alderman advocates a winter start on the sewage disposal plant and other public works during the winter, in order that employment may be secured for some days at least each week for breadwinners who otherwise might find it hard to make both ends meet.

At a meeting of the Berlin City Council a special committee was appointed to take steps to bring about a reduction in the price of milk. A conference with the milk-dealers followed with the result that the vendors practically convinced the special committee that the increase from seven to eight cents a quart was justified. Whether the committee will take any further action remains to be seen.

COMPLAINT OF LICENSE INSPECTOR STEWART, Etc.

lice court at all. That was why she had vented her anger on Mr. Stewart, and that was why she didn't think he had done his duty. Mr. Stewart did not think the Chief had a right to accept pleas of "guilty" in cases where he (Mr. Stewart) had laid the information, without his consent.

"I think the whole thing was caused by an angry woman," said Mayor Bradburn.

"Well," replied Judge Huycke, "a lot of troubles start that way."

The Chief's Version.

Chief Thompson's side of the affair, as he laid it before the Commissioners, is given below. The Chief said that he did not accept McCoy's plea of "guilty" until the License Inspector had agreed to it.

"Well, I didn't know till 9 o'clock the morning of the trial. That's too short notice, isn't it?" asked Mr. Stewart.

"That's all the notice I had myself," replied the Chief.

The Chief also explained that it was not necessary to serve the witnesses, when a plea of "guilty" was entered. Campbell, the man who supplied the liquor, also pleaded "guilty" on the back of a summons, and was fined $10.

"The question is," said the Judge "whether, under the circumstances, the Chief should take a plea of guilty in Mr. Stewart's cases without his consent."

"But he had his consent in this case," remarked the Mayor.

"Yes, but not in the Campbell case," replied Judge Hucycke.

"Well, I am perfectly willing to not accept a written plea of guilty in Mr. Stewart's cases," Chief Thompson suggested.

"If I couldn't take a written plea of guilty on the back of a summons for Mr. Stewart, I wouldn't have anything to do with them," said Magistrate Dumble. "It saves time, expense and trouble. Often a man saves his position by pleading guilty and not losing his day's work."

Mr. Stewart also charged that the Chief went into McCoy's home when he (McCoy) was drunk, and did not lay any information against him. The Chief said that Mr. Stewart was right. He used his discretion in that case, and thought it was carrying out the law better not to lay a charge.

"Why, Mr. Stewart," said the Magistrate, "I know of cases where you yourself have not prosecuted, and rightly so. You officials should use your discretion in this matter."

"There seems to be a lack of harmony between you two officials," said Judge Huycke. "Why don't you shake hands and work together in the future." But the suggestion was not acted upon.

Judge Huycke— "Well, the Chief says he is willing not to take written pleas of guilty in Mr. Stewart's cases in the future, so that we can let the matter stand over."

The other Commissioners agreed. Once more the Judge suggested that Chief Thompson and Mr. Stewart shake hands, but Mr. Stewart said "No, no. I have no quarrel with the Chief to make up. I dont think it's necessary to shake hands at all."

Detective Meagher, who served the summons on McCoy, was called in to give evidence. He explained that when he served McCoy with a summons, he said he would plead 'guilty' on the back of it, as his wife had planned to go away next day. His plea of guilty obviated the necessity of serving the witnesses. Meagher did not tell McCoy he would not have to appear in court, but told him to see the Chief.

No action was taken in the matter, it being allowed to stand over.

The letter from the Board of License Commissioners was as follows:

The Charges.

S. R. Armstrong, Esq.,
Sec. Board of Police Commissioners,
Peterborough.

Dear Sir,—Replying to yours of 11th inst, re complaint of the Board of License Commissioners against the Chief Constable for not assisting the License Inspector in his efforts to enforce the Liquor License Act, as he should, we beg to draw the attention of the Board of Police Commissioners to two cases reported to us by the License Inspector, wherein the Chief or his officers did not give the assistance we think they should have given, viz.:

1st. Chas. Gravell, Township Smith was convicted on 17th Aug., 1912, and fined $20.00 and costs, and was given 30 days to pay his fine, and in default of payment 30 days in jail. Warrant issued by Magistrate, but not executed until solicited by the Inspector on Nov. 9, 1912.

2nd. On Oct. 17, 1913, the Inspector charged John T. McCoy, a blacklister, with being drunk while on the list. The subpoenas were placed in the hands of the police for service the same day. The case to come up on the 21st Oct., to the Inspector's knowledge, the papers were never served.

Signed on behalf of the Board,
(Sgd.) M. A. MORRISON,
Chairman.

Chief Thompson's Reply.

The Chief's reply to the charges against him, was as follows:

To the Board of Police Commissioners.

Gentlemen,—Replying to the charges made by Joseph Stewart, License Inspector, against myself and the members of the Police Department as a whole, I beg to report as follows:

Re the Case of Charles Gravell

As you will notice, this offence was committed in the Township of Smith, and the defendant, I understand, was living in the said township at the time the conviction was made on August 17th, defendant having been given 30 days to pay his fine. The fine was not paid on the expiration of 30 days and a warrant of distress was issued. I made inquiries and found defendant was out of the City and returned the warrant of distress to the Clerk of the Court in the usual way. When a warrant of commitment was issued, I drew the attention of the members of the Department to the warrant, and was again informed that the defendant was not in the City. However, on or about the 9th of November, I received a telephone at my house, while home at tea, from Detective Newhall, informing me that Charles Gravell was arrested. By request of defendant, Detective Newhall 'phoned Mr. Archie Moore, who paid his fine and the prisoner was released. I cannot recall any instance of Inspector Stewart speaking to me regarding warrant not eing executed, and on no occasion do I send City constables outside of the City to execute warrant of committments, but if the parties return to the City, as this man did, they are arrested in the usual way, and the fines and costs collected or they are committed to prison.

Re the Case of John T. McCoy.

A summons was issued on October 16th, charging the above mentioned with being under the influence of liquor while on the prohibited list. The summons was served on defendant on the 20th day of October, to appear at police court on the 21st. Constable Meagher served the defendant at his house on Charlotte Street, telling him at the same time, he had a subpoena for his wife as a witness in the case, and a subpoena for another party, whose name I do not care to divulge. McCoy's reply to Constable Meagher was that his wife had made arrangements to go out of the City on the following morning, and said he would plead guilty on the back of the summons, and Constable Meagher advised him that he had better see the Chief Constable before court in the morning. He came to my house on the morning of the 21st of October, his case being set for that date. It was 8 a.m. when he was at my house, telling me that he had pleaded guilty on the back of the summons, and asked me if it would be satisfactory. I told him that the Inspector had laid the information and if he was satisfied to take the plea of guilty that I was. While he was standing beside me, I called Mr. Stewart over the 'phone, teling him that McCoy was there, and wanted to plead guilty to have him appearing in court, asking him at the same time if it would be satisfactory to him. Mr. Stewart's reply to my question over the 'phone was, "If he tells you who supplied him with the liquor, it will be all right." When Mr. Stewart came to court at 10 a.m. on the same morning, I gave him the name of the man who supplied McCoy with the liquor. He went downstairs to the Clerk and laid an information against the party who supplied McCoy. That party came to the police station the same night and pleaded guilty to the charge of supplying him the liquor and was fined $25.00, and costs, the Magistrate accepting McCoy's plea of guilty and fined him $10.00 and costs. The following day I received a telephone from Inspector Stewart, asking me why the papers in the McCoy case were not served. I told him they were served. He replied to me that the witnesses were not served. I replied to him that it was not necessary to serve the witnesses when McCoy had pleaded guilty and divulged the name of the man who had supplied him with the liquor. He apparently became very angry and told me over the 'phone that if he could not have his papers served properly when he left them at the police station, he would serve them himself. I replied to him that he could serve them if he wished to. The next morning he came into court. I spoke to Mr. Stewart in the usual way, bidding him good-morning, but he made no reply. I saw him the next day and told him the Magistrate had made an order placing a certain man on the prohibited list. He made no reply to me then, either. When I came to my office I wrote him to the effect that the Magistrate had placed a man on the prohibited list, of whom I had told him previously.

The above is an explanation of the cases cited by the Inspector and referred to as not receiving the proper assistance of the Chief Constable and the members of the Police Department.

In conclusion, I beg to submit for your information some figures for the year 1913, which will probably assist you in coming to a conclusion as to whether the Chief Constable and his Department have rendered the assistance they should have to the License Inspector in the enforcement of the Liquor License Act.

NOW IS THE TIME TO BUY MATTRESSES

November 27, 28, and 29, we shall display on our Floor and in our Windows, the complete line of the Famous "Ideal" Felt Mattresses.

And for the first time in Canada we shall show the new patent "NEVERSPRED" Mattress.

The patent on the "Neverspred" is the most ingenious device we have ever seen. We can't explain it in words, you must come in and have it demonstrated.

We shall also show the "HARINFELT" Mattress.

This Mattress combines the good qualities of both hair and felt mattresses. There is an increased ventilating power to these mattresses, because the alternate layers of hair and felt act as a bellows as soon as weight is placed upon it. Not only so, but the "Harinfelt" cannot mat, and so the mattress will never become hard or lumpy.

You will also be interested in the showing of the more moderately priced "ROYAL EGYPTIAN" and "DIXIE" Mattresses.

Moreover, our prices on all these lines are marked down to a figure which is most attractive to you.

Come in and see the display and at the same time note our special showing of Ideal Brass and Steel Beds, Coil and Woven Wire Springs and Babies' Cribs.

This is, we believe, the Best Display of Mattresses, Beds and Bedding that has ever been put before the people of Peterborough.

MISSIONARY SERVICES AT GEORGE ST.

Rev. C. A. Sykes, B.D., of St. Paul's Church, Toronto, Delivered Two Inspiring Sermons Yesterday

MUSIC WAS EXCELLENT

The Missionary Anniversary was observed in the George Street Methodist Church yesterday. The Rev. C. A. Sykes, B.D., of Toronto, delivered two inspiring sermons, and addressed the Sunday School for a brief period in the afternoon.

In the morning a very large congregation heard his message, and in the evening there was not a vacant place in the church.

The Rev. Mr. Sykes is a powerful speaker, and his sermons yesterday should prove a splendid inspiration to all in the George Street Church who are going to participate in the every member canvass.

In his evening sermon Mr. Sykes chose for his text the 1st epistle of Peter, Second Chapter and 8th verse.

Peter, he said, halted so long on the threshold of the truth, after he had said "Thou art the Christ" and when Jesus commenced to initiate him into the mystery of His death and resurrection, that Jesus was forced to suspect that he was not under the influence of the Truth, but of the Devil.

But Peter had his share of answering the curiosity of the world as to Christianity, for he had written this defence of Christianity—a reasonable statement of the Christian religion. It would be better for the world if the church had never needed a different method of justifying itself.

In modern times one who accepts beliefs defined in the catechism, is admitted into the Christian church. But Christ is only satisfied when one has experienced His power, and been thrilled by a personal, individual faith. That was Jesus' test of discipleship, and nothing less will He be satisfied with. Catechisms and creeds and confessions were all right, for we must have them. But there should be a freedom and latitude in them. Each age will interpret them in their own way.

"My Father!" Those were the greatest words that were ever uttered with regard to God. When Jesus tried to explain to the people why he worked and said what He did, He said, "My Father has always been doing these things" "My Father" was the initial note of the music of Jesus' lift. The anthem swelled high as Heaven, deep as Hell, rugged as the tortuous path of human experience, only to return to the initial note, "My Father."

What was the supreme feeling of the life of Jesus Christ?

Theologians would say "Jealousy"—Jealousy of the supremacy of God's law on earth. It was true that as a guardian of God's law He gave His life. But His jealousy was only incidental to His life work. Jesus' supreme feeling was compassion. When Jesus came to save humanity he put his heart into it, he felt with the people, to save whose souls he had come to earth. Oh! What a happy life Jesus must have lived—with what utter abandon He gave Himself for others. His sorrows were sweet sorrows, His agonies were near to paradise. And what were His claims for Himself? He said, "I an the Vine." But He claimed everything—He looks upon us as capable of most utter sacrifice for Him. He looks for us to give Him all we have and all we are. This is Jesus Christ's judgment of us—of all those who are misjudged by their fellow members of the human race. This was the extent of His faith in humanity.

The Missionary services yesterday were in a measure, preparatory to the Every Member Canvass, to organize which, a meeting of the men is being held this week.

Special music by Mr. J. H. Renwick and the church choir was greatly enjoyed at both morning and evening services.

Special to the "Examiner."

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 24.—Celebrated for its many adjournments, the big freight rates case was again called this morning before the Dominion Railway Commission. Much to the annoyance of Chairman Drayton, another adjournment was asked for by the counsel for British Columbia, who said he hadn't had time to familiarize himself with the case. He was given one day to do it, and the case will go on to-morrow morning, when J. P. Muller, an expert from Washington, will be in attendance.

New Moon On Thursday

On Tuesday Mercury will be at its closest point in its orbit to the sun and on the same day the moon will be at her nearest to the earth during the month.

On Wednesday the planet Venus and the moon will be within five degrees of each other.

On Thursday new moon will occur, at the time the moon will be within six degrees of Mercury.

The orbit of the planet Mars is outside of and much larger than that of the earth, as a result Mars moves in his orbit slower than the earth does; at the present time the earth is rapidly overtaking Mars and will catch up to him on January 1st next. Mars is now from us about 70 million miles. On January 1st we will be at our nearest to him, some 48 million miles. Mars to the present, has been moving easterly among the stars, but as our motion through space is more rapid, on Thursday he will appear to become stationary and then slowly recede towards the west until after we pass him on January the first, after which he will again take up his march towards the east again.

The Nearest Star.

Alpha Centauri is the nearest star to the solar system; its distance from us would require light 4 1-2 years to traverse; but this star is in the southern hemisphere. The nearest star to us in the northern hemisphere is numbered 61 in the constellation Cygnus or the Northern Cross, which is on the northwestern horizon at 9 o'clock at night. The nearest star, 61, is directly over the star that marks the end of the arm of the cross towards the east and about as far above it as the star marking the head of the cross. The star 61 is a double of a yellow colour and rather faint, its distance from us is estimated to be about six light years. If the distance of the sun from us be represented as one inch, the distance of 61 Cygni would be over seven miles. In determining this distance 330 separate photographic plates were taken and 30,000 measurements of these plates were made, to assure accuracy, the result agreeing closely with previous determinations arrived at by other methods.

RESCUE OF BEAUTIFUL GIRL FROM THE BONDS OF WHITE SLAVERY

Triumph of the Pocket Testament In Reclaiming a Life From Shame in Chicago Told by Mr. David S. Kidd-Byrne in the Royal Theatre.

GAVE TWO ADDRESSES

"Satan is mighty, but God is Almighty," said Mr. David S. Kidd Byrne in the Royal Theatre last night, in describing the rescue of Lucy Byrne from the hands of the white slavers in Chicago. The theatre was crowded to hear his account of the rescue, as the result of which the young girl was removed from a life of shame, and because of which Mr. Byrne found himself the possessor of over two million dollars at the death of the girl's father.

According to Mr. Byrne's address, he was led to the town of Simcoe, Ontario, by a curious inspiration. He was praying in his room one night when the words "Secord, Simcoe" became suddenly impressed on his mind. He went by chance one night to a mission, and there he met Mr. Secord. When he explained the inspiration to Secord he replied "At that very hour I was impressed with the words 'Kidd. Simcoe'." So the two of them went to Simcoe where they conducted evangelistic meetings, and converted a well known infidel.

From Simcoe he went to Chicago. There Providence guided him to a resteaurant, into which he went to get his lunch. When he went in he saw a man lying at full length, drunk or drugged. A beautiful young girl came into the room, and said, "Will you buy me a drink?" Mr. Byrne replied, "I am drinking of the Fountain of Life, where my thirst is always quenched." He thereupon read a chapter of his pocket testament to the girl and prayed for her. When he left the place she followed him, and he had saved her from her life of sin.

Referring to the institution in Toronto, Mr. Byrne said that if any mother learned that her girl was going astray, away from home, she could send the facts to the officers, who would rescue the girl without any expense to the parents.

Mr. Byrne related an occasion in Montreal, where a young girl from Trenton, Ontario, was going to be taken to one of the worst houses of prostitution, by a young man who said he was taking her to a boarding house. He rescued the girl, and she was taken to the Y.W.C.A., where her honour and womanhood were guarded until she made friends in the city.

In the afternoon Mr. Byrne spoke on the "Death of an Infidel." The Rev. J. G. Lewis acted as chairman.

INTERESTING AND EDUCATIVE ADDRESSES, ETC.

less are the chances of recovery, and the greater the possibility of the other members of the family becoming infected.

How is the Disease Spread?

Expectoration of patients is the chief source of danger, or discharge from other wounds, which is not destroyed, but allowed to become dry, and inhaled, as these fine particles, which float in the air, or are carried by flies into food supplies. Also danger of inhalation of droplets of moisture if the patient does not keep the mouth covered with a cloth, while coughing or sneezing.

Another important source of infection is due to the lack of house disinfection, for the tuberculosis germ is in every sense a house plant. If one patient is careless and leaves the house infected there may be a long list of deaths in that one house, due directly to lack of proper disinfection.

Again, milk from tuberculosis cattle may be a source in a certain percentage of cases.

Coming finally to treatment: The best treatment of all is "prevention," therefore our first attention should be directed to the children.

They should be protected from all possible sources of infection, such as may result from indiscriminate kissing, putting objects into the mouth, other than food or drink, or contact with dust in any form.

We should also see to it that we have proper inspection of milk, and meat supply, and that by adequate school inspection, children suffering from adenoids, and enlarged tonsils, may be cared for, as those greatly impair proper chest development.

Dr. Phillips, in Edinburgh, found that 33 1-3 per cent. of the children in schools exhibited stigmata of tuberculosis.

Also, the children's room should be the brightest room in the house, with good ventilation and plenty of sunshine.

In adults:—The greatest prevention is to educate patients in regard to the cough and disposal of "expectoration."

Patients should never cough, or sneeze without holding a cloth over the mouth and should destroy all expectoration. He should never expectorate on the sidewalk or in public places, or public conveniences, emphasized the speaker. In the fight against the disease the patient needs plenty of "encouragment," and medicines may be of help but "Patent Medicines" are worse than useless as they are extremely harmful.

The treatment, proper, consists of REST, FRESH AIR, GOOD FOOD, and later on, regulated exercise.

Be Optimistic.

Although it may sound simple, in fact so simple that many do not believe it true, it requires a good deal of close attention to small details, which often turn the scale in the patient's favour. Use "good food," easily digested and easily assimilated," i.e., eggs, butter, milk, and meat, but guard against overfeeding.

Fresh air supplies oxygen one of tuberculosis germs worst enemies, while rest gives the other two of thir greatest working facilities. Then comes "Graduated Exercise," to restore the body back to working capacity, and here good judgment is required, and just here so often the friendly neighbour offers advice, gratuitously although he little realizes the seriousness of the situation. Over exercise may be just as unfavourable to the patient, as an overdose of arsenic or strychnine ,regarding which not many neighbours would care to give advice.

Of course I am speaking of home treatment only, where the majority of patients have to be treated, for as yet there is not above one bed available to every ten patients, requiring treatment, while all far advanced cases have to be treated at home or in the hospital.

Now, in conclusion, allow me to say one word for the patient suffering from tuberculosis:

Remember the careful and educated patient is free from danger and should not b ostracised, as is so often the case.

Remember he is human, and has enough trouble and requires all the encouragement he can have, as his mental attitude goes far in helping him on his way to recovery.

With proper care he is free from danger, as is shown by the fact that although always having from 100 to 120 cases in Trudeau Sanatorium, there is yet to be one known case develop among the help, and there is yet to be known one authentic case to develop in any of the many institutions in England since proper care has been taken.

Be optimistic for no case ever had is not utterly hopeless, and remember this is one of the greatest problems in which there is so much to do and so little has been done.

Additional Names For Aldermen

Will Alderman W. J. Johnson Run for Water Commissioner in January Next?

The Examiner has been informed that the name of Mr. E. F. Mason is looming up as a likely candidate for alderman in the north ward. Should Alderman Johnston be a candidate for re-election, Mr. Mason would have to compete with him in the fourth ward.

But rumour has it that Mr. Johnston intends running for Water Commissioner this year, in order to be closely identified with the installation of the Hydro-Electric in this City. Should such be the case, he will have to run against Mr. W. H. Hill, who, it is prophesied, will come before the electors seeking re-election to the Water Commissioners this year.

Mr. R. Hicks' name is mentioned frequently in municipal circles, as a candidate for the Council in the centre ward.

MRS. BENJAMIN HOWSON IS BOY'S GUARDIAN

Judge Huycke Delivers Judgment Regarding the Care of Orphan

Reginald Howson, the eight-year-old boy, whose guardianship was contested by his grandfather, George Harding, of Dummer, and his half-brother, Mr. Harold A. Howson, of Toronto, was placed in the care of Mrs. Benjamin Howson, of Norwood, by an order of Judge Huycke given at the Court House this afternoon.

Such is the outcome of the case, the evidence of which was taken a week ago.

In delivering his judgment His Honour stated that he recognized the fact that both parties had certain rights concerning the boy's welfare. "Both are actuated by proper motives, and I believe have only the happiness and best interests of the boy at heart. I suggested at the hearing that a possible outcome would be to made Mrs. Benj. Howson guardian. I took this matter up with the counsel for both parties, but each refused to consent, and I have taken the whole question in my own hands."

Mrs. Benjamin Howson is sole executrix of certain money left by the boy's father to him. She thus has the control of his property. She is the trustee of his funds. The fact of the good circumstances of her home, she has a fine residence near Norwood, and can give the boy the best educational facilities. I thought it desirable that she be not only custodian of his estate, but also that she be appointed his guardian.

This was the order of the court and His Honour gave several other reasons which he said lead to his judgment. Both the grandfather and the half brother refused to have his opponent appointed as guardian. Thus if the boy were given to either, the other would probably never visit the little follow. His Honour arranged with Mrs. Howson to permit relatives to see the boy when ever they wish within reason, and during school holidays to make visits to either of them.

Mrs. Howson promised to treat the boy as if he were her own son, and to do all in her power to further his happiness and welfare.

Any member of either family may visit him, and the boy's half brother, an infant by the name of Head, is to meet him frequently in order that they may grow up well known to each other.

His Honour suggested that something be done to secure funds from the boy's estate for his keep. This can be legally arranged, and Mrs. Howson has promised to keep the boy's expenses within the income from the property.

Judge Huycke suggested that the grandfather should be recompensed for keeping the boy during the past six or seven months. Ten dollars a month would be appropriate, he suggested. Each party is to pay the costs of the case in order that nothing shall be taken from the estate.

Acquitted On Arson Charge

Two young Millbrook men, named Fisher and White, came before the Magistrate in Millbrook Saturday afternoon, to answer to a charge of arson, preferred against them in connection with the recent outbreak of conflagrations in and near Millbrook.

Several of the farmers in the country surrounding Millbrook have suffered recently from fires in their homes and outbuildings. These two young men were arrested, suspected of setting fire to a large barn of a farmer of that district. On Saturday afternoon, after the case was heard, they were acquitted.

Mr. G. N. Gordon defended the young men, and Mr. Kerr of Cobourg, conducted the prosecution.

Stock Markets

A. H. Stratton & Co., Brokers, report the following:

The latest developments point to no change in the stock market position. The standard stocks of the railroad class are bought on a scale down, but are allowed to decline until over sold. The industrials as a rule are sold on rallies for turns by the professionals on account of the trade conditions. The money situation is giving no cause for worry according to our reports and the December disbursement period should be passed with less trouble than that of Nov. 1st. U.P., S.P., N.P., G.Q., St. Paul, B.O., L.N., are the popular list of best purchases to be made on a scale down, U.S., A.C.P., and A.R., and the industrial list in most cases are being sold on rallies. The tractions are well taken, but the accumulation is slow.

American stocks in London quiet and steady.

EVANS IS WITNESS

He Reveals Complicated Relations of Union Life

AGENCY GOT THE MONEY

TORONTO, Nov. 25.—The investigation into the affairs of the Union Life Insurance Co. and other co-related companies was re-opened yesterday before Referee George Kappele, K.C., with Mr. H. Pollman Evans, recently arrived from Europe, as the chief witness. Mr. A. E. Masten, K.C., the representative of the Dominion Insurance Department, devoted most of the time yesterday to ascertaining from Mr. Evans the system of co-relation under which the Union Life Insurance Co. and eight or nine other companies, in which Mr. Evans was also the dominant figure, had been operated.

The evidence yesterday for the most part centred around the Union Life Co., the National Agency, which was described as "the managing agent" for the Union Life Co.; the Agency Lands and Securities Co., and the National Land, Fruit & Packing Co., which was the veritable sink-hole into which so much of the borrowings from England were placed.

The relationship of the National Agency and the Union Life was elicited at the outset of the renewed investigation. Mr. Evans stated that, besides being president of the Union Life, he was secretary and director of the National Agency. The function of the National Agency was, later in the day, made the subject of some sharp cross-questioning by Mr. Masten, in which it was shown that although the National Agency was nominally the managing agent for the Union Life Co. and got ten per cent. on total commissions for this position, the Assurance Company had practically done all its own work.

Another Dash by Shackleton.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—A London cable says Sir Ernest Shackleton, the famous Antarctic explorer, who had reached furthest south before Amundsen discovered the south pole, is planning another south polar dash, to take place within two years. Although plans for the expedition have not been completed it is believed Sir Ernest will follow the route taken by Capt. Scott.

CANADA OFFICIALLY WELCOMES THE TANGO DANCE—While the careful dames of London and New York are debating on the advisability of permitting the Tango dance at their popular functions, Canada has given it a sort of official welcome. The above drawing, by E. P. Gray, was made in a fashionable Toronto tearoom. It was the first public "Tango Tea" to be given in Toronto since the inception of the craze that has swept two continents. About one hundred people, including many people well known in the younger social set, were present.

Principals In White House Ceremony Hold a Rehearsal.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25. — The flutter of happy anticipation of today's wedding of Miss Jessie Woodrow Wilson and Francis Bowes Sayre reigned supreme at the White House yesterday.

Through the twilight hours in the softly diffused light of the east room the entire bridal party rehearsed in detail the ceremony of to-day. Later the young folks were entertained at a dinner and dance by the officers of the U. S. Mayflower, the President's yacht, aboard that vessel, anchored at the navy yard. The elders—that is, the relatives and members of the immediate families of the bride and groom—were the guests of the President and Mrs. Wilson at dinner at the White House.

Wedding gifts continued to arrive in boxes and packages innumerable yesterday. Over the presents a guard stood all day and night. It was learned that the gift of the President and Mrs. Wilson is a dining-room set of furniture.

Unique Gift For Miss Wilson.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—A delegation representing 500 girl employes of a white goods factory left yesterday for Washington to present Miss Jessie Wilson, the President's daughter, a hand-embroidered linen petticoat as a wedding gift.

All of the 500 girls played some part in the making of the fine petticoat, which is embroidered with a garland of roses and an American eagle and flag, bearing the initials J. W. S.—Jessie Wilson Sayre. The idea was prompted by appreciation of work that Miss Wilson has done as a social worker among New York factory girls.

PRISON FOR ROBBERS.

London Pearl Thieves Are Sent to Do Long Terms.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—Sentence was pronounced at the London sessions at the Old Bailey yesterday on four prisoners charged with stealing and receiving a pearl necklace valued at $650,000 which disappeared during transit by registered post from Paris to London on July 16, but was later found with only one or two pearls missing.

The accused were arrested on Sept. 2 while negotiating the sale of the pearls.

Two of the men, Lockett and Grizard, were condemned to seven years penal servitude each, Silberman to five years and Guttworth to eighteen months' hard labor.

After the prisoners had been found guilty their police records were produced and showed that three of them had been convicted previously. Chief Inspector Ward said that Lockett had been convicted in the United States.

Needed Brutality.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25. — On the strength of a written confession that she had taken up with an illiterate horse-trainer, because "she needed brutality to make her happy, Charles Dwight Folsom, a well-known lawyer, was granted an interlocutory degree of divorce from his wife in the Supreme Court here yesterday. Mrs. Folsom, her mind and body shattered from the "brutality" of A. G. Williams, a Nevada horse-breeder and trainer, was last heard of in a hospital in Chico, Cal., deserted and penniless. Since then she has wandered away.

CAN IMPROVE PORT

Goderich Good Harbour of Refuge Declare Experts

CAPTAINS IGNORE WARNING

GODERICH, Nov. 25.—That improvements for the proper equipment of Goderich harbor should include a modern foghorn suitably placed, a well-manned lifeboat station and adequate lights, and that the basin should be dredged out to a greater area were the facts elicited from Capt. W. O. Whitney of Ashtabula, O., who is here in the interests of the Lake Carriers' Association, in his examination by Crown Attorney Seager at the evening session of the wreck inquiry.

Captain Whitney estimated the property loss in the great storm as amounting to $2,500,000, and the lives lost as 175.

The witness believed that the harbor of Goderich could be made a good harbor of refuge, capable of accommodating any vessel. As to storm signals, he said that these were observed by masters to some extent, but they were in the habit of leaving port in the face of the signals and taking chances of dodging the storm. The barometer should have afforded a warning of the storm of the 9th inst., but sometimes, it was said, a captain would hang his hat over the barometer so he could not see it. The witness had no theory as to the causes of the loss of so many vessels, except that the storm was an extraordinarily severe one. The steamer McGean, with which he was acquainted, had a first-class equipment, and her life preservers that had come come ashore were in good condition.

Captain Malcolm C. Cameron of the passenger steamer Huron, and Captain Hartman endorsed the views of the previous witness as to the improvement of Goderich harbor.

Another adjournment was made to Monday, Dec. 1. This is expected to be the final session of the inquest.

Captain Bassett, of Collingwood, managing director of the company owning the ill-fated Wexford and other vessels, recalled, was first examined by Crown Attorney Seager, and was reminded of his statement on Friday regarding Goderich harbor. Witness said that what he meant was that the harbor improvements were being made piecemeal. The Government was taking ten years to do what could and should be done in one year. It simply meant putting more men at work on the job. If the harbor were improved, as it should be, it would be a good harbor, capable of giving shelter to any boat. There was no other harbor on this side of Lake Huron that could be made a harbor of refuge.

Mr. Seager suggested a comparison of Lake Huron and the Georgian Bay in point of safety, but the witness said the Georgian Bay had no terrors for him, as he had sailed it nearly all his life and knew it intimately. A good foghorn at Cove Island was one of the safeguards for boats entering the bay.

Death of Rev. Jacob Walter.

LISTOWEL, Ont., Nov. 25.—Rev. Jacob Walter, a well-known and highly respected resident of Listowel for the past twenty years, passed away on Sunday morning, following a lengthy illness. Deceased had been living retired in Listowel. He leaves a widow, five sons and five daughters.

TO INQUIRE AGAIN.

U. S. Legislator Thinks Prices Will Stand Another Probe.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25—Another federal investigation into the high cost of living, promising criminal prosecutions, if Attorney-General McReynolds can find an alleged cold storage conspiracy, got under way yesterday and a Congressional investigation of a different phase of the cost of living problem was threatened. While special agents of the Department of Justice are sifting charges that eggs, poultry and dairy products are being piled up in cold storage to maintain high prices and even force them higher, Representative Britten of Illinois is preparing to ask for a Congressional investigation into the prices of meat.

The proposal for a meat investigation was prompted by an announcement that the navy had bought nearly $3,000,000 pounds of Australian fresh beef at a half cent a pound lower than the best prices of American packers, and 120,000 pounds of canned corn beef from the Australian packers at eight cents a pound cheaper than the lowest price in the United States. The price paid was 11.90 cents a pound for the fresh beef and 15.37 cents for the corned beef.

Announcing his intention to ask for a Congressional investigation of the navy's beef contract, Congressman Britten declared he wanted to develop why the public could not benefit by the advantage of buying from Australia if the navy could do so.

ESCAPED BY SHEETS.

Insane Woman Fractured Her Arm In Fall From Window.

TORONTO, Nov. 25.—By clambering hand-over-hand down an improvised ladder, made of five knitted bed sheets, 35 feet in length, Mrs. Goodwin, an inmate of the Hospital for the Insane on West Queen street, made her escape early yesterday morning, and was free for several hours.

With the ends of the sheets knotted to a bar in the window the woman swung into space and commenced her perilous descent. When within ten feet of the ground, the window screen to which her ladder was attached gave way and she fell to the ground, fracturing her right arm.

Undaunted by the agony caused by her injury, the insane woman made her escape over the brick wall surrounding the grounds and was picked up hours afterwards by a police constable, wandering on West Queen street, nursing her broken arm, and in a very weak condition.

ORME

FIGHT IN PROGRESS

Mexican Federals and Rebels Are In Momentous Conflict

U. S. WATCHES OIL-FIELDS

EL PASO, Texas, Nov. 25. — The federal artillery is driving Gen. Francisco Villa's forces back into Juarez. A desperate battle has raged for an hour opposite Belen, Texas.

Fighting started ten miles south of Juarez. West of Juarez another federal force is moving on Juarez.

The telephone girl at Ysleta, Texas, a border town a few miles east of here, stated that a fierce battle was in progress between Villa's rebel band and federals at that point, and that the rebels were retreating toward Juarez. All the available cavalry in Juarez is being sent to the southeast to reinforce the rebels there.

Wounded men from the battle apposite Belen, Texas, are crossing the border to the Texas side. One has reached El Paso, Jose Gonzales being the first to arrive. He said a general battle was in progress southeast of Juarez.

All American troops at Fort Bliss are being held in readiness for immediate action, and additional troops, troop C 13th Cavalry and a machine gun platoon and troop L 13th Cavalry are now moving to El Paso to reinforce the patrol.

The battle opposite Belen appeared to be general, and artillery was being used by the federals.

Warships Sent to Oil Fields.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—In spite of recent assuring reports from the oil fields on the east coast of Mexico, foreigners in that section are still very apprehensive, appeals to Washington indicating that they believe not only their property, but their lives are in danger. Renewed private requests for protection following closely upon a cablegram from Chas. O'Shaughnessy at Mexico City saying it was rumored there that the United States was about to land marines, caused Secretary Daniels yesterday to instruct Rear Admiral Fletcher, commanding the American fleet, to proceed personally to Tampico and Tuxpam and investigate conditions there.

The admiral sailed late yesterday from Vera Cruz on his temporary flagship, the battleship Rhode Island, for Tampico.

Much has been left to his discretion and he himself will decide whether it is necessary for him to go ashore for conferences with the constitutionalist leaders who have occupied the oil territory and are threatening the ports of Tampico and Tuxpam. The admiral was assured a few days ago by Gen. Aguilar, chief of the revolutionists, that there would be no interference with American or other foreign affairs.

What Mitchel's Election Cost.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—The total cost of the fusion campaign that resulted in the election of John Perroy Mitchel as mayor of New York City was $129,510, according to the report of Charles L. Bernheimer, treasurer of the citizens' municipal committee, made public yesterday.

Among the large contributors to the fund were: Andrew Carnegie, $7,500; Jacob H. Schiff, $6,000; and Cleveland H. Dodge Perkins and John D. Rockefeller, $5,000 each. Many — — contributed.

"That Affair Next Door"

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

"It was found by Mr. Gryce in a closet off your father's dining-room, a short time after the dead girl was carried out."

"I don't believe it," vociferated the young man, paling with something more than anger, and shaking from head to foot.

"Shall I put Mr. Gryce on his oath again?" asked the Coroner, mildly.

The young man stared; evidently these words failed to reach his understanding.

"Is it your wife's hat?" persisted the Coroner with very little mercy. "Do you recognize it for the one in which she left Haddam?"

"Would to God I did not!" burst in vehement distress from the witness, who at the next moment broke down altogether and looked about for the support of his brother's arm.

Franklin came forward, and the two brothers stood for a moment in the face of the whole surging mass of curiosity-mongers before them, arm in arm, but with very different expressions on their two proud faces. Howard was the first to speak.

"If that was found in the parlours of my father's house," he cried, "then the woman who was killed there was my wife." And he started away with a wild air towards the door.

"Where are you going?" asked the Coroner, quietly, while an officer stepped softly before him, and his brother compassionately drew him back by the arm.

"I am going to take her from that horrible place; she is my wife. Father, you would not wish her to remain in that spot for another moment, would you, while we have a house we call our own?"

Mr. Van Burnam the senior, who had shrank as far from sight as possible through these painful demonstrations, rose up at these words from his agonized son, and making him an encouraging gesture, walked hastily out of the room; seeing which the young man became calmer, and though he did not cease to shudder, tried to restrain his first grief, which to those who looked closely at him was evidently very sincere.

"I would not believe it was she," he cried, in total disregard of the presence he was in, "I would not believe it; but now—" A certain pitiful gesture finished the sentence, and neither Coroner nor jury seemed to know just how to proceed, the conduct of the young man being so markedly different from what they had expected. After a short pause, painful enough to all concerned, the Coroner, perceiving that very little could be done with the witness under the circumstances, adjourned the sitting until the afternoon.

XIV.

A Serious Admission.

I went at once to a restaurant. I ate because it was time to eat, and because any occupation was welcome that would pass away the hours of waiting. I was troubled; and I did not know what to make of myself. I was no friend to the Van Burnams; I did not like them, and certainly had never approved of any of them but Mr. Franklin, and yet I found myself altogether disturbed over the morning's developments. Howard's emotion having appealed to me in spite of my prejudices. I could not but think ill of him, his conduct not being such as I could honestly commend. But I found myself more ready to listen to the involuntary pleadings of my own heart in his behalf than I had been prior to his testimony and its somewhat startling termination.

But they were not through with him yet, and after the longest three hours I ever passed, we were again convened before the Coroner.

I saw Howard as soon as anybody did. He came in, arm in arm as before, with his faithful brother, and sat down in a retired corner behind the Coroner. But he was soon called forward.

His face when the light fell on it was startling to most of us. It was as much changed as if years, instead of hours, had elapsed since we last saw it. No longer reckless in its expression, nor easy, nor politely patient, it showed in its every lineament that he had not only passed through a hurricane of passion, but that the bitterness which had been its worst feature, had not passed with the storm, but had settled into the core of his nature, disturbing its equilibrium forever. My emotions were not allayed by the sight; but I kept all expression of them out of view. I must be sure of his integrity before giving rein to my sympathies.

The jury moved and sat up quite alert when they saw him. I think that if these special twelve men could have a murder case to investigate every day, they would grow quite wide-awake in time. Mr. Van Burnam made no demonstration. Evidently there was not likely to be a repetition of the morning's display of passion. He had been iron in his impassability at that time, but he was steel now, and steel which had been through the fiercest of fires.

The opening question of the Coroner showed by what experience these fires had been kindled.

'Mr. Van Burnam, I have been told that you have visited the Morgue in the interim which has elapsed since I last. Is that true?"

"It is."

"Did you, in the opportunity thus afforded, examine the remains of the woman whose death we are investigating, attentively enough to enable you to say now whether they are those of your missing wife?"

"I have. The body is that of Louise Van Burnam; I crave your pardon and that of the jury for my former obstinancy in refusing to recognize it, I thought myself fully justified in the stand I took. I now know that it was not.'

The Coroner made no answer. There was no sympathy between him and this young man. Yet he did not fail in a decent show of respect; perhaps because he did feel some sympathy for the witness's unhappy father and brother.

"You then acknowledge the victim to have been your wife?"

"I do."

"It is a point gained, and I compliment the jury upon it. We can now proceed to settle, if possible, the identity of the person who accompanied Mrs. Van Burnam into your father's house."

"Wait," cried Mr. Van Burnam, with a strange air, "I acknowledge I was that person."

It was coolly, almost fiercely said, but it was an admission that wellnigh created a hubbub. Even the Coroner seemed moved, and cast a glance at Mr. Gryce which showed his surprise to be greater than his discretion.

"You acknowledge," he begun—but the witness did not let him finish.

"I acknowledge that I was the person who accompanied her into that empty house; but I do not acknowledge that I killed her. She was alive and well when I left her, difficult as it is for me to prove it. It was the realization of this difficulty which made me perjure myself this morning."

"So," murmured the Coroner, with another glance at Mr. Gryce, "you acknowledge that you perjured yourself. Will the room be quiet!"

But the lull came slowly. The contrast between the appearance of this elegant young man and the significant admissions he had just made (admissions which to three quarters of the persons there meant more, much more, than he acknowledged), was certainly such as to provoke interest of the deepest kind. I felt like giving rein to by own feelings, and was not surprised at the patience shown by the Coroner. But order was restored at last, and the inquiry proceeded.

"We are then to consider the testimony given by you this morning as null and void?"

"Yes, so far as it contraducts what I have just stated."

"Ah, then you will no doubt be willing to give us your evidence again?"

"Certainly, if you will be so kind as to question me."

"Very well; where did your wife and yourself first meet after your arrival in New York?"

"In the street near my office. She was coming to see me, but I prevailed upon her to go up-town."

"What time was this?"

"After ten and before noon. I cannot give the exact hour."

"And where did you go?"

"To a hotel on Broadway; you have already heard of our visit there."

"You are, then, the Mr. James Pope, whose wife registered in the books of the Hotel D—— on the seventeenth of this month?"

"I have said so."

"And may I ask for what purpose you used this disguise, and allowed your wife to sign a wrong name?"

"To satisfy a freak. She considered it the best way of covering up a scheme she had formed; which was to awaken the interest of my father under the name and appearance of a stranger, and not to inform him who she was till he had given some evidence of partiality for her."

"Ah, but for such an end was it necessary for her to assume a strange name before she saw your father, and for you both to conduct yourselves in the mysterious way you did all that day and evening?"

"I do not know. She thought so, and I humoured her. I was tired of working against her, and was willing she should have her own way for a time."

"And for this reason you let her fit herself out with clothes down to her very undergarments?"

"Yes; strange as it may seem, I was just such a fool. I had entered into her scheme, and the means she took to change her personality only amused me. She wished to present herself to my father as a girl obliged to work for her living, and was too shrewd to excite suspicion in the minds of any of the family by any undue luxury in her apparel. At least that was the excuse she gave me for the precautions she took, though I think the delight she experienced in anything romantic and unusual had as much to do with it as anything else. She enjoyed the game she was playing, and wished to make as much of it as possible."

"Were her own garments much richer than those she ordered from Altman's?"

"Undoubtedly. Mrs. Van Burnam wore nothing made by American seamstresses. Fine clothes were her weakness."

"I see, I see; but why such an attempt on your part to keep yourself in the background? Why let your wife write your assumed names in the hotel register, for instance, instead of doing it yourself?"

"It was easier for her; I know no other reason. She did not mind putting down the name Pope. I did."

It was an ungracious reflection upon his wife, and he seemed to feel it so; for he almost immediately added: "A man will sometimes lend himself to a scheme of which the details are obnoxious. It was so in this case; but she was too interested in her plans to be affected by so small a matter as this."

This explained more than one mysterious action on the part of this pair while they were at the Hotel D——. The Coroner evidently considered it in this light, for he dwelt but little longer on this phase of the case, passing at once to a fact concerning which curiosity had hitherto been roused without receiving any satisfaction.

"In leaving the hotel," said he, "you and your wife were seen carrying certain packages, which were missing from your arms when you alighted at Mr. Van Burnam's house. What was in those packages, and where did you dispose of them before you entered the second carriage?"

Howard made no demur in answering.

"My wife's clothes were in them," said he "and we dropped them somewhere on Twenty-seventh Street near Third Avenue, just as we saw an old woman coming along the sidewalk. We knew that she would stop and pick them up, and she did, for we slid into a dark shadow made by a projecting stoop and watched her. Is that too simple a method for disposing of certain encumbering bundles, to be believed, sir?"

"That is for the jury to decide," answered the Coroner, stiffly. "But why were you so anxious to dispose of these articles? Were they not worth some money, and would it not have been simpler and much more natural to have left them at the hotel till you chose to send for them? That is, if you were simply engaged in playing, as you say, a game upon your father, and not upon the whole community?"

"Yes," Mr. Van Burnam acknowledged, "that would have been the natural thing, no doubt; but we were not following natural instincts at the time, but a woman's bizarre caprices. We did as I said; and laughed long, I assure you, over its unqualified success; for the old woman not only grabbed the packages with avidity, but turned and fled away with them, just as if she had expected this opportunity and had prepared herself to make the most of it."

"It was very laughable, certainly," observed the Coroner, in a hard voice. "You must have found it very ridiculous"; and after giving the witness a look full of something deeper than sarcasm, he turned towards the jury as if to ask them what they thought of these very forced and suspicious explanations.

But they evidently did not know what to think, and the Coroner's looks flew back to the witness who of all the persons present seemed the least impressed by the position in which he stood.

"Mr. Ban Burnam," said he, "you showed a great deal of feeling this morning at being confronted with your wife's hat. Why was this, and why did you wait till you saw this evidence of her presence on the scene of death to acknowledge the facts you have been good enough to give us this afternoon?"

"If I had a lawyer by my side, you would not ask me that question, or if you did, I would not be allowed to answer it. But I have no lawyer here, and so I will say that I was greatly shocked by the catastrophe which had happened to my wife, and under the stress of my first overowering emotions had the impulse to hide the fact that the victim of so dreadful a mischance was my wife. I thought that if no connection was found between myself and this dead woman, I would stand in no danger of the suspicion which must cling to the man who came into the house with her. But like most impulses, it was a foolish one and gave way under the strain of investigation. I, however, persisted in it as long as possible, partially because my disposition is an obstinate one, and partially because I hated to acknowledge myself a fool; but when I saw the hat, and recognized it as an indisputable proof of her presence in the Van Burnam house that night, my confidence in the attempt I was making broke down all at once. I could deny her shape, her hands, and even the scar, which she might have had in common with other women, but I could not deny her hat. Too many persons had seen her wear it."

But the Coroner was not to be so readily imposed upon.

Next To Consumption.

There Are More Deaths From PNEUMONIA Than Any Other Lung Trouble.

Pneumonia is nothing more or less than what used to be called "Inflammation of the Lungs."

Consumption may be contracted from others, but as a rule pneumonia is caused by exposure to cold and wet, and there is only one way to prevent pneumonia, and that is to cure the cold on its first appearance.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup will do this for you if you will only take it in time.

Mrs. Wm. M. Steeves, River Glade, N.B., writes:—"Please allow me to express my gratitude for the presence of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup in the house, for I believe it saved our little boy's life. Three years this fall we were in the lumber woods, and it was very hard to get a doctor to us, and our little boy got pneumonia, and was very ill. The only relief he could get was to take Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and with the combined use of the Syrup, and your British Troop Oil Liniment, he soon got better, and was around in a couple of weeks. It certainly is a great remedy."

Price, 25 and 50 cents.

BLUNDERS OF ARTISTS.

Curious Examples in the Dome of the National Capitol.

In the dome of the capitol at Washington there are eight great paintings carefully designed and executed by the artists for the adornment of the nation's greatest building. Yet five of them are either defective in technique or in error as to natural or historical facts.

One of the best known pictures is that in which Washington is shown resigning his commission to the Continental congress. There are two young girls, almost life size, standing in the foreground. They are very pretty young girls, but one of them has three hands. One left hand rests on the shoulder of her companion; another left hand is round her companion's waist. Doubtless the artist Trumbull painted both hands to see which pose he preferred and then forgot to paint out the superfluous hand.

Diagonally across the rotunda is the painting of the baptism of Pocahontas. Sitting in the foreground is Opecancanough, the uncle of Pocahontas. He is barefooted, and the artist has given him six toes on his left foot.

In the painting of the landing of Columbus, which used to be reproduced on the five dollar banknote, the artist has painted three flags. They are very well drawn, but one is blowing east, one west and one south, which indicates a very variable condition of the wind on that famous day.

In the picture of the surrender of Cornwallis General Washington is conspicuous seated upon a white horse. But General Washington was not present at the surrender. Cornwallis did not surrender his army in person, but sent a subordinate officer to do so. Accordingly Washington detailed an officer of corresponding rank to receive the surrender. It would have been a breach of military etiquette for Washington to be present.

The fifth picture, "Signing of the Declaration of Independence at Philadelphia on July 4, 1776," is wrong only in the title. The Declaration of Independence was adopted on July 4, but it was not signed by the members of the congress until Aug. 2, 1776.—Youth's Companion.

It is now proposed to install "movies" on the farm to keep the son and daughter from going away. A mechanical milker and a suction cleaner might be more efficacious.

A careful consideration of the new tariff law shows that the tax on chewing gum has been increased, which goes to show that girls cannot expect fair treatment until they get the ballot.

Seventeenth Century Civility.

If the seventeenth century Englishman failed in his manners it was not for want of instruction. "The Rules of Civility," a book published in 1675, contains the following hints on good behavior: "Being in discourse with a man, 'tis no less than ridiculous to pull him now and then on the Stomach; 'tis a pleasant sight, and well worthy of laughter, to see him that is so puncht, fall back, and retire; whilst the other, insensible of his absurdity, pursues and presses him into some corner, where he is at last glad to cry quarter, before his comrade perceives he is in danger." And again: "It argues neglect, and to undervalue a man, to sleep when he is discoursing or reading; therefore good manners command it to be forbid; besides, something there may happen in the act that may offend, as snoring, sweating, gasping or dribbling."

No Use For Fresh Air.

Old time doctors had no faith in the virtues of fresh air. Andrew Boorde in his "Compendyous Regyment or Dietary of Helth," published 1542, writes: "To bedward and also in the morning use to have a fire in your chamber, to waste and consume evil vapours within the chamber, for the breath of man may putrify the air within the chamber. In the night let the windows of your house, specially of your chamber, be closed, let your nightcap be of scarlet, and this, I do advertise you, to cause to be made a good thick quilt of cotton, or else of pure flocks or of clean wool, and let the covering of it be of white fustian and lay it on the feather bed that you do lie on."—London Chronicle.

Somersault by Aeroplane.

Captain Aubry of the French army accomplished a complete somersault while aboard an aeroplane high above the earth. "I was returning after a thirty-five minute flight," the captain said, "facing a wind of about twenty-two miles per hour. My altitude was about 2,500 feet. At the moment of descent a series of violent gusts struck the machine. As I dipped the nose of the machine a couple of quick gusts struck the top of the main planes and placed me in a vertical position. While endeavoring to manipulate the elevator I found the machine had taken me in a perfectly vertical chute to less than 1,500 feet. It here adopted a horizontal attitude upside down and proceeded to effect a tail first volplane." Continuing, he said: "The machine then gradually took up the vertical position again, describing a gigantic 'S' while doing so. Flattening out, I flew to a spot about two miles distant."

Corrected the Inspector.

In a police court an inspector was giving evidence of the arrest of the prisoner. "I went to No. 27," he said importantly, in a dignified staccato fashion that came from long practice, "where I saw the prisoner in bed. I said, 'I have a warrant for your arrest for burglariously entering the premises at'"—and so on. At the end of the inspector's evidence the magistrate asked the prisoner, "Any questions?" "Yes, sir," said the prisoner, and he intimated that the inspector had not given his evidence correctly. "I'm sure," he said, "Mr. Jackson," the inspector, "don't want to say only what is true. Didn't you come to my room," turning to the inspector, "and say, 'Now, then, Ginger, 'op out of it—I want yer?'"—London Mail.

THE NORTHERN LIGHTS.

It's a Mistake, Says a Scientist, to Say They Emit Sounds.

German scientists are greatly interested in a discussion regarding new phenomena revealed by the aurora borealis, according to recent Norwegian and German observers. People living in the northern part of Norway maintained that they often hear sounds accompanying the northern lights. These sounds are described by some as similar to the crackling of flames.

Accordingly German and Norwegian scientists started out to investigate the phenomena, and one of them, Olav Aubakken, has spent a long time at the Hialide observatory in Finmarken. Aubakken thinks that it is very unlikely that any sound is to be heard from the northern lights. He maintains that the human senses are not to be relied on, especially regarding the phenomena of sight.

Aubakken says that the idea of sound connected with the northern lights may result from the fact that these lights look like flames, and as people are accustomed to associate the crackling sound with flames the rather uncritical observer of the blazing movements of the aurora borealis is apt to think that he really hears the sound of those flames.—New York Press.

His Good Eye.

A man who had lost the sight of both eyes trained his hearing until he could tell by the sound of his footsteps on the sidewalks as he made his way about town whether he was in the middle of the walk or at one side, whether he was walking past a brick or a frame house or a fence or open ground. He knew in what part of the town he was not only by his memory or sense of general direction, but by the difference in the "tones" of his footsteps, and he walked about freely, seldom running into anything or anybody. Some one in his presence once called in question his total blindness.

"Which eye do you think I can see with?" he asked the skeptic.

"The left one, of course," was the reply. "I can see that the right one is blind."

In reply the blind man merely opened his penknife and tapped the left eye with the little blade.

It was a glass eye.

In the Same Boat.

"Sir, could you give me a little assistance?" said the weary wayfarer. "I don't know where my next meal is coming from."

"Neither do," replied the prosperous looking individual. "My cook left this morning too."—New York Globe.

Thumbs Down.

The turning down of the thumbs in the old Roman games did not signify death. There was no such sign. To signify that the spectators desired the death of the vanquished gladiator the fist, with the thumb hidden inside it, was turned down.

A murderer is a man who can use his wife's nine dollar ball bearing washing machine and make her forget that what she wanted was an automobile.

Nervous Energy is Limited

There is only so much energy in the human body. A few people have an abundance, but more have not enough. Hence the necessity of conserving vitality.

If wasted by mode of living, disease or worry there must be a reckoning, and trouble is sure to come. It may be headaches and weak, aching eyes; it may be nervous indigestion, or it may be merely lack of energy and ambition, and feelings of fatigue or helplessness. Of course, sooner or later exhaustion of the nerves leads to prostration, paralysis or locomotor ataxia, but there is no need to let the trouble develop that far.

By using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food you can restore to the feeble, wasted nerve cells the energy they have lost. It will take some effort on your part to give up worry and anxiety, but you should realise your serious condition. Rest and use this great food cure and you are bound to improve in health and vigour.

Diamond Cutting.

The brilliant is generally considered the finest form of diamond cutting. The top of the brilliant consists of the table—an eight sided facet in the centre—surrounded by thirty-two smaller facets, which reach to the girdle, the thin edge separating the crown from the lower part of the stone, called the pavilion. The pavilion has 24 facets, terminating in a small facet called the culet. The best stones are cut so that less than one-third of the whole is above the girdle.

"Am I badly hurt, doctor?"

"No, no. It's a pretty severe sprain, that's all. When you turned suddenly and ran into the fire hydrant you seem to have slipped off the curb and twisted your ankle. You'll be all right in a week or so."

"Yes. And, doctor, one request."

HOW ANIMALS THINK.

Instances and Records of Reasoning Power of Dumb Creatures.

Most people, despite loads of facts demonstrating that animals think, consistently maintain that they do not. The most remarkable signs of intelligence is admitted, it is looked upon by these persons as a different brand from that displayed by themselves.

A friend of the writer has a dog—a spaniel—that shows remarkable intelligence. When anyone enters the gate leading to Mr. B.'s country home, Pedro—the dog in question—barks a warning of the approach of a stranger. On the writer's first visit of Mr. B's home, he received this attention, but the very next time he went near that house, Pedro approached him silently and walked by his side through the small park surrounding the property. And the remarkable thing about it was that it was pitch dark at the time—so dark that the animal was absolutely invisible to the visitor.

Now, it was certainly his sense of smell that revealed the writer's identity to the dog, but it was memory that told the animal that it was no stranger who was approaching; while it was reason that informed him that it was unnecessary to bark in such circumstances.

That monkeys think there can be little doubt, and how very like humans they can be is illustrated by the case of one of these—a macaque—in captivity.

A large nut had become wedged in one of his cheek pouches, and by the time it was discovered by the keeper it was necessary to remove it by lancing. This was done from the outside and then the wound was stitched.

There and then was born a monkey magician. The animal had soon removed the stitches, and proceeded to amuse himself and mystify his fellow by most mysteriously causing a peanut to pass through his cheek and come out by his mouth. Or he would reverse the process, putting the nut into his mouth and passing it out through his cheek. Not content with this he demonstrated that the same feat was easily performable with a straw in place of a peanut. And be it said, no one watching the calm expression of the performer and the the wonderment of the onlookers could for a moment hesitate as to what any one of them was thinking about.

That animals dream is almost as certain as that they breathe. Watch a sportsman's dog after an exciting day. As he lies curled up on the doormat, he will jerk uneasily in his sleep and yelp with eagerness. If you have ever seen the same dog trying to dig out a rabbit, you will never doubt that he is dreaming of the chase.

In their wild state, animals must show intelligence in procuring food and in escaping their enemies. The cunning of an old fox is proverbial, and it is only experience that can enable one fox to show greater skill in eluding pursuit than his younger brother. If only instinct were necessary, the younger animal with all his faculties sharper, would have the advantage.

Who dare deny that a dog can smile?—and who has not seen some dog suffering deep melancholy?

That a dog may even possess dignity capable of being grievously offended was clearly demonstrated to the writer by Pedro, the dog already mentioned at the beginning of this article. Pedro was going out shooting with his master but fifty yards away from the house, Mr. B. was called back to the telephone. He left his gun lying on a grassy slope, and the writer sat down to wait, with the dog at his feet.

Presently, by way of a joke, he picked up be gun and invited Pedro to come along, which he joyously prepared to do. Then the gun was returned to the ground and the joker laughed. Highly offended, Pedro turned his back upon the culprit, and slowly walked towards the house.

He had been hoaxed, and he resented it.

Dead Easy.

Two guests missed the first courses of a dinner at a suburban home, which had been arranged partly in their honor. Hand bags had been searched, distant homes called on the telephone for information, much nerve energy had been expended, all because the key to the trunk containing the necessary dinner raiment could not be found. Finally a locksmith from the town four miles away came by automobile, was led to the trunk, and in less than a minute the lid was turned back.

"Good work," said the maid.

"Dead easy," said the locksmith; "the thing wasn't locked at all."—New York Tribune.

Downing Street, London.

The greatest street in the world is one of the smallest. This is Downing street, a dark little alley in the west of London. Here is the real centre of the British Empire, for it is at 10 Downing street that the Premier has his official residence. Ever since Robert Walpole was the Prime Minister, 200 years ago, the heads of the Government have made their homes in this "alley."

Invented In Canada.

Mr. Kenneth J. Dunstan of Toronto has settled definitely by producing writings of Alexander Graham Bell that the telephone was really invented in Brantford, Ont., instead of Boston, as the American people are inclined to boast. Mr. Dunstan possesses the early history of the telephone, and has complete directories of one sheet each—the first to be used in Hamilton and Toronto.

Went a Shade Better.

"You—you are temperamentally impossible!" roared the first angry man.

"And you," replied the second, getting red in the face, "are temperamentally inconceivable."

Pleasures make one soft and lazy, but not happiness. Happiness is as bracing as sea air.

Don't Worry.

"Don't worry" was the recipe for long life recently given by an aged physician who had preserved his youth. "Good advice, but impractical," you say. But did you ever give it a real trial? A person can't stop worrying merely by saying, "Go to, now; I am not going to worry any more." The more he thinks about stopping the more impossible it is to stop.

There is a way, though. Don't consciously try to stop worrying, but get interested in something else.

If you have something to worry about and give yourself the opportunity you will do a lot of worrying. But if you keep busy you won't give worry a chance. When a great sorrow comes a person may simply abandon himself to it by letting his other interests lag. But by looking about for something to absorb his attention he can put himself in a wholesome frame of mind.

Worry can be fought the same way.—Kansas City Star.

John Bright and Queen Victoria.

In the "Life of John Bright" the author relates that the great man's first visit to Queen Victoria was an ordeal, but it passed off well. The incident was described in a letter from Lord Granville to Mr. Gladstone in which the writer says:

The beginning of dinner was awful—the queen with a sick headache and shy—Princess Louise whispering unintelligibly in my ear and Lady Cliffden shouting ineffectually into the still more impenetrable receptacle of sound belonging to Charles Grey. Bright like a war horse champing his bit and dying to be at them. At last an allusion to children enabled me to tell Bright to repeat to her majesty his brother's observation, "Where, considering what charming things children were, all the queer old men came from." This amused the queen, and all went on merrily.

TWO WATERLOOS.

It is a very curious fact that a good many people do not know that two battles were fought at Waterloo. Both of these were fought against the French, the first under the command of the Duke of Marlborough on August 17, 1705, who on this date actually occupied the same ground as the Duke of Wellington did a little more than a century later, June 17, 1815, the only difference being that the former was marching on Brussels and the latter was marching from Brussels. In the first place the French were defending Brussels. They marched on to meet Marlborough, but owing to the slackness on the part of Schlangenburg, the Dutch general, who was fighting with him, it was not a success, Marlborough only taking a few of the French troops as prisoners. The following one, fought against Napoleon by Wellington, proved to be one of the greatest victories ever recorded in the annals of England.

Daring Criminal Operations of a "Gentleman Burglar"

By JOSEPH A. FAUROT.

(Copyright, 1913, by the New York Herald Co. All rights reserved.)

A MAN who can batter and crash his way to freedom from the Tombs Prison, then so ingratiate himself into the affections of a young woman of refinement as to become a suitor for her hand, all the time with the fixed purpose of looting her jewel casket in mind, is a criminal far above the ordinary and one far safer in Sing Sing than at large. George Witson, sometimes known as Wilson and under many other aliases, is such a person, and the police of New York city are highly gratified that through their efforts he is safely incarcerated behind steel bars and stone walls.

Witson is variously referred to as the "American Raffles," the "Gentleman Burglar" or the "Polite Burglar." Any one of these sobriquets is well merited, for each fits him to a nicety. Suave, polished and exceptionally good looking, Witson, or Wilson, found it so easy to effect an entree into any circle of society he elected that his thefts ranged all the way from petty larceny to burglary in the first degree, and, in police parlance, he would steal anything that would net him a nickel.

Once more, I am gratified to say, scientific police methods—finger prints to be exact—made it possible to trap Witson. It led to his incarceration in the Tombs prior to his sensational escape and it again brought about his capture in Philadelphia after his escapade in Atlantic City, where he robbed the young woman to whom he had been paying ardent court.

For many months the Detective Bureau was harassed by a series of burglaries throughout the city. While these robberies were perpetrated in widely separated sections of the four boroughs of New York, we soon arrived at the conclusion that one master mind evolved and made possible the execution of each. In every instance where the victims of these robberies came in actual contact with the robber they later described him as a man of polish and refinement and with the manner of a Chesterfield. He was compelled to relieve them of their valuables, he always explained, but said explanation was made with such charm and grace that many of his victims afterward declared they really felt that he was conferring a favor upon them by marking them for his plucking.

One of the most striking cases of this sort has to do with the robbery of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick L. Taylor in their handsome Clermont avenue apartment.

Mr. and Mrs. Taylor were asleep in their bedroom, at the rear of their handsomely furnished apartment, when a little after four o'clock Mrs. Taylor was startled by the sound of some one moving stealthily about the room. In the half light she saw the dim figure of a man bending over the dresser.

Mrs. Taylor's stifled scream awoke her husband and brought the intruder to the bedside with a bound. He levelled a long revolver and ordered them not to make a whisper on pain of their lives.

As the intruder gathered up his loot, Mrs. Taylor pleaded:—

"I wish you would not take the wedding ring."

"Oh, well," said the burglar, "I understand. Permit me to make you a present of the ring."

As the polite burglar vanished the screams of the Taylors from a front window attracted a policeman, who, seeing a man running in the opposite direction, gave chase and Witson was captured. There was no photograph to identify the prisoner by, but after taking his finger prints we sent them broadcast in the hope that his record would come to us from other sources. He was locked up in the Tombs and we bided our time, hoping before he came to trial in the Taylor case we would be able to fasten other similar crimes upon him.

Five days after Witson, Wilson, Williams or Anderson, whichever name one prefers to call him, since he had hosts of friends and victims under each, was locked in the Tombs, New York's most spectacular prison escape was effected. Soon after the supper hour and when the noses of the 688 prisoners were being counted preparatory to locking them up for the night, it was found that only 687 could be accounted for. One man was missing and after again checking the list that man was found to be Witson, the polite burglar. The prison was searched from cellar to garret, but no trace of the fugitive was to be had. Two hours and a half after the first alarm was given a man was seen to emerge from a manhole in the prison yard on the Lafayette street side. Witson's duties as a kitchen man in the Tombs took him regularly into a vault where coal and potatoes were stored. This vault is under the annex where the Bridge of Sighs terminates at the southerly end.

When he emerged he was only a few feet away from William Houlihan, an armed guard, whom he felled. Notwithstanding this Houlihan fired one shot from his revolver. Witson then seized the pistol and ran a few feet. As Houlihan gained the fugitive turned and fired, then vanished in the alley between the annex and the main prison.

Covered Him with a Pistol.

Anderson in Holiday Array.

Bogus Gallery Photograph of Charles Anderson.

Later it was learned from several boys that a man dropped from the prison wall, seized the cap of one of the urchins and then vanished from view.

It is needless to say the city was combed by detectives more thoroughly than it ever had been before. Here was a man we knew was a burglar of the boldest type, and furthermore he had proved he had no respect for locks, iron bars or granite walls. He was at large in the city, and that was enough for us. Our first clew came, strangely enough, through another case. Detective Randolph had been assigned to investigate a man of the name of Lawrence, who lived at No. 691 East 138th street. By the merest chance Randolph learned that Lawrence five years earlier had become acquainted with Charles Anderson while in the Tombs. Anderson was one of Witson's many aliases. Upon their release from the Tombs Lawrence and Anderson met frequently. This Randolph learned from the janitress, for the Lawrences had moved from the apartment without the formality of giving notice, merely walking out with their few personal belongings and leaving the keys sticking in the door of the flat.

Mrs. Lawrence was later located by the detective, who also found that her husband had left the city, she at the time officiating as housekeeper for two men named Fox and Walsh.

Mrs. Lawrence said Anderson had come to her flat in East 138th street a few days after the Tombs escape. He was intoxicated, she said, and slept on a couch in her dining room from the early afternoon until nearly midnight. He told her about his flight from the Tombs and added that he had given a boy a dollar for the cap he appropriated as he dropped from the wall into the street. He had a long, heavy jimmy, a revolver of heavy calibre, a fine gold watch, a pocket flashlight and $85 in cash. He had been to Boston, he said, "turned a trick" there and returned to New York. He told her he had arranged to "pull off a fat job" in the city that night and still another the next night at one of the beaches. He expected the latter robbery would net him $500 and that it necessitated blackjacking a man whom he described as "a giant." He showed Mrs. Lawrence a pair of gold cuff links decorated with a jewelled skull and cross bones. These, he said, were his mascots, for he always "cleaned up" handsomely when he wore them.

Randolph found another family, friends of the Lawrences and of Anderson, who corroborated all Mrs. Lawrence had said. It was also learned that Anderson had been previously arrested in New Jersey, where he was known as the "Marble-head Burglar." He gave the name of an old friend, Fox, at the time of this arrest.

Witson's, or Anderson's, description, as well as his finger prints, had been sent broadcast through the United States, Canada and Europe. This precaution soon bore fruit. From England we learned he had operated there and had also served a prison term. Little by little we traced his record until we learned his history from his early boyhood in San Francisco through all his wanderings and to the various positions he had filled in New York. The more we learned about him the more anxious we were to recapture him.

We got a clew which led me to send a man to Atlantic City and Philadelphia. Well, to be brief, that clew was reliable, for just three months after his escape from the Tombs he was arrested as he stepped from a train in Philadelphia.

While in Atlantic City Witson lived like a prince at a beach front hotel. There he met a Miss Price, of Wilmington, Del., and paid her marked attention.

One evening Witson took Miss Price to dine with him and ordered a scrumptious and costly spread. Before midnight he escorted her to her home, bowed most politely and was off for his own home, supposedly.

In the early morning Miss Price was awakened by a masked man standing over her bed. He made her give up $300 in jewelry. Fortunately an absent sister had in her keeping other articles, valued at $2,700.

Miss Price thought her best friend in Atlantic City was Witson. At five o'clock, still hysterical, she telephoned him to come to her and he came. He advised her to calm herself, and then about seven o'clock he took her to breakfast.

"You should tell the police," he advised her, and Miss Price telephoned Police Headquarters at Atlantic City. Two detectives answered the call and Witson was recognized, but escaped in an automobile to Philadelphia. There he was arrested.

Of course I was elated when word came from Philadelphia announcing Witson's recapture. We notified the Philadelphia police to guard him jealously, for he was possessed of an iron nerve. But it seems that Witson found a brief interval in which this vigilance was relaxed, for he had picked the lock of his cell and was just emerging into the tier when he was detected, overpowered and shackled.

We afterward learned he occupied a beautiful apartment in Philadelphia. He had a costly motorcycle and this was generally used as conveyance to and from Atlantic City. A gray wig and false gray whiskers were found in his apartment, and this bore out the report of several persons on the road between Atlantic City and Philadelphia "that an old man who rode like the wind" sped past them so fast on frequent occasions that they likened his passing to that of a ghost.

But once the iron bracelets encircled his wrists he wilted and his conviction and removal to prison speedily followed.

As a man of resource, skill and nerve he had no equal.

New York Spends Millions Annually To Be Entertained by Music's Charm

New York, Saturday.

FOR the romance, the gayety, the comfort, the sentiment the lulling and the content of music, the city of New York as a municipality and as a people spends from $3,000,000 to $10,000,000 annually, either directly or collaterally. You cannot come any nearer than this in the way of estimate or computation, because there is so much music bought and paid for every day and night in the year that is furnished for instruction as well as for amusement and entertainment the best you can do is make a guess and then you may be a million miles—or dollars—out of the way.

Approximately speaking, New York pays out of the municipal purse about $200,000 as its minimum contribution to music every year. The Department of Parks—Manhattan and Richmond—spends about $40,000; the Department of Docks for music on the recreation piers about $35,000, and the schools, directly or indirectly, with recreation sundries, the remainder. Sometimes the school amount varies. The figures given are the average.

Wonderful results are reported by the city officials from the music outlay of the municipality. Many folks think the band concerts on the piers and in the parks are merely a superficial affair, the incident connected with the possible whim of a man or woman who has made a fight for the melody. They are of the opinion that let there be a band concert or let there not be a band concert it makes very little difference. The public merely listens because it is there to be listened to. But read what Charles A. Mauley, the superintendent of all matters relating to the city's recreation piers, has to say about it:

"I have made a careful study of the psychology of the recreation pier. I was of the opinion when the first recreation pier was established that the fact that it was a pier and that the water was adjacent was the source of whatever pleasure the people might derive from it. I felt positive that when tired or perspiring men, women and children had the pier for a gathering spot the problem of helping sweltering humanity during the summer months had been solved in so far as it was possible for people to enjoy it. That was some years ago. I have been in charge ever since and am still studying the conditions. Now, take this as a positive opinion.

"The number of people who would visit the piers if there was no music provided would be next to nothing. It is the music that brings them. It is the music that holds them. Stop the music and they start away. They even wander off between numbers. There is not the least doubt in my mind that while the recreation pier has an inviting title and seemingly should be a complete blessing, that of itself it is far from accomplishing the result that was first supposed would come as a matter of course. We need the music to bring them to a spot where their health and comfort will be promoted. It seems strange that you have to tempt folks to do something for their own good, but so it is. The recreation pier and the music must go hand in hand to accomplish the city's beneficent purpose. One band concert on a pier is equal to many tons of good cheer and better than hundreds of doctor's prescriptions."

The band concerts in the various parks of the city during the pleasanter months of the year attract millions of people and the benefit derived is reported to be incalculable. A gathering on the Mall in Central Park on Saturday afternoons and evenings during the summer has to be seen to comprehend the appreciation of many thousands. There are men and women who attend regularly and who have been coming for many years. For nearly half a century these Saturday concerts have been given. Grandfathers and grandmothers who attended as boys and girls find very little changed. It is one of the few spots left unmolested in the big city. The programmes are arranged by the Park Commissioner and W. J. Lee, the superintendent of recreation parks and playgrounds. All tastes are considered, although Mayor Gaynor once said there was too much of tendency to give all classical music on piers and in parks—"the kind that even the fish in the river couldn't stand the noise of," as the late Mayor put it.

Between fifty and seventy city bands have the work of providing music in public places distributed among them. The Park Department arranges for concerts in the parks situated at or named Abingdon square, Battery, Bryant, Carl Schurz, Central Park, Chelsea, Colonial, Columbus, Corlears, De Witt Clinton, Fort Washington, Hamilton Fish, Hudson, Morningside, Mount Morris, Queensboro, Seward, Tompkins square, Washington square, in Manhattan. In the Borough of Richmond, under the same Park Commission, concerts are given at Curtis Field, Port Richmond, Washington Park, Stapleton, Westerleigh, Pleasant Plains, Tottenville and Alaska Park. Brooklyn and Queens and the Bronx have separate commissions. They furnish pleasure to music lovers at the parks in the same way. The Manhattan and Richmond concerts last through June, July, August and September. Last season they numbered about 288 concerts.

The recreation pier at Barrow street, Fiftieth street and 129th street on the North River, and at Third street, Market street, Twenty-fourth and 112th streets, East River, and at Metropolitan avenue, Brooklyn, were all thronged last summer on band nights. It is estimated that ten thousand attended every concert at the Twenty-fourth street pier and fully five thousand at the 129th street pier. Other nights when there was no concert no matter how hot the weather the attendance was cut seventy-five to eighty per cent.

Dr. Frank R. Rix, who has charge of the music in the elementary schools and who advises as to the routine and methods in high schools, is enthusiastic as to the character formative influence of musical instruction.

"There is no reason at all why the hundreds of thousands of pupils in New York's public schools should not be able to read music fluently when their public school days are finished. We are now teaching so that this is plainly within the accomplishment of all. I have found this out—and you may emphasize it as strongly as you wish and it will not be too strong—wherever you find a public school showing a high percentage in music you will find that same school showing a high percentage of efficiency in other studies. I have never known it to fail. There is that about the close study of music that requires a kind and depth of thought which is equally efficacious in the mastery of all other studies. As for what New York schools are achieving under the present system of musical education, I wish you could have been at School No. 14 not long ago. A piece of music in three parts was placed before the pupils and without the slightest hesitation they read it perfectly. There are fifty-three music teachers in the elementary schools. They bear the brunt of the imparting of the rudiments of a musical education because they have to take up the raw scholar. We produce excellent results when you consider we are apportioned only sixty minutes for music tuition per week and that the cost of tuition per pupil is about eleven cents a year, or about fifteen cents per pupil per year. In counting music books. For instruction alone in elementary schools the cost is $80,000. There is no other city that does as much on so little. It is money well expended."

It is estimated that the theatres of New York spend between $300,000 and $350,000 a year for music. Of this between $100,000 and $150,000 is expended by the Metropolitan Opera House corporation. The remainder does not represent all of the expenditure for music at places of a semi-theatrical character.

The head and centre of those who earn their bread through music is the Musical Mutual Protective Union, or Local 310 of the American Federation of Labor. To this body belonged 5,187 musicians at last listing. Outside of the union it is estimated there are in New York 1,500 "floaters." The pay of musicians ranges on an average from $5 to $15 a day or a night, as the case may be. There are members of the union who are virtuosos earning hundreds and thousands a performance. At the headquarters the impossibility of computation of what New York as a people pays for music was pointed out, in that the ratio between the employed and unemployed varied so constantly there was nothing positive on which to base an estimate. The union is one of the strongest exponents of unionism among the American trades, professions or callings. The lines are finely drawn and they "stick for the price."

Private music tutors there are by the thousands. Their aggregate salaries it would be impossible even to guess at. This is the reason why musicians say that the estimate of what New York pays for music, all told, may run up to $10,000,000—and again may not. This large sum takes in all forms of music for which money is paid by the New Yorker, including the graphophone. Conservatively $3,000,000 might be set as the expenditure.

A musical innovation for the municipality will be the giving of grand opera in the parks of New York, which is being planned by Recreation Superintendent W. J. Lee. In connection with this open air singing project goes an acoustic mobile stage, so that the voices of the singers will be bound to carry, and the paraphernalia may be taken down and set up handily.

"I would have had grand opera in the parks last year," said Superintendent Lee, "had it not been that an agreement as to details and necessities could not be reached in time by the city officials having to pass upon the plan. I am confident we shall have it next year. If we do, it is not too much to say that New Yorkers will be able to hear at Jasper Oval, Thomas Jefferson Park, Central Park ball ground, Queensboro Park, Chelsea Park and Hamilton Fish Park the greatest known singers. There will be a ballet, too, and the repertoire will include all of the favorite standard operas. They will be given in both English and Italian. A small price may be charged, but we have every hope that arrangements can be made so that even this will not be necessary. I can state almost positively that Caruso himself would be willing to sing the same as if it were a benefit concert, if he saw that many thousand New Yorkers would receive pleasure thereby listening to him in the open air. We came near to producing grand opera last season. I feel sure we'll accomplish it next year."

Even in Corea You Will Find Widows Wise.

EVEN in Corea, where widows are not supposed to marry again, the wise creatures find a way of making off with many of the most attractive bachelors of the country.

The prejudice against the remarriage of widows is founded on the tenets of Confucianism. Owing to the influence of this religion the women of Corea believe that it is immoral for them to marry a second time. But like women of other countries they find a way to do exactly what they please.

Of course, reason the wily Corean women, we cannot be blamed if men run off with us and marry us against our will. It is impossible for us to resist such a suitor, as he is invariably much stronger than a mere weak woman.

The dashing bachelors of Corea are naturally much more desirous of marrying widows in the circumstances than they would be otherwise, as a spice of daring and adventure is added to the ordinary joy of entering into the holy bonds of matrimony. It is not nearly so exciting to marry a young girl whom one is perfectly free to woo—through the intermediation of her parents, of course—as it is to run off with a widow for whose capture one has to arrange an interesting strategy.

Marriages between widows and bachelors are also very much in favor in Corea because not nearly so much money is required from the bridegroom as in the case of his marriage with a young girl. The impecunious bridegroom is scorned by the parents of the girl and he is also unable to pay for the elaborate wedding ceremonies which must take place. All of this he escapes by running off with a widow. It happens in Corea, as in other countries, that the impecunious bachelor is often more desirable from every point of view but a mercenary one than the well to do member of the community. Consequently the widow has a way of attaching a handsome young husband to herself that might well be envied by the young girl.

How difficult the widow is to manage while the reckless bachelor is running away with her is never divulged. Of course there may be a few widows who really wish not to take a second husband and very much resent their capture by a determined bridegroom. But these are very few indeed. Generally the capture is very much like a simple elopement. But the widow is always forgiven by the community on the ground that it has not been her thought, and her new husband is regarded as a brave and dashing fellow. The announcement of the marriage is generally made at a banquet.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Kaintuck

He Saw New York and Went Through the Tunnel

By THOMAS R. DEAN

In New York city there is a spacious excavation at the crossing of Broadway and Thirty-third street which is the entrance room of the Hudson tunnels. There are newspaper and candy stands, ticket offices and benches. One afternoon a tall, bony man descended the steps leading to this subterranean station and looked about him wonderingly.

He was Martin Granger, a Kentuckian, who had come from his native state to see New York. He had taken a tour in one of the big autocars in which strangers are shown the metropolis while a conductor points out the principal items of curiosity and comments on them through a megaphone. And now he had determined to go through the tunnel under the Hudson river that he might go back to Henderson county, Ky., and tell his children how the great ships, some of them 800 or 900 feet long, had sailed right over his head, while smaller boats without number had steamed back and forth in the same relative position.

Not knowing exactly how to get to the cars which were to take him on this (to him) perilous journey or perhaps wishing for time to screw up his courage to plunge under the great river, he sat down on one of the benches, presenting a perfect picture of a southwestern countryman wonder struck with that congregation of people which within a radius of twenty-five miles forms the largest in the world.

He had not been there long before a man came and sat down beside him. But Martin Granger was not interested in a single man, but the throngs passing through this station, wherein everything was as much alive underground as on the surface and were just as much alive above the surface as on it. The man beside him sat there but a few minutes, then got up and went away.

Presently Granger noticed persons buying tickets at a booth and put his hand into his pocket for money, intending to do the same thing. Casting his eyes down beside him, he saw a small package on the bench. He took it up, looked at it, then cast a glance about him for the owner, thinking that it had been left through carelessness. A number of persons were near, but there was no evidence that any one of them was the owner of the package. He weighted it and found it light—no heavier than paper. He pondered awhile as to what to do with it, then untied a string and partly unwrapped the covering.

Any look of surprise that had come over Martin Granger's face while in New York was surpassed by the one that came upon it now. He looked upon the corner of a bank bill and especially on the figures $100. As soon as he regained something of his equanimity he lifted the corner of the bill, and underneath it was another of the same denomination. The next below this was marked $50, the next $20, the next $100, and so on of different denominations. The package was about two inches thick.

"What you got there?"

Granger, looking up, saw a man standing over him regarding him with a severe expression.

"Somebody has been powerful careless and left a whole stack o' bank bills on this yere seat."

"I'm in luck," said the other. "You've found the bills taken from the vaults of the — Trust company."

"How do you know that?" asked Granger.

"I know it because I am a detective and have been shadowing the man who stole the bills. I followed him down here, and, realizing that I had him trapped, rather than be caught with the plunder on him he sat down here beside you and when he went away left it. His intention is doubtless to follow you, and when you get far enough from the station and he thinks himself unobserved he will claim the property."

The westerner looked at the man with wonder. "You must be one o' them fellers that I've read about in the stories printed in our home paper. They kin tell from a stiff button or the stump of a cigar jist who done the murder."

"Yes; I'm a detective. Now I've got the stolen property I want you to help me take the thief. Where are you going?"

"I'm goin' down under the river jist to see how it feels to be joggin' along under the big ships."

"All right. Put the package in your pocket and"—

The speaker stopped short and turned his back on Granger as though he had no intercourse with him. In a few minutes he turned again and continued:

"I saw the rascal. He's gone down the stairs to the train. I didn't want to have him see me talking to you. Go to that birdcage over there and buy the tickets. You'll be given two of 'em. Then go past the man over there and drop 'em in the box. Get on the train, and don't leave it till you get to the last station—Hoboken. I'll be in the same car with you, and quite likely the man who got the bills will be on the train. When he joins you and asks you for his parcel I'll nab him."

"Waal, now, ain't that fine! I thort that when I come to New York I'd see some remarkable sights, but I didn't think I'd git inter one o' them detective stories."

The man gave him a knowing look, and Granger bought his tickets and, descending a flight of steps leading farther down toward the center of the earth, found a train, which he boarded, and was soon carried down under the mighty waters. He seemed overpowered and did not draw a regular breath till a guard called "All out!" and, seeing the other passengers leave the train, the visitor to New York also left.

He had no sooner stepped on the platform before he saw the detective looking at him, and Granger followed him up a flight of stairs, through a railway station and on to a ferryboat. As soon as the boat left the dock the detective joined the Kentuckian.

"I thort you was goin' to nab the thief," said the latter.

"He has eluded me. We'll return to New York. You may as well turn over the goods to me. I shall not be able to take the thief."

Now, Granger was a countryman, but there are few persons in the world who have not learned the principle that "possession is nine points of the law."

"What am I goin' to git out o' the find?" he asked.

"Oh, you'll get the reward. There's $10,000 offered for the return of the stolen goods."

"Reckon that's all right. But if you do the returnin' how am I to git the reward?"

"I'll report you as the finder of the property."

"You jist tell me whar to turn it in, and I'll go thar with it."

There was a good deal of sparring on the part of the detective to get possession of the property, which failed. Before the boat landed he explained to the Kentuckian that the latter was in a very dangerous position. If the detective should arrest him as the thief it would go hard with him. But the bluff was not effective. The Kentuckian said that he thought he could prove an alibi since he had reached New York only that morning and Cy Butler could swear to the fact since he had come all the way from Henderson county with him.

"Well," said the detective, "I suppose I'll have to go with you to the bank that lost the money, but it's too late to go today. The banks don't keep open after 3 o'clock. You can stay with me overnight, and we'll turn the money over tomorrow morning."

The Kentuckian said he had promised to stay with Cy Butler at a hotel on the east side, but the detective explained that it would not do for him to let him go away with the money, so Granger finally consented to spend the night with him in his room.

The apartment was in a cheap flathouse. The detective, as soon as they had entered it, locked the door and said to Mr. Granger:

"See here, pard, there's plenty for both of us in this deal. I'm the man that took that money from the bank. There's $80,000 of it. I'll give you $20,000. What do you say?"

"What do I say? Why, I say I'm l'arnin' New York powerful fast. I thort you was a detective."

"You're a pretty good sort of chap," replied the other, "and I don't mind taking you into my confidence. I was the man who sat down by you in the Hudson tunnel station. I was trying to get away from a shadower. I concluded to load the goods on to you till I could get away from him and divide with you. All you've got to do to be rich is to turn the goods back to me and deduct your share."

Granger looked at him with righteous indignation and said:

"Stranger, I've lived in Hebderson county, Kaintucky, for forty year. Anybody thar'll tell you I hain't got a dishonest ha'r in my head. I'm goin' to turn this money back to the bank that lost it, and don't you forgit it."

The man put out his hand and grasped Granger's, saying, "Anybody 'd know to look at you that you were an honest man."

Holding Granger's right hand, the rascal put his own left hand to his hip and drew a revolver. He had cocked and raised it only a part of the way to cover his man when Granger, quick as a flash, put his hand to the back of his neck and drew forth a knife about ten inches long and held it point downward over the so called detective.

"I see that hand," he said quietly, "and go you one better. Drop yer weepon!"

The man needed to raise his pistol but a short distance to make it effective, yet the distance was sufficient to give the Kentuckian time to draw his bowie knife—a weapon of the olden time—and hold it point downward over him. The villain quailed and dropped his pistol.

How the Kentuckian drove his enemy down and out into the street, met a policeman and the three proceeded to a station; how the next morning the money was turned over by its finder to the bank, is merely a succession of ordinary details. When the president handed Granger a check for $10,000 the subject grows again interesting. The Kentuckian handed it back, saying:

"Do you reckon that if one o' my Kaintuck neighbors' mares war to stray away and git on to my premises and I sent her back by a nigger I'd take money for doin' it? No, sir. You may do things that a-way in New York, but we don't do 'em so in Kaintuck."

And, turning on his heel, he left the bank.

The Best Cough Syrup is Easily Made at Home

Costs Little and Acts Quickly. Money Refunded If It Fails.

This recipe makes 16 ounces of cough syrup, and saves you about $2.00 as compared with ordinary cough remedies. It stops obstinate coughs—even whooping cough—in a hurry, and is splendid for sore lungs, asthma, croup, hoarseness and other throat troubles.

Mix two cups of granulated sugar with one cup of warm water, and stir for two minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a 16-ounce bottle, and add the Sugar Syrup. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours. Tastes good.

This takes right hold of a cough and gives almost instant relief. It stimulates the appetite, and is slightly laxative—both excellent features.

Pinex, as perhaps you know, is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, rich in guaiacol and the other natural healing pine elements.

No other preparation will do the work of Pinex in this recipe, although strained honey can be used instead of the sugar syrup, if desired.

Thousands of housewives in the United States and Canada now use this Pinex and Sugar Syrup recipe. This plan has often been imitated, but the old successful formula has never been equaled. Its low cost and quick results have made it immensely popular.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

HEART WAS SO BAD

Could Not Do Her Housework

Many women get run down and are unable to look after their household duties owing to the heart action becoming impaired or the nervous system unstrung.

To all such sufferers Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will give prompt and permanent relief.

Mrs. Thomas Melville, Saltcoats, Sask., writes:—"I thought it my duty to write and tell you how much your Heart and Nerve Pills did for me. My heart was so bad I could not sleep, eat nor walk about the house. I could not do my housework at all, and what my husband could not do had to go undone. I had two small children depending on me besides three men to cook for, and it worried me to not be able to do anything. My husband had taken some of your pills some years ago, and insisted on me trying them, so I started, and before I had taken them two weeks I was considerably better, and before I had taken two boxes I was doing my own work again. Any one suffering from heart or nerve trouble should just give your pills a trial. If anyone cares to write me I will gladly give them all the information I know concerning your wonderful medicine."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, or three boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Child Had Bronchitis

Once people get acquainted with the wonderful control which Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine exerts over bronchitis, whooping cough, croup and colds it is not easy to persuade them that anything else is "just as good." This is why the imitators never get very far.

In 1902 Mrs. Eugene Iler, King street, Truro, N.S., wrote as follows: 'From an infant one of my children was troubled with bronchitis, and the least cold would aggravate the trouble. We could not get anything to help her, and were often greatly alarmed. Hearing of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine as a treatment for bronchitis, we used it, and are glad to state that it effected a complete cure. If any of the children take a cold or cough I give this medicine, and have never known it to fail to bring relief."

Mrs. Iler now writes that she has since proved this medicine to be a cure for whooping cough, and would not be without it in the house.

MAN EATERS OF AFRICA.

The Lions and Crocodiles Are In a Class by Themselves.

Man eating lions have always been fairly common in East Africa. The most noted but far from exceptional case was that of the two man eaters which for a time stopped the building of the Uganda railroad by their ravages among the workmen until they were finally shot by the engineer in charge, Mr. (afterward Colonel) Patterson. Another lion, after killing several men around a station on the railroad, carried off and ate the superintendent of the division. The latter had come down in his private car, which was run on a siding, and he sat up at a window that night to watch for the lion. But he fell asleep, and the lion climbed on the platform, entered the car by the door and carried off his would be slayer through the window.

In the summer of 1909 a couple of man eating lions took to infesting the Masai villages on the plain around the headwaters of the Guaso Nyiro, west of Kenia, and by their ravages forced the Masai to abandon the district, and the native travel routes across it were also temporarily closed. A few weeks later I was hunting in the district. We kept the thorn bomas around our camp closed at night, with a fire burning and askaris on guard, and were not molested.

Near Machakosboma a white traveler was taken out of his tent by a man eater one night a good many years ago. A grewsome feature of the incident was that on its first attempt the lion was driven off after having seized and wounded its victim. The wounds of the latter were dressed, and he was again put to bed, but soon after he had been left alone the lion again forced his way into the tent and this time carried the man off and ate him.

Every year in East Africa natives are carried off from their villages or from hunting camps by man eating lions. Occasionally one hears of man eating leopards, which usually confine themselves to women and children, and there are man eating hyenas, but the true man eaters of Africa are lions and crocodiles.—Theodore Roosevelt in Scribner's Magazine.

BRITAIN FEARED NAPOLEON.

And Lamb, Who Thought Him a Fine Fellow, Fanned the Flame.

It was on Aug. 8, 1815, that "General" Bonaparte, as his English captors insisted upon calling him, was transferred from the Bellerophon to the ship Northumberland, to begin the journey to St. Helena. There was much protest in England against the transportation of the distinguished prisoner, but the government remained firm.

Official England could see nothing but danger in keeping such a dynamic force as Napoleon within its limits, and, harsh as the actions of the government seemed, the position thus taken was not without logic. Napoleon had been placed on his honor at Elba, but honor did not weigh with him when ambition was concerned.

Charles Lamb spoke for those who favored Napoleon's detention in England when he wrote to Southey: "After all, Bonaparte is a fine fellow, as my barber says, and I should not mind standing bareheaded at his table to do service to him in his fall. They should have given him Hampton court of Kensington, with a tether extending forty miles round London." Lamb whimsically suggested that if Napoleon remained in England the people might some day elect the Brunswick in his favor, and the government took the suggestion seriously.

Now that Napoleon is safely dead such a fear seems absurd, but Napoleon was then alive, and, in view of that fact, no government was safe in saying, "I should worry!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Bovine Signal Service.

Before the decisive battle at Ishtib an ingenious method of signaling on the part of the enemy was discovered by the Servians. A cowherd was taking five cows out to pasture on a hill halfway between the two camps. He drove them about, sometimes two together, then one at a time, then three, thus conveying information to the Bulgarians as to the position and strength of the Servian battalions.

Iron Mold Stains.

Iron mold stains spread in any fabric they come in contact with in the wash. To remove them stretch the stained part over a basin nearly full of boiling water so that the steam may penetrate the fabric and apply with a feather a teaspoonful of salt dissolved in a dessertspoonful of lemon juice. When the marks disappear dip the material well into the hot water; afterward rinse very thoroughly in cold water.—Exchange.

Peps What are they?

Peps is the name bestowed upon a new scientific preparation put up into tabloid or pastille form, which provides an entirely new and effective treatment for coughs, colds and lung and throat troubles.

Did it never occur to you as peculiar that when you have a cough or a cold, or any chest trouble, you should apply medicine—not to your lungs, but to your stomach?

Look at it the other way round. Suppose you suffered from some stomach complaint—indigestion or ulceration. How strange you would think it if you were asked to take a medicine which had to be breathed in, and which went—not to your stomach, but to your lungs and breathing passages?

Peps—this newest remedy for coughs, colds, and lung troubles—go to the lungs and breathing-tubes, direct. Peps are really pine fumes, and certain highly beneficial medicinal extracts specially prepared by a new scientific process and then condensed into tabloid form. It is like making a breathable gas solid!

You put a "Pep" on your tongue and let it dissolve. As it does so, the healing essences it contains turn into vapor, and you BREATHE them direct to your lungs and air passages!

Just as the out-door treatment for consumption—the "breathing" treatment—is now admitted to be the only rational treatment, so the "Peps" treatment for colds and lung troubles is the only rational home treatment.

Peps cure catarrh, coughs, bronchitis, sore throat, tightness or aching across the chest, difficulty in breathing, night cough, hoarseness, asthma, laryngitis, smoker's throat, etc. Best for children, because free from opium, morphine, or any poison.

STUDENTS ACT UP.

And Members of Theatrical Company Refuse To Act.

MONTREAL, Nov. 25.—After two years non-observance, the McGill theatre night was resurrected last night, but came to an inglorious end when midway through the second act, the Glad Eye Co. refused to go on with their play and the curtain was rung down. The students went back to Molson's Hall, where the faculty had prepared a supper for them, but here again pandemonium broke loose and after a short scrap between the sophs and freshmen the body broke up into little parties, who continued the celebration in the streets.

Dynamite Sticks on Auto Drive.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Nov. 25.—The police let it be known yesterday that for three weeks automobilists have been flirting with death as they drove along Grant boulevard, the favorable motor track between the fashionable east end district and downtown Pittsburg. During that time they have collected 120 sticks of dynamite apparently scattered systematically along the road. Late Sunday they located another lot in the boulevard and arrested Herman Leidman, alleging he knew something of the robbery of a contractors' magazine from which they declare the dynamite was stolen.

"FLYER" IS DERAILED.

Grand Trunk Train Has Mishap—No Serious Injuries.

CHATHAM, Nov. 25.—The G.T.R. "Eastern Flyer," Detroit to Toronto, was wrecked at 4.40 yesterday afternoon between Puce and Belle River, about fifteen miles out of Windsor. Number 16 was behind time at Windsor, which is quite unusual, and is reported to have been making between 60 and 70 miles an hour. Most of the cars remained upright, and to this can be ascribed the fact that none of the passengers or crew are reported seriously injured. All suffered considerable shaking up, and many were severely bruised.

A broken or spread rail is blamed for the derailment, though the cause is not yet officially stated. This train carries two or three day coaches, a diner and Pullmans, with baggage and express car, and all were thrown from the track. The locomotive remained on the rails with the tender, but the first passenger car broke away from the others and rolled 150 feet. The remainder of the coaches remained on their trucks.

Ties are torn up for a considerable distance, and both east and westbound tracks were blocked. Wrecking crews were sent out from London and Windsor to clear the right of way.

Conductor Higgins was passing through the chair car when the crash came, and was thrown against a seat. His forehead, cheek and knuckles were cut badly.

Number 11, a local due here from London at 4.08, proceeded to the wreck and backed up to Chatham with the passengers from the flyer at 8.30 last night.

Passenger for Toronto reached that city about 1.30 this morning.

NO CLUE TO MYSTERY.

Bones Found In Sack Baffle the Oldest Inhabitants.

ST. CATHARINES, Nov. 25.—Enquiry made yesterday among the oldest residents of Grantham Township failed to throw any light on the discovery of a body in the old Hodgkinson burying ground near Port Weller, buried in a sack, with evidence of having been interred in a hurry. The bones in the sack were found in the grave, which was being emptied among others by men in the employ of the Dominion Government, preliminary to the construction work for No. 1 section of the Welland Ship Canal. The bones were lying in a position that indicated that the body had been thrown into the hastily-made grave in a "doubled up" condition. The victim was an adult, but the sex was not determined before the bones were re-interred in the Victoria Lawn Cemetery. There seems to be no likelihood of the mystery being solved.

Thirteen Were Lucky.

SARNIA, Nov. 25. — The last trip down of the steamer Hamonic shows that Captain Foote is not at all superstitious regarding the number 13. The steamer crossed Lake Superior from Port Arthur to the Soo in 13 hours and 13 minutes. Captain Foote's lucky number seems to be 13.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Nov. 24.—Offerings at the Montreal Stock Yards west end market today consisted of 1900 cattle, 750 sheep and lambs, 1400 hogs and 400 calves.

The strength which developed in the market for cattle a week ago was more pronounced today, and prices for good to choice butchers' steers scored a further advance of 40c to 50c, and common stock 25c per 100 pounds. A feature of the trade was the scarcity of good, useful butchers' stock, for which the demand was good, as both packers and butchers were short of supplies, and in consequence the tone was strong at the advance above noted. A few loads of choice steers were offered, for which the competition was keen, and sales of full loads were made at $7.50 to $8, and a few picked lots brought as high as $8.25 per 100 pounds. Good cattle in a jobbing way sold at $7.50 to $7.75. The gathering of buyers was large, and an active trade was done.

The tone of the market for lambs continues very strong, on account of the limited supplies coming forward, and prices have scored a further advance of 25c per 100 pounds. The demand from packers and butchers was good, and an active trade was done, with sales of western stock at $7.75 to $8, and eastern at $7.25 to $7.50 per 100 pounds. Sheep were firm, with a good demand for ewes at $4.75 to $5 per 100 pounds.

An easier feeling prevailed in the market for hogs, and prices were 10c per 100 pounds lower than a week ago.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $7.00 to $8.25; do., medium, $6 to $7; do., common, $4.50 to $5.50; canners, $3.65 to $3.75; butchers' cattle, choice cows, $6.50 to $6.75; do., medium, $5.25 to $5.50; do., bulls, $5 to $6.35; milkers, choice, $85 to $90; do., common and medium, each, $75 to $80; springers, $65 to $70.

Sheep, ewes, $4.75 to $5; bucks and culls, $4.25 to $4.50; lambs, $7.25 to $8.

Hogs, f.o.b., $8.25 to $8.50.

Calves, $5 to $15.

QUIT MEAT WHEN KIDNEYS BOTHER

Take a Glass of Salts if Your Back Hurts or Bladder Troubles You

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which excites the kidneys, they become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood, then we get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness and durinary disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, stop eating meat and get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate the kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active, and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

Interest in this election has been quickened because of the entry into the contest of an Independent Conservative candidate, Col. Baldersen, and Arthur Hawkes, of "British-born" fame.

FIGHTING NEW TARIFF.

Canadian Export of Soil Products Rises Steadily.

OTTAWA, Nov. 25.—The Wilson-Underwood tariff bill, so far as the produce of the soil is concerned, is beginning to make its effects very manifest in Canadian exports to the United States. GUN ACCIDENTALLY FIRED; BRIDGENORTH BOY WOUNDED

Wallace Nicholls, Fifteen-year-old Lad, Painfully Injured in Accident in McManus' Swamp This Morning.

HIS SHOULDER HURT

Examiner Special:

BRIDGENORTH, NOV. 25.—Wallace Nicholls, the 15-year-old son of Mr. Wm. Nicholls of Bridgenorth, was accidentally shot and badly injured this morning while on a partridge-hunting expedition in McManus' swamp, half a mile from here. The boy, in company with his brother, Wesley Nicholls, and the latter's brother-in-law, Charles Hartman, of Campbellford, left home this morning to spend the day in the woods. Soon after reaching the swamp one of the party shot a bird, and Wallace Nicholls started into the bushes to look for it. Hartman was holding a loaded shot gun and also had a dog on a chain. In some manner the gun was discharged and the contents struck Nicholls, the greater part of the load passing through the flesh between the neck and the point of his shoulder, although several shots entered the cheek.

The injured boy was hurriedly brought to his home in a buggy and Drs. Sutton and Kelly dressed the wound. His injuries are serious but it is thought that Nicholls will recover.

Tie Up The Terrier Or Muzzle His Mouth

Editor Examiner:

Dear Sir,—A couple of years ago an amateur minstrel show was given in the Opera House. One big negro gentleman informed the audience that "the Damm family had moved to town. The Damm father and mother, the Damm children and the Damm dog, too—the whole Damm family." I think they have come again, especially the Damm dog, and have settled in the vicinity of Charlotte street and Gilmour street. There's a Damm dog—a yawping fox terrier at that, that races up and down on Gilmour or Charlotte street, between Park and St. Joseph street, barking incessantly till near morning, keeping everybody awake, babies and all, and we rise in the morning completely tired out from broken rest, and I don't know which is nearer dead from it, I or my baby. I can tell you one thing, I won't stand it much longer. If the owner of the yelping fox terrier hasn't the decency to shut him up at nights, though it is a sneaky thing to do, I shall be compelled to shut up the dog forever in some striking or strychnine way. It's a cruel shame that decent people who have to work all day and be on the bell at 7 o'clock, should be kept awake nights, their sleep broken, their health hurt, by a howling, barking cur who isn't worth his weight in brickbats.

Yours truly,
SUFFERER.

SHOCKING MISTAKE.

After the services were over one of the congregation turned to his wife and said:

"On my way to Church I picked up a button and put it in my change pocke where I had a quarter."

"O, ious, my dear!" anticipated his wife, very much horrified, "and dropped it into the collection basket by mistake?"

"No, confound it!" replied the husband, "I put in the quarter."

FORECASTING FOR CHRISTMAS

Our merchants are away behind with their Christmas announcements.

Notwithstanding the fact that it is against all the traditions of Christmas to undo the wrappings of a Christmas package before the happy day arrives, The Examiner feels so much in the holiday spirit that it is quite impossible to refrain from anticipating what the stores are likely to show for Christmas shoppers.

But very little preparation is as yet apparent in many of our stores for the Xmas festival. Why keep early buyers guessing what they will have to select? "Shop early" is a good slogan, but very little use when the displays are delayed.

Other city papers are teeming with interesting Christmas announcements, and have been ready for early buyers weeks—ago. "Speed up!" See to it that you do not furnish an excuse for shopping out of town.

THE FEDERALS ARE DEFEATED

Constitutionalists Capture a Large Number of Prisoners and Are Pursuing Their Advantage

TRAINS IN DANGER

Special Wire to Examiner:

EL PASO, Texas, Nov. 25.—Havican repulsed the Mexican federal forces and captured a large number of prisoners, and General Pancho Villa's constitutionalists early to-day started to follow up their advantage gained during the night. It is estimated that two hundred were killed and four hundred wounded. There were sixteen thousand troops engaged. The fighting was desperate from the outset. The United States troops are patrolling the borders to prevent trouble there.

JUVENILE COURT OF THE A. O. F. MET

The new juvenile branch of the Ancient Order of Foresters, White Lily, No. 86, held a rousing and enthusiastic meeting last night in the S. O. E. Hall, Hunter Street. The boys were all out and are fast proving their working abilities. D. C. R. Tom Henry, occupied the chair. Numerous items of importance were gone into regarding regalia, etc., and the boys showed a good grip and understanding of the numerous discussions. Bros. Allan, Boyce, Wilfred Miller, R. Head, V. Miller, A. Hendry and L. Field spoke on the prospects of new members and judging by the reports, their membership wil soon increase.

Some of the younger members were anxious about getting home before nine o'clock, owing to the curfew law. However, Bros. T. Hendry explained that he had interviewed Chief Thompson on the matter, and so long as the boys did not loiter on the street it would be all right. Bros. R. J. McWilliams, High Court Officer, gave a report regarding the Juvenile Federation. The membership consists of boys from five years to seventeen years and are well protected by sick and funeral benefits. After business the boys enjoyed a game of carpet balls, and at 9.30 sharp were dismissed.

Word "Obey" Is Left Out

Special Wire to The Examiner.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 25. — One of Washington's most perfect days dawned for the nuptials of Miss Jessie Wilson, the second daughter of the President, and Francis Bowes Sayre, at the White House this afternoon. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Beach in the east room, which has been transformed by the wealth of flowers and foliage into a perfect haven of autumnal beauty. Romance was lent to the scene by the presence of the famous Canadian, Dr. Wilfrid Grenfell, of Labrador, who was the best man for Sayres. Rev. Dr. Beach announced early in the day that the word "obey" will not be used in the ceremony. He paid an early call at the White House for a word of counsel to Miss Wilson. Soon after daylight crowds began to gather in the grounds of the executive mansion. The Marine band played continuously during the jolly luncheon party, comprising families of contracting parties. After the ceremony and reception, Mr. and Mrs. Sayres will leave to-night for the honeymoon, the location of which is a mystery.

A CLEVER SLEUTH

A Vancouver exchange contains an account of the arrest of a man suspected of murder which was affected by Detective J. Ricci. The latter was recently married to Miss Mary De Long, granddaughter of Mr. James Sutherland, 323 George Street, Peterborough. Detective Ricci, who is connected with the Vancouver Detective Bureau, is considered to be one of the cleverest sleuths on the Pacific Coast. He recently apprehended a negro in Edmonton who sought to disguise his personality by shaving off his moustache.

Mrs. Sayre (Jessie Wilson) and two of Her Bridesmaids.—Messages of congratulation from the King and Queen and from other rulers in Europe were conveyed to the White House on the occasion of Jessie Wilson's marriage to Francis B. Sayre. The President's daughter is a young woman whose domestic virtues and good common sense are well known to her more intimate friends. Herewith are shown two of the bridesmaids, and a good picture of the bride, herself.

SAYS FIGURES GIVEN BY CHIEF WERE WRONG

License Inspector Stewart States to Examiner That He Had 18 Prosecutions Instead of 7

SAYS FAVOUR WAS SHOWN

To the Examiner this morning License Inspector Stewart said that the figures given by Chief Thompson to the Police Commissioners, when they were investigating the charges against him, were not correct. According to the Chief's figures Mr. Stewart has only prosecuted 7 liquor cases since the first of the year. But on going over the books, Mr. Stewart states he has prosecuted 18. The license inspector claims that there has been misrepresentation in some degree in the matter.

Th Chief's figures were supposed to show that he and his men had prosecuted 76 cases, whereas Mr. Stewart had only prosecuted 7. But the latter official, according to official returns, claims to have prosecuted 18 cases.

"Now," said Mr. Stewart to the reporter, "here are the returns; you can count them for yourself. There are nine policemen in the city, and altogether they have prosecuted 76 cases. That means less than 9 cases each. I have prosecuted, myself, 18 cases, and at the same time upheld this department all over the county. Now, until the police prosecute 18 cases each they are not doing as well as the returns show I have. As head of the License Department here, I must see that the liquor laws are enforced, and I mean to do it, even though it may cause a little friction between myself and any other official."

Referring to Chief Thompson entering a home when the head of the house was intoxicated, Mr. Stewart directed attention to Section 134, Subsections 1 and 2, which read as follows:

1. "It shall be the duty of every officer, policeman, constable, or inspector in each municipality, to see the several provisions of this Act are duly observed, and to proceed by information and otherwise prosecute for the punishment of any offence against the provisions of this Act; and in case of wilful neglect or default in so doing in any case, such officer, policeman, constable or inspector shall incur a penalty of $10, besides costs, for each and every neglect and default.

2. It shall be the duty of the Board of Commissioners of Police and of the Chief of Police to enforce the provisions of this section, and any officer or policeman convicted of violating the provisions thereof may be summarily dismissed.

Mr. Stewart suggested that the Chief in not prosecuting in the above case did not enforce the Act as he should have. "The man is drunk and making trouble down there nearly all the time, and no favours will be shown him or anyone else I can help it."

OUR MUSICAL EQUIPMENT

The Concert in St. Paul's Church last night in addition to serving a good purpose, a worthy cause, also served the good purpose of bringing into prominence and more general knowledge the remarkable quantity, quality and variety of musical talent we have in Peterborough. The promise it gives of musical progress is gratifying. Mr. Wm. Wilson, the young violinist, is interesting, not only because of his artistic ability but by reason of the fact he has been developed by the Conservatory of Music and has become a member of the violin staff, and a new factor in local musical development.

ELECTRICAL WORKERS GO ON STRIKE

Ten Thousand Employees of the General Electrical Company of Schenectady, Walk Out

WORKS ARE CLOSED

Special Wire to The Examiner.

SCHENECTADY, N.Y., Nov. 25.—A strike of electrical workers was inaugurated this morning when ten thousand workers in the shops of the General Electrical Company walked out under orders and the sanction of the American Federation of Labour. This followed the refusal of the company to reinstate fifteen hundred men recently laid off, the labour officials say, because they were union men. Twenty thousand people are directly effected at the General Electric shops here, which at noon to-day were shut down completely till further orders.

Dr. Struthers Will Lecture

It is the purpose of the Public Health Committee of the local Council of Women to have Dr. Struthers of Toronto, the chief Medical Inspector of Schools of that City to give a public lecture, with slides, upon his work, and the subject of medical inspection of schools in general, Wednesday evening, December 3rd, at 8 o'clock, in the lecture hall of the Collegiate Institute. Concerning this important subject, the Public Health Journal says:

The inspection of food, the inspection of school children, the inspection of departmental stores, all appeal strongly to the home-maker. We women are the shoppers of the nation, mothers, and for the most part, the teachers of the young children, and we are the administrators of the food department or internal economy of the home; we are, therefore, glad that in all these matters medical inspection is doing its part to make our work more telling in the uplift of the race, and gladly do many of us devote our leisure time to the study of these problems, and try to assist those whose more scientific knowledge points out the way to still further reform.

Cavan Drain Case Is the First to Come Before His Lordship Mr. Justice Middleton at This Afternoon's Session

ONE CASE HELD OVER

The non-jury sittings of the High Court opened at 1 o'clock this afternoon before Mr. Justice Middleton. The members of the bar present were Messrs. K. L. Goodwill, G. N. Gordon, R. E. Wood, J. W. Bennet, I. F. Hellmuth, K.C. of Toronto, and Mr. Ruddy.

There was a fairly large attendance including quite a representation from Cavan to hear the case concerning the stream that ran through Mr. Geo. McBain's property.

The Brightman-Quigley case was laid over until the next non-jury assizes, Mr. Gordon stating that the defendant was in British Columbia.

The Cavan Case First.

The first case dealt with was that of Mr. Geo. E. C. McBain versus the Cavan Council. The claims of both parties in the action have been published a number of times. Mr. Hellmuth, with Messrs. Bennet and Goodwill, represented Mr. McBain, and Mr. Ruddy acted for the Township.

Mr. McBain was first called. He stated that he lived on Lot 19, Con. 13, of Cavan. The drain looped twice through his property and had been there as long as he owned the land. In 1908 the Municipality of Cavan constructed a drain which cut the water off from the stream. The loops were entirely emptied of water which then ran through the municipal drain. The freshets in the Spring of 1909 carried down sediment which closed up the course of the stream, and during that year Mr. McBain had no use of the water as formerly. In the Fall complaint was made to the Council, and the obstruction was removed. In 1910 the course was again blocked and there was no running water on the land during that year. The cattle had either to drink stagnant water in the ponds or walk home to the other end of the concession. In the Spring of 1911, following complaints from Mr. McBain, the Council opened the channel of the western loop of the stream. The old original channel was from 10 to 15 feet wide and that which the Council opened was only 3 or 4 feet wide. On July 10th, 1911, a big storm carried away several mill dams near Mount Pleasant and the water course was stopped up again. Witness complained to the Reeve and in the fall it was reopened and gates put in.

Mr. McBain.—I closed one of the gates on Dec. 1, 1911. The other was closed when constructed. In the Spring of 1912, the weight of water washed a hole under the gates which merely rested on the bed of the stream. The course was once more blocked and the farm left without running water during that year.

The course was opened in the fall of 1912, but nothing was done to the gates. I met the Council on December 16th, but no agreement was formed. In March of this year my solicitor wrote the Council. In May they built a trench to let water into the stream, but the cattle ramped it in again within two weeks and there was no water again this year.

During 1911-12-13, I have suffered the loss of water on my property. A fair estimate of the loss from not having water in my stream would be $100 a year. That's a very reasonable estimate. I don't know how I could put the water there and maintain it there for less. In other years the stream never failed my cattle.

Justice Middleton questioned plaintiff as to how many times he drove the cattle to the stream.

"I want to find out how you earned the $100."

Mr. McBain said it would be at least 50 times a year.

Justice Middleton—That would be $2 a trip.

Mr. McBain—This year I sold four head because of loss of pasturage.

Cross Examination.

Mr. Ruddy—Before this drain was constructed your property was flooded a great deal.

Mr. McBain—No; it followed the channel. No more flooded than it is now. In the spring the whole property would be flooded. It washed over the south bank 100 yards in; since the drain was built it has gone even further.

Did you petition for the drain?

No; I did not.

You opposed it from the start?

I did.

Plaintiff stated that he opposed the drain by-law before the Private Bills committee of the Legislature. In the Court of Revision of the municipality they asked me what I would take for my rights to the drain, and I refused to part with it. They said: "Then you must have it."

Mr. Ruddy—But you had no agreement with the Council as a Council.

MEDICAL INSPECTION IN THE SCHOOLS.

It is a pleasure to note that the Public Health Committee of the local Council of Women is proposing to propagate interest in the subject of medical inspection of schools; and that as officially announced elsewhere in this number, Dr. Struthers of Toronto, the chief Medical Inspector of Schools for that city, has been engaged to deliver a lecture, illustrated by lantern slides, on the general subject of medical school inspection on Wednesday evening, Dec. 3rd, in the Assembly Hall of the Collegiate Institute. There is a growing demand for compulsory inspection of our school children, not only in the interest of the prevention of communicable diseases, but in that of the general health of the pupils that may be influenced by early discovery and treatment of incipient diseased condition, which, if not promptly dealt with, may form the foundation of adult ill-health, or early demise. This is a subject that needs to be dealt with in the most prudent manner. The prejudice against interference with personal liberty must be cautiously handled. If medical inspection is to bear fruit it must be attended with some sort of wisely ordered means of treatment. If inspection results in orders for some specific form of treatment in specific cases, provision must obviously be made for providing it, particularly in the case of parents whose means will not permit them to afford it. If the authorities insist on inspection they must logically become responsible for the results. After the wisdom of supplying such inspection is abstractly demonstrated the concrete application furnishes a new difficulty which can doubtless be overcome.

HIGH COST OF LIVING.

The elements that enter into the high cost of living and low quality of living these days are many and complex. Our tariff has something to do with it—we export food without taxation against it and we have to pay high taxes on food we might import to lessen prices, and instead of getting some relief from lower taxation we have the taxes highered. Since the Borden government came into power, we have had the tariff raised from an average of 15.87 per cent to 17.03 per cent. This is done by tariff rulings without the consent of Parliament.

The Whitney Government contributes its share. By its neglect to prosecute the combines, or by strangling — damning with faint praise—the prosecutions begun, it has restored to, and kept in, life the combines that include almost every article of food or article for domestic use. The combines to this end are legion, and they wax fat and kick under the paternal protection of the slumber department of the Attorney-General. We can't wonder at it. The Whitney Government is the friend and foster-father of corporations. The Provincial Secretary is a professional corporation counsel, the counsel of the Standard Oil Company octopus. When the United States Steel Corporation, taking advantage of the low water in which the "Soo" companies were wanted to get possession, in order to strangle steel production and kill competition, Mr. Hanna and Sir James Whitney fought tooth and nail the proposal of the Ross government to put the Soo companies on their feet. But the loan of two million dollars was made, the industries were put on their feet, the loan repaid. Thus to-day we see the "Soo" the greatest industrial centre in Canada, with a two-million dollar ship-building plant, the latest addition to a wonderful development made possible by the helping hand of the Liberal Government, and obstructed to the greatest possible degree by the Conservative opposition, Sir James Whitney declaring that the money "might as well be thrown into the lake." So long as the people blindly vote to put shackles on themselves to empower governments to oppress them in the interests of th big interests, they will have to suffer the cost of high living and the other ills that come from governments holding power for the strong, by the help of the weak who, carried away by party enthusiasm and false glamour, commit political hari kari—vote for what proves exactly the opposite in a dozen ways of what they were deluded into thinking they voted for.

WON'T BE PARASITES.

The International Union of Bricklayers, Masons,, and Plasterers in session at Indianapolis established an old-age pensioin system. American workmen are losing the hope of passing into the idle rich class, and leaving the burden on other shoulders.—Globe.

THE FIRE MENACE OF THE WOODEN SHINGLE

In nearly every American city of any consequence, and in many Canadian cities, the mercantile centre is surrounded by residence districts constructed almost wholly of wood. In the smaller cities, towns and villages the wooden buildings invade the mercantile centre either composing it entirely or in a greater or lesser degree.

A conflagration seldom gets under way in a brick, stone and concrete section; it gets started in a wooden section, and if the wind is right and the buildings are dry it gains sufficiently in magnitude to burn the brick, stone, and concrete section also.

Every wooden building is a fire hazard in itself, and in burning, endangers every adjacent building of whatever construction. But most wooden buildings possess a special and particular menace, not only to adjacent buildings, but to other wooden buildings (also possessing this menace), even when separated by wide open spaces, or fire barriers in the shape of intervening, fireproof structures.

This menace is the wooden shingle. Burning shingles can be carried great distances by the wind or the draught of a conflagration, and when they alight in their turn upon other dry shingles, they make fearful havoc. The modern shingle is thin, and the machinery which now makes it leaves a fuzzy surface which, after a period of drought, becomes like tinder. Without shingle roofs flying brands would not be carried over the brick centre of a city by the wind. The wooden shingle furnishes the fire brand and also the tinder which it ignites.

One fire of any magnitude is all an ordinary fire department can cope with at one time. Even in wooden sections a fire can be stopped from communicating to contiguous buildings where the wooden shingle is not a factor. Fires in wooden sections on windy days quickly get beyond control where there are wooden shingles to carry the fire to other wooden shingles. A dozen fires may thus be started over a radius of a mile or more, while the department is fighting the original fire.

The argument that shingle roofs are safe enough "outside of conflagration areas" is continually refuted by facts to the contrary. "Safety Engineering" recently refers to two separate groups of summer cottages, each cottage well detached from the other, burned at Narragansett Pier, R.I. The cottages were two and one-half storeys high, with the walls and roofs covered with shingles. The fire started in a dwelling at the extreme end of one of the groups. It was caused by a defective chimney. For want of hose and water pressure the local fire department was unable to cope with the fire. For six hours the fire burned, the flying brands skipping some cottages and igniting others. All that saved the buildings that escaped was that the wind was light.

But the flying brands of a conflagration do not constitute the only reason for the objection to shingle roofs. There is never a day in the United States or Canada that some one's home is not destroyed or the roof burned off it by the ignition of its wooden shingles from sparks from its own chimney.

The man who maintains that wooden shingles are not a menace, wherever used, either has no large stock of intelligence or is speaking for a private interest against the public good. Any kind of a roof is a safer roof than one of wooden shingles. Other roofs may burn, but they will not ignite from sparks, and will not furnish flying brands.

To lock up his valuable papers in fireproof safes, and to house his wife and children in wooden boxes with tinder roofs, will not always be typical of the American.

It is no hardship upon any class of citizens to compel them to co-operate in public safety. It will not be necessary for any municipality to demand the removal of all shingle roofs immediately. An effective city ordinance may require all roofs constructed in the future to be of incombustible material, and that all roofs which shall hereafter require repair to the extent of one-third of their area, shall be replaced with incombustible roofs. Thus the transition from present evil conditions to those of reasonable safety may be made gradually and without injustice to anyone.—Conservation.

"Why Spend Money on Missions? When The Money Is Needed at Home"

Frank Criticisms of the Laymen's Missionary Campaign.

Both Sides of the Missionary Movement

Arguments For and Against---What Do You Think of Them?

EVERY YEAR THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS ARE RAISED BY THE MEMBERS OF THE PROTESTANT CHURCHES OF PETERBORO' TO PROMOTE THE CAUSE OF HOME AND FOREIGN MISSIONS. NEXT WEEK A SIMULTANEOUS EVERY MEMBER CANVASS WILL BE MADE IN THESE CHURCHES FOR A MARKED INCREASE IN MISSION GIVINGS. THERE ARE SOME PEOPLE WHO SAY THAT THEY DO NOT BELEIVE IN THIS MOVEMENT. THEY DOUBT THE SINCERETY OF THOSE WHO ARE BEHIND IT. THEY CLAIM THAT THE MONEY CAN BE SPENT TO BETTER ADVANTAGE FOR OTHER PURPOSES. READ WHAT SOME OF THESE CRITICS SAY AND WHAT CHURCH WORKERS REPLY.

"The heathen are happy in their religions, why disturb them? They are all right if they act up to their lights."—While there is much that is good in heathen religions there is more that is bad. None of them take any account of women. All are more or less immoral in their teaching. In the Hindu triad, or sacred trinity of gods, for instance, not one has an untarnished moral record. There is not one of the three deities who has not committed adultery. The stories of the sensuality and impurity of the gods as recorded in the sacred books and told by its votaries have polluted the imagination of the people. Such religions have no power to give men victory over the sins that enter all our lives. History proves that no other religion can do this but Christianity.

"There are thousands of people in all our cities who are not Christians. Let us Christianize them first."—These people have opportunities to become Christians whenever they desire. There are churches all around them. They are free to attend the services in these churches, to consult their ministers, whenever they wish. If they do not not know about Christ and His teachings it is because they have not taken the trouble to find out. Peterborough has a population of about 20,000. There is a church or mission hall for every 1,000 people. In North Honan, China, there is only one missionary for every 300,000 heathen. Thousands of these Chinese—as the history of missions proves—would gladly become Christians did they have the opportunity. Similar conditions exist in portions of India and Africa. Experience proves that much larger returns may be obtained for the expenditure of a given sum in foreign missions than in trying to reach people in our home cities who refuse to listen when an effort is being made to reach them. Business men who give their money for a definite purpose desire to have their money expended in a manner that will ensure a maximum of results. Therefore, many of them stipulate that a certain proportion at least of their offerings shall be expended for foreign missions.

"Let us pay off the debts on our churches and strengthen them first."—If you were living comfortably in a house partly paid for and saw men around you suffering from the lack of any houses at all, would you not feel called on to help them? That is the way Christians feel about the millions of heathen who have neither churches or missionaries, and who are suffering from the lack of both. A professing Christian who insisted on spending money on himself first when he knew that there were others who needed it infinitely more, would dishonor the cause he claimed to support.

"Do not the givings for foreign missions cripple the work of our home churches?"—The experience of thousands of churches proves that the impulse which leads a man to give money for the benefit of the heathen impels him to see that no equally needy cause is neglected at home. An increase in the givings for foreign missions is invariably attended by an increase in the givings for the purposes of the home church. "The light that shines the farthest shines the brightest nearest home."

"Foreign missions have never spent any money on us: Why should we spend money on them?"—Were it not for the work of the first missionaries we might all be heathen, like the Chinese or natives of Africa and India. In the time of Christ our ancestors were the heathen people of northern Europe. During the first few centuries after the birth of Christ the early missionaries instead of going east to India and China, turned west and north. Thus, in time, our ancestors and the nations to which we belong, were Christianized. Had these missionaries turned east instead of west and north, the people of India and China might have been the Christian people to-day and we might have been the heathen. Seeing that we have not earned the great benefits we enjoy is it not our duty now to extend them to others? "Freely ye have received, freely give."

"Foreign nations never made a real Christian of a heathen, and never will."—In most heathen countries when a native becomes a Christian his friends cast him off; his family disown him. Yet thousands and thousands of native Christians have given up all that they held dear in order that they might be true to the teachings of Christ. In Uganda native Christians were horribly mutilated and hacked to pieces. Thirty-two were slowly burned to death on one great pyre. In all some 200 native Christians perished rather than renounce their faith. In China during the Boxer rebellion thousands of native Christians suffered death and torture rather than prove untrue to their profession. In both countries, as well as in others, the heroism of these native Christians ultimately led thousands of others to become Christians. Japan now recognizes Christianity as one of the three great religions of the country and encourages its teachings. Many of her leading statesmen are professing Christians. China recently issued an appeal to the Christian people of the world to unite in a special day of prayer for the success of the new republic. The history of missions reveals many triumphs such as these.

REV. W. M. LOUCKS GOES TO WINNIPEG

Former Curate of St. John's Church is Pastor of Important Church

Rev. Walter M. Loucks, Rector of St. Matthew's Church, Ottawa, and former Curate of St. John's Church, Peterborough, has accepted a call to All Saints' Church, Winnipeg. Referring to his work in the Capital City, the Ottwa Citizen says:

Aside from the prominent part he has taken in the work of the Church of England in this diocese, he has been a citizen of Ottawa whose departure will be greatly missed, whose untiring efforts have ever been in the best interests of the City in a wide field of activity. Together with Mr. H. P. Hill and Hon. Mackenzie King, he was instrumental in forming the Canadian Club of Ottawa, and was a member of its first executive. He has continued to take an energetic interest in the welfare of this organization. He is on the executive of the Bible Society and is deeply interested in temperance movements and those towards moral reform.

Work in the Church.

He was Curate of St. John's Church, Peterborough, from 1889 to 1893. He was Curate of Christ Church Cathedral, Ottawa, from 1893 to 1902. He was inducted Rector of St. Matthew's Church in the Glebe on Oct. 1, 1902. He became secretary and registrar of the House of Bishops in April, 1909. He became clerical secretary of the Diocese of Ottawa in June of this year. He is a member of the corporation of Trinity College, Toronto.

To give an idea of the remarkable success that has crowned his efforts as rector of St. Matthew's Church, it might be stated that when he was inducted the parish had 107 families, and now there are 464. Then there were 491 individuals, and now 1,986. At that time there were but 198 communicants, and at the present time there are 845.

Report That Duchess Is Ill Denied

Special Wire to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, Nov. 25.—The officials at Government House this morning deny the rumours of the returning illness of the Duchess of Connaught, notwithstanding the fact that Sir Arbuthnot Lane, the eminent British physician was summoned from Montreal to see Her Highness yesterday.

The Lakes Disaster Fund

Over two hundred dollars was added to the Lakes' Disaster Fund as a result of the benefit concert which was held in St. Paul's Church on Monday evening. Mayor Bradburn, who is Honorary Treasurer of the Fund, states that the total amount raised to date is in the neighbourhood of three hundred dollars. The City Council which meets to-night, will authorize a grant of one hundred dollars.

Healthy, Wrinkle-Free Skin Easy to Have

(From The Woman Beautiful)

A dull, drab, muddy complexion, or an over-red, blotchy, pimply or freckled skin, can by a quite simple harmless and inexpensive method, be changed to one of flower-like radiance and purity. One ounce of common sherocilised wax, sold by druggists generally, will remove the most unsightly complexion in from one to two weeks. By its remarkable absorptive power, the withered, faded or discolored layer of thin cuticle which hides the healthier skin underneath, is gradually flecked off in tiny, almost invisible particles. This is done so gently there is no inconvenience, and no trace is left on the skin except that of enhanced beauty. The wax is smeared on like cold cream before retiring, and removed in the morning with warm water.

If the skin is wrinkled or sagey, a face bath made by dissolving 1 oz. powdered saxolite in ½ pt. witch hasel will be found most effective. Combining both astringent and tonic properties this tightens the skin and tones properties, this tightens the skin and braces up its supporting muscles.

The investigation will also cover passenger traffic.

SCORED RACE PREJUDICE

MONTREAL, Nov. 26. — Taking the Beiliss ritual murder for his text, the Rev. Dr. Symonds scored race prejudice at Christ Church Cathedral Sunday evening. Not only the prejudice of the Russian Christian against the Hebrew was touched on by the preacher, but the modern feeling which is harboured of jealousy of nation with nation resulting in the piling up of armaments and warlike preparations. Poverty and misery and vice increase almost unheeded in our cities, while money is poured out on munitions of war, as I Dr. Symonds.

BENGAL AND ITS LANGUAGES.

—x—

The people of Bengal number 17,000,000 and the boast of perhaps the best culture in India at the present time. The language as a written language is only fifty years old. Though for over 1,000 years it has been a dialect, there is in Indian history unfortunately no trace of Bengali having been an important literary tongue. The language originates from Sanskrit, the mother tongue from which every other Indian language has borrowed its alphabet, grammar, and vocabulary; but, unlike others, Bengali never shrinks from gathering new materials. There are numerous Persian, French, Arabic, and English words incorporated in it, and the wonder of it is that, instead of having been degraded into some vulgar form like Pidgin English, Bengali has become the most literary, scientific, and perhaps the most philosophic of modern Indian languages.

Took No Notice.

"What kind of people are your neighbours?" a suburban dame was asked.

"Oh, I never take the slightest notice of them or their doings, my dear," she said. "They don't keep a maid, and a charwoman comes on Wednesdays and Fridays. The butcher never calls, as the husband brings an occasional joint home from the city, and sits down to dinner in his shirt-sleeves. The wife is a most dowdy creature, wears hideous hats, and has no 'at home' day. The children attend the council school, and the baby hasn't been vaccinated. But as I say, I know nothing about them, and don't take the least notice of them!"

A delightful musicale was held at the residence of Mrs. Tucker, Albert Street, on Friday evening last. Glees, part songs, trios, duets and solos were rendered. After refreshments had been partaken of the members dispersed, first singing the National Anthem.

RED ROSE TEA "is good tea"

SIX HUNDRED WERE DINED

Tea Meeting Last Night Was the Most Successful Ever Held in the Mark Street Church

A SPLENDID LECTURE

The most successful function ever held in the Mark Street Church, is the only adequate way of describing the tea and lecture held in connection with the anniversary services last night. Upwards of six hundred people sat down to supper, and when the banquet and lecture were over, every one of them felt that their decision to devote the evening to the tea meeting, had been amply justified.

The Rev. C. E. Cragg, pastor of Mark Street Church, presided over the gathering. The officials of the Church and the ladies who prepared the feast, are extremely gratified with the success of the affair. Over six hundred people attended and the proceeds were in the nighbourhood of $150. But aside from that the banquet was an indisputable proof that the people of the Mark Street Church are ready to rally behind and support the officers of the Church in anything they undertake. It is that last fact —the indication of the healthy condition of the Church's work — that makes the banquet the greatest in the history of the Church.

During the evening the Church choir rendered a beautiful anthem. A solo by Mr. Frank Pratt was a greatly enjoyed contribution to the musical programme.

The speaker and guest of the evening was the Rev. T. J. Mansell, of the Charlotte Street Methodist Church. For over an hour he held the closest attention of all present, while delivering his interesting address, "A Trip Through Palestine." This was profusely illustrated by lantern slides depicting scenes of the Holy Land. Mr. Manaell made the trip two years ago, just before he came to this City to take charge of the Charlotte Street Methodist Church.

To the ladies who arranged the banquet a great deal of credit is due. The menu was enjoyable and excellently served, and nothing that could add to the excellence of the repast had been overlooked.

Horse Fell Into Sewer

Emily Farmer Loses a Valuable Animal

LINDSAY, Nov. 24.—Saturday evening about seven o'clock as Mr. Stewart Pogue of Emily, was driving east on Queen Street, his horse stumbled into the sewer between St. Peter and St. David Street and received such serious injuries that it died on Sunday.

The night was a very dark one and it was with some difficulty that vehicles could keep to the road. The horse was badly crushed and bruised and the services of the fire team were necessary to haul it out of the sewer. It was removed to George Calvert's stable where everything was done to save its life.

Lindsay Girl Is Missing

LINDSAY, Nov. 24.— Isabella McClay left the pea factory, corner of Victoria Avenue and Russcel Streets, on Saturday evening at 5.30 p.m. and all trace of her has been lost since, with the exception of a glimpse one of her girl companions got of her on Kent Street at about 9 o'clock.

The girl was dressed in a long black coat and wore a blue felt hat. She was fourteen years of age, had not been in the habit of being on the streets at night.

Her disappearance is the more mysterious on account of her retiring disposition and good habits. She is the daughter of Mr. J. McClay, a cook in Johnston's construction camp and lived with her mother at 161 William Street north.

Chief Chilton has the case in hand and has obtained all information possible to get, but this is of such a meagre character that there is little to work upon. Friend's houses have been visited by the police, but none of them saw the missing girl.

The railway officials state that no one answering her description was seen to take the night trains.

How Anyone Can Banish Hair or Fuzz

(Modes of To-day)

Superfluous hairs are easily and quickly removed with the aid of a delatone paste. Get an original package of delatone from your druggist and mix enough with water to cover the hairy surface. Apply and after 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. No possible harm or injury follows this treatment, and except in rare instances, only one application is required to remove every trace of hair. Results are more satisfactory when you get the delatone in an original package.

EPWORTH LEAGUE HELD BANQUET

Over Two Hundred Guests Assembled in the George St. Church Last Night at First Annual Function

The first annual banquet of the George Street Epworth League, held in the lecture room of the church last night, was presided over by Mr. C. S. Thompson, President of the League, and he performed his duties as toastmaster in a most acceptable manner.

Over two hundred members of the Epworth League and guests were present at the affair, and the toast list was a brilliant one. Mr. G. N. Gordon was the guest of the evening, and Mr. Baker, head of the Epworth Leagues of this district, was also present.

The banquet was prepared in an admirable manner by the ladies, the table was beautifully laid, and the supper was excellently served.

The only musical number of the evening was an instrumental duet by Mr. E. Oke and Miss Hazel Pentland. This was warmly received by the audience, a duet by a cornet and violin being somewhat of a novelty in musical offerings.

In responding to the toast to the church, Rev. R. G. Peever gave a brief but interesting address. He had heard advice given to a minister, "to stand up cheerfully, speak out manfully, and leave off speedily." A gathering of this nature was an inspiration to stand up cheerfully and speak out manfully.

Such opportunities as the banquet to-night were training the young men and young women along original lines of thought. Some of the greatest speakers in the British House of Commons had received their training as local preachers and deacons in the Nonconformist churhes of England. The young people should be proud to be identified with the Epworth League that could command the intelligent support of such a gathering as was present to-night.

To-day the greatest Church in the world, with the largest Sunday School force on earth, was the Methodist Church.

The Epworth League and the Methodist Church stood for the maturity of Christ's character, and the young people should be proud of this great denomination, with its mission not only the Canada, but to the whole world.

The toast list was as follows:

"Our King," "God Save the King."

"Canada and the Empire," Mr. T. H. Shields and Mr. M. McCarroll.

"The Methodist Church," Mr. H. Coon and Rev. R. G. Peever.

"The Sunday School," Miss P. Hardill and Mr. W. Taylor.

"The Epworth League," Mr. C. E. McKee and Mr. E. E. Logan.

"Our Guests," Mr. A. Morrow and Ald. G. N. Gordon.

"The Ladies" Rev. J. G. Lewis and Miss A. L. Beatty.

"God Save the King."

NORTH MONAGHAN RATE-PAYER IS HEARD FROM

North Monaghan, Nov. 24, 1913.

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—North Monaghan topics have been brought before the ratepayers very forcibly this last week in the shape of tax bills, which make one realize that if we are outside the city limits, the way our taxes are growing we might as well be inside them, as we should have something to show for our money.

The money this year has been chiefly spent on May's school house. The question is: Have we got value for our money? The majority think not —$10,000 and the top rooms not finished. Would the councillors have spent their own money in the same way?

The general opinion is that they would not.

What is the remedy?

One is for the people of Byersville and the district to the south of it to get together and nominate a candidate and adopt strong aggressive methods to support him at the polls in January.

Is it not time we gave some of the Old Brigade a rest, and break up the old family compact that seems to exist there. Put new blood, new ideas, and something of the 20th century style of business methods in the doings of our council? Then we may expect to see something for our money.

A few weeks ago three men were engaged cleaning out the ditches in the Crawford Grove district, cutting the brush, etc., and leaving it in the ditch to choke up the bridges in the spring. These were practical men?

Then again there was some talk of what the Provincial Board of Health might do in your paper the other night.

In conclusion, let me ask who will take the bull by the horns, right now, call a meeting some where in Byersville, find a prospective candidate, and let us organize to support him on election day and do something and not be all talk. I am.

Yours respectfully,

"Ratepayer."

Home Shopping vs. Shopping by Mail

Who is to Blame for the Existing Undesirable Conditions?

The Dry Goods Review of Toronto prints the following in regard to the big stores and the city newspapers:

"The big departmental stores continue to extend their interests in or control of the daily newspapers in Toronto, Montreal and Winnipeg. A large interest in, if not the control of, another Toronto daily has just been acquired. This makes three mail order houses that are financially interested. In Montreal it came out in legal proceedings recently that one of the oldest daily papers there passed some months ago into the hands of the chief owners of a rising mail order house which aims to monopolize the trade in Eastern Canada. There are now nine dailies in Toronto, Montreal and Winnipeg, which are known to be owned, or controlled by, the big store and financial interests, and while posing as the mediums of public opinion are the organs of these interests. The trade of these houses has grown enormously in these cities where these dailies circulate, but in the other cities and smaller places where there are good local newspapers, they have not made the same gains, because the local newspapers are well edited and are loyal to their local merchants and refuse to carry the advertising of the big city store. The only way in which the big dailies can make headway is by cutting their prices. They get $3 to $5 a year in Montreal, Toronto and Winnipeg, but sell in other cities at 50c. to $1 a year. This does not pay for the white paper on which the newspapers are printed, but the heavy deficits are made up by subsidies through big advertising contracts and in other ways, and by the low postal rates. The merchants and newspapers outside of these three big centres should get together and insist that no newspaper should have the privilege of the mails which has a lower subscription price outside than in the centre in which it is published or which sells at less than the cost of the paper used."

Note.—More or less mail order business leaves Peterborough and district daily for the large departmental stores in Toronto and Montreal. This state of affairs, however, cannot be laid at the doors of the local mechants, nor to the city papers. Our city merchants carry large and varied stocks sufficient to meet the requirements of all who should naturally shop in Peterborough; and the prices are just as much, (and in some cases, more) in favour of the local purchasers' interests as those submitted by the mail order houses. Our city merchants can—and if the matter were investigated—do, duplicate the best offers of the outside departmental stores. Our city papers are loyal to the merchant and the town. To put matters on a fair footing it only remains for the local buyers, in city and country, to be loyal to those, upon whose loyal support the upbuilding and prosperity of the city depends. This is in their own interest, not only in the matter of securing adequate value for the money spent in local purchases but in the matter of affecting the prevailing high cost of living. This comes from combination of the big interests in order to concentrate trade, and to permit them to fix prices, where they have acquired the power, as they are rapidly doing, largely it is to be regretted, by the help of those who unwittingly or unthinkingly assist in the process.

A popular love song is entitled, "If I But Knew." If he or she did know, the parson might be shy another fee.

TWO HUNDRED DOLLARS WERE COLLECTED AT BENEFIT CONCERT

Enjoyable Programme Presented at St. Paul's Church Last Night —Rev. Robt. Pogue Made an Appeal.

ALD. GILLESPIE PRESIDED

Two hundred dollars and five cents was the amount of the collection at the benefit concert in St. Paul's Church on Monday night in aid of the Lakes Disaster Fund.

There were but few seats left unoccupied in the large auditorium of the church when Ald. Gillespie, who presided announced the opening number. His Worship Mayor Bradburn had consented to act as chairman but was suddenly called out of the city, and requested Ald. Gillespie to perform the duties of the position.

Prior to the concert programme, the audience, led by the organ under Mr. Allan, sang the hymn, "Eternal Father, strong to save," which number was in keeping with the object of the gathering.

The concert was the suggestion of Mr. John Allan, organist of St. Paul's, and to him is due in a large measure the splendid entertainment afforded and the opportunity of personally contributing to the fund which has called up the sympathy of the entire country. Financially the affair was a grammying success, and its concert appeal was all that could be desired.

In his organ solos, Mr. Allan displayed a flawless talent. His seond number, "The Storm," by Wely, was decidedly appropriate and was realistically portrayed. Beginning with melodic passages indicative of peace, the selection runs smoothly to almost a dead calm, with a far-away, faint rumble that soon bursts into long peals, denoting the near approach of the storm clouds. Mr. Allan's storm was a weird thing. It thundered and rolled overhead. The wind soughed and lashed with all the fury of the elements, and the imagination was carried away to scenes which occasioned the appeal for the assistance of widows and orphans. The tempest spent itself and gradually died away, to be followed by suggestive hymnal music. The appropriateness of this number made it the most striking of Mr. Allan's performance, and the audience will not soon forget the realism he effected.

His other numbers were equally well rendered. A word should be mentioned of his exquisite accompaniments. Mr. Allan played the piano parts for all the other numbers, and in this respect alone displayed his art. He has the true sense of what is demanded of an accompanist.

The other contributors to a very satisfactory, appropriate and happily selected programme did great credit to themselves. The concerted vocal numbers were very satisfying. "Down the Vale" by Miss Allen and Mr. Huycke, and the beautiful duet from Il Trovatore, "Home to Our Mountains," by Miss Allen and Mr. Park, were delightfully done. Mr. Maurice Park, a lyric soprano of good quality, dealt artistically with "The Sailor's Grave" by Sullivan. Miss Allen sang by request "The Erl King," and both vocally and interpretatively, showed a fine appreciation of the dramatic values of this heroic masterpiece of the great master, Schubert. Mr. Asa Huycke sang the old familiar, "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep" in fine voice, and with taste and effectiveness. Miss Ada Richardson, gave Mascheroni's "My Paradise," with finish and technical skill, her flexibility of voice lending itself charmingly to the florid cadenze the composition contains. Mr. William Wilson's two contrasting violin numbers, "Andante Cantabile," Papini, and "Chanson Polonaise" by Weiniawski, showed at once the versatility and range of his art, and served to display the breadth of his musical conception, purity and smoothness of tone and authority of execution. Another word might be devoted to the excellently appropriate character of the selections in relation to the object of the occasion. Altogether the programme in this respect, and in the general excellence of the work of the contributing artists, was one of the most pleasing it would be possible to ask.

Freight Car Left The Track

A car on the manifest freight train, coming west about one o'clock last night, left the tracks, and blocked the G.T.R. line to Belleville for over seven hours. During this time all the freight going east or coming west over the line was held up.

The accident was caused by the breaking of a truck on one of the cars, sending the car sideways across the track. The car was near the back of the train so that, fortunately, none of the others were damaged.

The auxiliary at Lindsay, was sent for and arrived at the scene of the accident about four o'clock this morning. Under the supervision of Mr. Chas. Mitchell, the wrecking crew set to work to clear the rails, which was accomplished about 8:30 this morning.

The only passenger train held up was No. 9, from Belleville, which should have arrived at 8:10 this morning, but did not pull up at the station until nearly 9 o'clock.

Conductor Hansford was in charge of the manifest when the accident occurred. The point at which the car left the track was about three miles east of the city.

POLICE COURT IS OPEN TO PUBLIC

Market Senate Reply to Lawyer's Proposal Re Rail Birds

Members of the Market Senate want to know why there is a public entrance to the police court. They direct their question particularly at some lawyer who has cast aspersions upon the railbirds, and it so happens that a few of the "senators" drop in occasionally to watch Magistrate Dumble distribute even-handed justice. The police court would be more or less of a failure, they state, without an audience. It is alleged that the majority of the railbirds are of the best behaved class of citizens as the result of numerous illustrations of what infractions of the law entail. Hence, the Senate referring causticallly to some lawyers whom they have seen perform consider that the remarks are to be regarded from the standpoint of their source. Why are the doors opened if it is not to welcome the "birds," who pick up the Magistrate's words of wisdom and disseminate them among their friends. Thus is the public good and order given extra support.

NON-JURY SITTINGS

Mr. McBain — No; just with the Court of Revision.

You took the position that the Council should keep the loop of the stream on your land open?

Yes.

The work done in 1909 was satisfactory?

Yes. There would have been no complaint if it had always been as satisfatcory as that.

They asked you to keep it clear after they had cleared it in 1909?

Yes.

But you didn't?

No.

Mr. McBain said a man and team might have been able to clean out the sediment in one day.

And that would do for the summer?

Providing there were no more thunder storms.

Did the Councillors offer to pay you if you had it cleaned out?

They offered to pay me if I cleaned it out.

You preferred to suffer $100 loss?

I had my own reasons. I do not admit what you suggest.

The Council had informed you they did not hold themselves liable toward you.

Yes. They did make statements of that kind.

Mr. Ruddy—Could your cattle get no water in 1912?

Mr. McBain—Nothing but stagnant water.

Mr. Ruddy—And we can safely admit that they suffered no ill effects?

Mr. Ruddy—You did not tell the Council one of the gates was off?

Mr. McBain—That's a fact.

Plaintiff admitted that there was a lane leading from the yard to the stream through which the cattle could pass—when it was not closed.

Mr. Ruddy—Its all moonshine about driving them down?

No.

When did you do it?

This summer.

But you can't fix any date. How many times did you drive them?

Quite a number of times. I did not count them. Personally ten or fifteen times; other times my little girl drove them.

Mr. Hellmuth—How far is it from the stream to your home.

Mr. McBain—Seven-eighths of a mile.

To Judge Middleton—Do you have to pump the water in your yard?

No.

You could have cleared out the stream at any time during the three years.

Yes. It could have been done. It cost the municipality $10 each time, I believe.

Mr. W. J. Johnston was next called and two men responded to the name. William James Johnston, of Lot 20, Con. 13, was sworn.

The case is proceeding.

ACIDS STOMACHS ARE DANGEROUS

Common Sense Advice by a Distinguished Specialist.

"Acid" stomachs are dangerous because acid irritates and inflames the delicate lining of the stomach, thus hindering and preventing the proper action of the stomach, and leading to probably nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble from which people suffer. Ordinary medicines and medicinal treatments are useless in such cases, for they leave the source of the trouble, the acid in the stomach, as dangerous as ever. The acid must be neutralized, and its formation prevented, and the best thing for this purpose is a teaspoonful of bisurated magnesia, a simple antacid, taken in a little warm or cold water after eating, which not only neutralizes the acid, but also prevents the fermentation from which acidity is developed. Foods which ordinarily cause greatest distress may be eaten with impunity if the meal is followed with a little bisurated magnesia, which can be obtained from any druggist, and should always be kept handy.

Missed His Wife, But Shot And Killed Baby In Mother's Arms

MONTREAL, Nov. 25.—"Out of my way, I'm going to shoot that woman." These were the words of ex-Detective Picard before he fired the bullet which killed his adopted son at three o'clock this morning, at 73 Milton Street. So said Mrs. Maris O'Brian, the wife of Picard, at the morgue, in her evidence before Coroner McMahon.

"About three o'clock this morning," began Mrs. Picard, "my husband came home and knocked at the door. I would not allow him in, for we did not live together for some time and I was afraid of him. 'If you don't open the door, I'll find a way in, and then it will be worse for you' was my husband's retort. For all this I would not let him in, he rushed to the window, and with a blow broke it and was in the room in a few minutes. I snatched the baby in my arms and rushed upstairs. Picard came up with a revolver in his right hand and a coal oil lamp in his other hand. He searched the house, in the cupboard, in clothes closet, opened the trunks and looked everywhere. He then went out and disappeared into the night. Then two gentlemen rooming in the house, Mr. John Coad and Mr. Arthur Lacoste, took some boards and went downstairs to nail up the broken window and while they were doing so Mr. Coad happened to remark something about a man like Picard to come at this hour and make a disturbance.

Shot Killed Baby.

"My husband, who, it seems, had been hiding outside, jumped into the house again. He rushed madly upstairs, where I, with some other women, was sitting, and said, 'I am going to do something desperate. I'm going to shoot that woman,' pointing at me. When some of the people present interfered he pushed them aside and fired the revolver at me. My baby was on my left shoulder at the time and not knowing that the child was killed, I ran into Mr. Coad's room."

"I was desperate, and facing my husband, I screamed out, 'Look, Peter, Peter, you have killed my baby.' His only retort was, 'You shall follow him.' And raising the gun he again pulled the trigger, but for some reason it did not fire. I feared another tragedy, and rushed out of the room into Mr. Coad's apartment, where his wife was sitting, and shouted for her to open the window. I then, with the dead baby, crawled out of the window and walked on the roof into a neighbouring house on Milton Street, where I remained until the morning."

This tragic story was related by the mother in the Coroner's Court this morning.

When John Coad, who was a witness to the shooting, was called to testify, he repeated everything that Mrs. Picard stated, and added that when Picard came back a second time he asked him to go away and leave them alone.

"No, I will shoot my wife," was the murderer's answer as he flew up the stairs, pushing both of the boarders out of his way. After the shooting, as related by Mr. Coad, Picard rushed out of the house, leaving his hat behind him, and proceeded on Milton Street towards St. Lawrence Boulevard. Mr. Coad rushed out into the street and telephoned to No. 4 police station at the corner of Ontario and St. Elizabeth Street. Before the patrol arrived Constables Gagne and Bertrand, both of No. 5 station, were brought to the scene by the shouts and the discarge of the revolver. Gagne found an empty shell of a 32-calibre revolver.

Bertrand stated this morning that about three weeks ago he met Picard on the street, and in conversation the ex-detective showed him a revolver with which he said he was going to do something good later on. He also stated that he loved his wife and child, and that he was going to take them out of the house where they were, because he said it was not good for them to stay there.

Sergeant Bagot, of No. 5 station, was one of the first to enter the house where the tragedy occurred.

The jury returned the verdict of murder, relying upon the police to find the murderer.

No Trace of Murderer.

A large force of men from the central detective office has been detailed for the search after Picard, but so far he has not been located. Inspector Cowan with reinforcements from several of the outlying stations has scoured the country back of the mountain without success.

According to rumours, the man has been seen at several points in the city. One report that he was seen to jump a freight train leaving Mile End Station is discounted by the police after making careful inquiries.

Opinion about headquarters differs when the possibility of Picard committing suicide is talked about. It is thought that the man is crazed by recent illness and that the worry brought on by being hunted by men with whom he worked will inevitably lead to suicide.

THE ONE-WE-DREAD-TO-TELL-THINGS-TO

By RUTH CAMERON

In almost every family there is one member who is the One-we-dread-to-tell-things-to.

It may be a woman, but as a rule it is a man. Whatever mistakes we make, whatever goes wrong, whatever accidents happen in the home, are doubled in their disagreeableness by our dread of telling this person.

I went to call on a woman one day and found her so evidently nervous and unhappy that I could not help asking the reason. "Why, I was out calling," she explained, "when that terrible storm came up. The maid didn't put down the window in the dining room and the paper was wet, and I'm afraid it is hopelessly disfigured. I tried to telephone home during the storm but it was lightning so, that the switchboard girls wouldn't answer the phone Come out here and I'll show it to you."

She showed it to me, and I was surprised to find that only two or three strips were spoiled. "Is that all?" I exclaimed, "why, it won't take more than a roll of paper to fix that." They are not at all poor people so I couldn't see why it should be such a tragedy.

"Oh, I know that," she answered. "But it's just that I do so dread to tell Harold."

That was the secret of this poor creature's unhappiness! That was what made her actually turn pale and tremble when she spoke of "telling Harold." The spoiling of the paper was unfortunate, but it needn't have made anyone unhappy, if there hadn't been a One-we-dread-to-tell-things-to in the family.

I know another family where the mistress of the house always acts as if sickness on the part of any member were deliberate and designed to make her unhappy. When any of the sons or daughters are sick, the word goes round; "Oh dear, we dread to tell mother, she'll make such a fuss." In this case, of course, it is only because the mother loves her children very dearly and is extremely anxious when they are sick, that she is so upset to hear of illness. Nevertheless, she succeeds in making the sufficiently heavy burden of sickness even heavier. And love of that sort, to my mind, needs to be controlled almost as much as any fault or vice.

Occasionally the One-we-dread-to-tell-things-to happens to be in a good humour, and doesn't make things as unpleasant as we expected. But even in that case, we have suffered infinite misery from the fear which his previous performances have taught us to feel.

Frequently the One-we-dread-to-tell-things-to wouldn't recognize himself under that name. It is perfectly natural for him to make things unpleasant for others when anything annoys him, and he just does it. That's all. He never thinks of their side of the case.

By any chance are you the One-we-dread-to-tell-things-to?

Ruth Cameron

Where I'd Stop.

Even though I had a million,
And had no excuse to hoard,
If the latest things in fashion

I should never let a hat clerk
I'm very, very sure,

Purse Snatchers In Lindsay

LINDSAY, NOV. 24.—A deliberate and successful attempt at purse snatching was perpetrated Saturday evening at the corner of Ridout and Mill Streets, when Miss Rodman, who resides at Mr. C. E. Tamlin's, Ridout Street, was relieved of a chatelaine bag, containing $4.60.

The theft occurred shortly after 8 o'clock. Miss Tamlin was on her way up street, accompanied by Miss McFadden, daughter of James McFadden, and when passing the letter box at the corner of Ridout and Mill Streets, a man stepped out and with out much ceremony, snatched the chatelaine bag and beat a retreat across the lawn in front of the residence occupied by Mrs. T. D. Carroll and disappeared south on Mill street.

Two men immediately after the theft ran up to the ladies and asked what the trouble was. They then followed the thief, and the police are strongly of the opinion that the two men were in league with the purse snatcher.

It appears that a little earlier in the evening a daughter of Mr. Geo. Bell, caretaker of the Bank of Commerce, was pounced upon by a purse snatcher in the same locality, but his plans were nipped in the bud. The descriptions given of the man by Miss Bell and Misses McFadden and Rodman do not tally so that probably more than one purse snatcher was operating Saturday evening.

On Saturday night after this theft an express parcel was rifled at the G. T. R. station and two pairs of boots stolen.

GIRL DYING AFTER TAKING DEADLY BICHLORIDE

ROCHESTER, Nov. 25.—Her lips sealed as to the shadow under which she sought to destroy her life, Miss Virginia Sterling, the pretty girl who swallowed about 15 grains of bichloride of mercury yesterday, is dying at the Homopathic Hospital. The nature of her awful despair, the grief, behind the tragic impulse of her deed, may remain a mystery for ever.

At times she has been delirious, but in these wild, feverish aberrations she discloses nothing on which to base a thought that might have led to an understanding of her heart's wound or the previous mental state in which death was sweeter than life, the cold grave and oblivion more desirable than the warmth and light of the sunlit world. From her incoherent ravings of last night, she sank into a low, scarcely audible muttering. Sometimes she seemed to utter a name, to call upon it as for aid. Then her face would assume an expression of terror; there would be a gleam of horror in her eyes as if some terrible vision seared her very soul.

At length, exhaustion, coma ensued. Apparently she slept. Peace dwelt upon her features. Once the nurse observed a tear on her eyelid and gently wiped it away. At noon her breathing was becoming less and less rapid. The doctors said she could not live many hours longer.

When Miss Sterling walked into the Guilford drug store at Main Street East and North Street, and announced that she had taken poison, she was dressed in a fashionable and apparently costly suit and had the appearance of being a woman of refinement and excellent character. This appearance has been borne out by what has been learned of her past life.

Came from Virginia.

It appears from statements made at the hospital yesterday that Miss Sterling came to Rochester about two years ago, from a small town near Richmond, Va., and took an apartat "The Jenkinson," where she lived with a friend, Miss Eleanor Buse, for three or four months. A short time afterwards a brother came to live with her, and they remained there until spring. During this time she did and said many things which appeared queer to the other occupants of the house, and which made them think that owing to the nervous ailment with which she was suffering at the time, she was not exactly right mentally. During the time she was employed for a few weeks during the holiday season in Scrantom, Wetmore & Co.'s store in State Street, and it was said there this morning that she always shunned the other employees and acted peculiarly.

She left this city about a year ago, and before leaving was a patient in the Rochester General Hospital, where she was treated for a nervous ailment by Drs. Charles E. Darrow and John A. Stapelton. It appears that she was later told by Dr. Wende, of Buffalo, that she had an incurable nerve trouble which would sooner or later affect her heart.

When Miss Sterling left Rochester she went to New York City, where she entered the training school for nurses at the Metropolitan Hospital, on Blackwell's Island. She remained there but a short time, as it was found that she was physically unable to perform her duties. For a time she stopped at the Hotel Victoria, in New York City, with another woman friend. Later she went to Geneva, N.Y., and this spring appeared again in this city, going to "The Jenkinson," where she stayed for a week, and suddenly disappeared. She came there again a month ago and stopped for three nights and on last Friday night appeared at midnight and asked for a room. As there was none vacant at the time, she left. At that time it is said that she acted nervous and in a peculiar manner.

It is said that both her mother and father are dead, and while working at Scrantom, Wetmore & Co.'s store she said that her sister had just died, and that she had a brother-in-law and two nieces living. From reports it is found that she has a cousin living at Montpelier, Vt.

Rev. Rob Roy Converse visited Miss Sterling at the hospital yesterday, and told the authorities that he could say nothing but the best for the unfortunate woman. It was denied that any love affairs had been the cause of her act.

Former Canadian Charged With Murder—Dr. W. B. Craig, a graduate of the Ontario Veterinary College, and now dean of the Indiana Veternary College, is on trial this week charged with the murder of Dr. Helen Knabe, a well-known physician of Indianapolis. She was found with her throat cut and evidence of criminal assault. The theory of the prosecution is that it was the result of jealousy and a love affair.

Good Health Assured Patrons
In the selection of healthy meats for the table it is well to know something about how the cattle have been fed and raised. It is therefore interesting to learn that our local meat dealers, Messrs. Lumley & Perrin, of the Peterborough Public Market, 176 Simcoe Street, own a cattle ranch in Haliburton, where they devote special attention to carefully fitting young heifers, sheep and lambs, for their local market here, as well as elsewhere. They claim that they select the choicest of their ranch for their Peterborough customers, who are supplied with the very best meats possible. Such meat is natural food, and as every care is taken in inspecting their cattle, there should be no apprehension of ill-fed or diseased meats from their store. Lumley & Perrin are frank in acknowledging that both their meats and their methods, since coming to Peterborough have earned them a gratifying trade. Everybody gets a square deal and any purchaser who does not think so can have their money refunded.

OLD COUNTRY LEAGUE TABLES COMPILED UP TO DATE

Blackburn Rovers Head the First Division--Notts County Lose to Hull City---No Changes in the Leadership of the Big Four Old Country Football Leagues.

Many surprises were registered in the British football game Saturday. Sheffield United took a fall out of Manchester United at Sheffield, so that there will be no band playing at Victoria Station when the Old Trafford boys get home. Their local rival, the "City," managed to get a decision over Chelsea on the Hyde Road enclosure. The "Rovers" were there with the goods again, even if the "Blades" have got quite a reputation, and the verdict was 2 to 1 in Blackburn's favour. Bolton Wanderers got a nasty jar on the Park Avenue ground at Bradford, where the City piled up 5 to their 1. The 'Spurs' went right after the 'Toffee' team at Tottenham by the looks of the score of 4 to 1.

Notts County Beaten.

Notts County are still leaders of the second division, but another reverse like the one of Saturday will pull them away down the table. The "Tigers" of Hull put it all over them Saturday. Blackpool showed that they had some football in them Saturday by making a tie with the "Peacocks" in the seaside town. Bradford were the only team playing away from home in the second division who made their opponents hand over a couple of points. Notts Forest still occupy the place at the bottom of the table, just the oposite to that of their local rivals in the same division.

Swindon Again Tie.

Swindon's brilliant run of luck seems to have stopped, as on their own ground they were only able to make a tie with Brighton and Hove, the score being one each. Queen's Park Rangers are to be complimented on their fine victory of three to nothing over the "Palace." It looks as if the "Rangers" are going to get started at last. Reading jumped to third place in the league standing on account of their one to nothing victory over Coventry City.

Celtic Still Lead.

Celtic only managed to scrape through with a one to nothing victory over Hamilton. The biggest surprise in Scottish circles was perhaps the defeat of the Rangers by Motherwell. True, the score was one to nothing, but that represents two valuable points lost to the Rangers. The following are Saturday's scores:

PAPPAS WON FEATURE BOUT FROM SIMMONS

Fighting Greek Scored a Knockout in the Sixth Round of the Main Clash at Brock Street Rink Last Night.

OTHER GOOD BOUTS

Tommy Pappas, "The Fighting Greek," who formerly resided in Peterborough, knocked out Artie Simmons, of Detroit, in the sixth round of the feature bout at the Brock St. Rink last night. The boys met at 135 pounds and were scheduled to go ten rounds, a jab to the jaw early in the sixth round bringing the go to a close. It was a rapidly moving, hammer and tongs engagement, with both boys ready to take a punch any time to get one back.

Simmons looked the cleverest of the two in the early stages. He was fast and had a punch in either hand with the result that he had Pappas backed up against the ropes half a dozen times. The Greek, however, was a bear for punishment and stood the going in great style, while the Detroit boy seemed to tire on end. Simmons had a shade in the first three rounds, with the fourth even, and Pappas a little the better in the fifth. The end came suddenly. Pappas opened the sixth round like a whirlwind. He met Simmons half way out of his corner, beat down his guard and had him groggy in half a minute. A short jab to the jaw dropped the Detroiter and he went down for keeps.

Pappas was in fine shape and was much the fresher of the two at the end of the fifth, although Simmons looked a clever boy all over and his sudden defeat was unexpected.

Harry Westerby, of Toronto, and Kid Ryan, of Rochester, who have met here before, finished the programme with a fast four-round go that was full of action. The boys were clever and willing to mix things in lively fashion. Westerby floored Ryan with a body punch in the second round and had him all but out, but the Rochester boy came back and finished the round. He opened up the third round with a right smash to Westerby's jaw, the Toronto boy taking the count of six. From then on, however, Westerby had the edge. It had been agreed that the decision would be a draw if both men were on their feet at the end of the fourth.

In the first preliminary between F. Legros and Sailor Watson, two local boys, the former won by a wide margin on points, Watson had the height and reach, but Legros was too clever and won easily.

Knockout Bradley, of England, lived up to his name by practically knocking out Jack Williams in the fifth round. Bradley was easily the better of the two and he finally had Williams so groggy, that Referee Geo. N. Graham stopped the bout and awarded the decision to Bradley.

SIMMONS WANTS TO MEET PAPPAS AGAIN

Challenges Greek Fighter to Return Bout For Any Amount From $200 to $500, the Winner to Take All---Not Satisfied With Last Night's Bout.

Artie Simmons, the Detroit boy, who was knocked out by Tommy Pappas last night, is not satisfied with the result, and wants another crack at the Greek. He called on the sporting editor of the Examiner this morning and authorized the issue of a challenge to Pappas for a return bout.

"I'll fight Pappas for anything from $200 to $500," said Simmons this morning. "The winner to take all, but the Greek will have to make 135 pounds at 3 o'clock on the day of the fight. I gave away four or five pounds last night, and in addition crippled my left hand early in the fourth round, so that I was badly handicapped from then on.

Simmons stated that he was not in the best of condition last night, not having trained sufficiently.

"I would fight the Greek any place, but would prefer Peterborough," remarked the Detroit boy.

It is now up to Pappas' backers to get busy.

A STATEMENT FROM MR. BURNHAM

Mr. Burnham, M.P., has handed out the following statement to the press:

"Alderman Buller called upon me yesterday morning to my surprise to know why the Government had reported in favour of a swing at the western end of the C.P.R. bridge and why the C.P.R. was ignoring that report. I replied to him that such a statement was the very reverse of the fact. No report was made by any representative of the Government at all. Mr. Grant emphatically confirms that statement. This is the history of it. The Mayor and I went to Ottawa to ask the Government to compel the C.P.R. to build a swing in their new bridge here. Previously I had tried out the Railway Commission and the Department of Railways and Canals, finding at last that it was the Public Works Department that had jurisdiction over this bridge. The Minister wired Mr. Wanklyn of the C.P.R. to meet us at Ottawa which he did, and after a short conference he agreed to put in a swing. My duty ended there. As I remarked to the Mayor he represented the city thereafter. I did not. The C.P.R. then made ready to put in a swing in the centre of the bridge. To this the Mayor and his Engineer objected. They wanted the west end span as a swing. To this the C.P.R. replied that such a swing was unnecessarily long, too expensive and also dangerous. Then the Mayor wrote the Minister who said that he thought the C.P.R.'s offer reasonable and declining virtually to interfere further. The misagreement is as I understand it over the putting in of a swing which is at least as wide as many of those on the canal and the putting in of one as desired by the city. If the C.P.R.'s offer is no good that fact should be demonstrated by the city to the Government, not by the Government or its officers, or myself. But so far no such demonstration has been made. The point I wish to make, however, is that nobody acting for the Government will assume for one moment, to act for the city. The city will see the necessity of acting just as any other claimant acts by putting in its claim to the Government and following it up by expert testimony, if necessary, in support of its contention. I will be glad to assist it if it is right. But so far nothing has occurred to prove that the C.P.R.'s offer is not fair. The Government must be fair to all parties and if the C.P.R.'s offer is reasonable I understand why the minister refuses to interfere further. If it is not practicable show him. I have wired Mr. Wanklyn to see if he will put the same width of swing, as he offers in the middle at the west end. I am informed that the width of swing offered by them is sufficient. There may be some doubt as to the place. About that I know practically nothing."

Interesting Address By Mr. Cuthbereson

To Mr. James Cuthbertson, returned missionary from Japan, the Young People's Association of All Saints' Church, is indebted for a very interesting address on missionary work among the native police of Japan.

Mr. Cuthbertson addressed the meeting last night and during the short time at his disposal he won the undivided attention of all. He told many humorous and serious incidents, relative to his learning the Japanese language and his efforts along with other missionaries to win the people for Christ.

Mr. Cuthbertson has been in the City visiting Mr. James Dutton, 99 London street, Mrs. Dutton and Mrs. Cuthbertson being sisters. Mr. and Mrs. Cuthbertson lost their home and all their personal property and barely escaped with their lives during a fire in Tokio. This so upset Mrs. Cuthbertson, that it was necessary to leave Japan.

They are returning to their missionary work the first week in December, Mr. Cuthbertson having to remain there for eighteen months when he will have finished his time and will then return to England.

His friend, Mr. James Dutton, stated after the address that Mr. Cuthbertson and he had belonged to a Young People's Society when young, and their prayer was that one of them would be sent out as a missionary.

Review Under New Ownership

During the last few days, the Review Printing Company has undergone a change of ownership. Mr. Whalley, of Dundas, has taken a very large interest in the company, and has also assumed the managership, the duties of which he had been fulfilling for several days.

It is understood that Mr. F. H. Dobbin, who for the past 26 years has been managing director of the Review, has retired, and will cease to direct the affairs of the company as soon as Mr. Whalley is in a position to attend to them.

Mr. Whalley is a veteran newspaper man, and comes to this City from Dundas, Ont., where he was proprietor of a weekly paper.

Stock Markets

A. H. Stratton & Co., Brokers, report the following:

The market opened up strong this morning, 1-2 a point to one point above yesterday's close, showed some activity and strength up to eleven o'clock, and then became somewhat dull and strong. The leading issues showed good undertone. We find floor brokers reporting limited offerings. They agree that any bidding would raise prices smartly. The Lawson arguments against United States Steel had but little effect, and it is said that the Boston Crowd are very much "up against it" on the short side of this and other stocks.

We have reason for believing that the current dullness in the stock market is due to a great extent to a certain readjustment now going on and is regarding which we may be at liberty to speak more freely in our next report. The nature of same is not such as to excite apprehension, but rather to encourage a waiting and caution before taking a definite stand. The buying of U.P., G.Q., Rdg., and B.O., is reported good. U.S., A.C.P., and A.R., continue under room displeasure.

General Electric employees vote to strike this morning.

President Brown and Vice-President Bennet, of National Railways of Mexico, confer with local banks to consider ways to meet $800,0000 interest due Dec. 1st.

RIOTING IN DUBLIN

Violence Attends Organization of Nationalist Army

STRIKERS WRECK MEETING

DUBLIN, Nov. 26.—An Irish National volunteer force to uphold the authority of the crown and government of Ireland on the same lines as the Ulster force, of which Sir Edward Carson is the sponsor, was organized last night, but the enrollment of volunteers was attended by scenes of violence. More than 8,000 persons assembled in the rotunda at a public meeting held for the purpose of inaugurating the movement, and several thousands were unable to gain admission. Their attempts to enter resulted in great disorder and glass doors and windows were broken.

From the first it was evident that the transport strikers, who were present in large force, opposed the movement. They maintained constant interruptions of the speakers, which culminated in free fights. Sticks were used as weapons and a number of blank cartridges were exploded.

The meeting was so disorderly that it was impossible to judge of the success of the movement, but the promoters asserted that several thousand men enrolled.

LETTERS FOR VICTIMS.

Over 200 Pieces of Mail Unclaimed at Port Huron.

SARNIA, Nov. 26.—In a few more days about 200 pieces of mail now at the marine postoffice, Port Huron, addressed to sailors who vainly braved the recent awful storm on the Great Lakes, will be forwarded to Washington. All mail received for men on the lost ships that bore the sender's address on the envelope has been returned, bearing the message, "Lost in the storm. Cannot deliver."

But there is much matter with no clue to the sender on the outside, except the post mark. Some of these pieces bear the names of men not heard from since their ships were lost. There are postal cards with birthday and Thanksgiving greetings; bundles of winter clothing, and envelopes stuffed with many pages of urgent pleadings of relatives anxious to know the worst. In due time the writers will receive word from the dead letter office of the non-delivery of their messages.

TRIBUTE TO BECK.

Citizens of London Unite To Do Hydro Chairman Honor.

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 26. — London's most prominent citizens, over 500 strong, and irrespective of party affiliations, arose last night and tendered Hon. Adam Beck, chairman of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario, and the city's most distinguished citizen, one of the most memorable complimentary banquets in the history of the city. Among the speakers were Bishop Fallon, head of the Catholic diocese of London; Rt. Rev. David Williams, bishop of the Anglican Diocese of Huron, Lt.-Col. Gartshore, general manager of the McLary Manufacturing Co., Dr. Flanders of the First Methodist Church, and his worship Mayor Graham.

Appreciation of the public services of the "harnesser of Niagara" was on the lips of every speaker, Conservative, Liberal and otherwise. Hon. Mr. Beck replied feelingly. In the course of the evening he was presented with a solid silver salver containing 200 ounces of silver and a set of candelabra of four pieces.

ONE WEEK TO GET OUT.

Vancouver's "Venusburg" Is To Be Put Out of Existence.

VANCOUVER, Nov. 26. — Mayor Baxter issued an order to the police to clean out the restricted district of Alexander street. Two years ago the women located in this section, which starts within a couple of blocks from the main police station in the east end. Yesterday afternoon the police accordingly notified the residents of the section that they would have until Sunday in which to pack up and get out.

On the heels of the police went a large party of women, representing the various rescue homes of the city. They sought to call on as many of the girls as would see them, offering assistance in getting them to start in the right path and offering them homes in which to begin reformation.

The work of notification and moral salvage was hampered, however, by the fact that the doors were closed against the visitors, who merely left cards of the mission homes and then came away.

CONTROL OF BUSINESS.

It Should Be Invested In Government Says J. P. Muller.

OTTAWA, Nov. 26.—The Railway Commission yesterday afternoon resumed consideration of the western rate case and took up the exhibit filed by J. P. Muller, a Government expert. The sitting was occupied chiefly with the examination of Mr. Muller, who said often a company extended a line into a new district, and for some years it produced little revenue as the district was gradually filling up. As it grew to be a greater revenue-producer another line extended a branch to tap the same territory.

The Government should be in a position, he said, to stop such competitive extensions to existing lines by compelling the companies to get Government approval of extensions.

The hearing will continue all week.

Tons of Spoiled Turkey.

THEY ALL GOT LOANS

Various Concerns Squandered Union Life's Funds

FRUIT COMP'Y GOT $65,000

TORONTO, Nov. 26.—The floating of $785,105 worth of stock for the Union Life Assurance Co. in England in 1911 at a cost of $152,440, or 19 per cent., the circulation of a prospectus in England, which was capable of much misinterpretation by purchasing stockholders, and the extravagant loans and uses of the floated $785,105 through the numerous subsidiary companies controlled by H. Pollman Evans, were the main features of the continued investigation into the affairs of the defunct Union Life Co. yesterday.

In the afternoon, Mr. A. C. Masten, examining Mr. Evans, showed that a loan of $65,000 to the National Land, Fruit & Packing Co., of which Mr. Evans was president, was made by the Union Life Assurance Co. in November, 1911, when the actual worth of the plant and property of the National Company at that time was only $65,238.35.

"How could you advise such a loan?" asked Mr. Masten.

"I was not aware at that time of the exact assets of the National Land, Fruit & Packing Co.," said Mr. Evans, "but I based my opinion of the loan on the valuation of Mr. Harton Walker, who set a value of $110,000 on the properties."

"Is the plant at Mimico still in use?" asked Mr. Masten. When he was told that vinegar was still stored in one of the buildings of the defunct National Land, Fruit & Packing Co., the cross-examiner remarked, "Yes, full of vinegar which is maturing."

Besides the $65,000 loan to the National Land, Fruit & Packing Co., other expenditures, which went to eat up the $785,000 English flotation, were (1) $60,000 loan to the Imperial Loan & Investment Co., which has now an application standing for liquidation; (2) $340,000 loan to the Canada Provident Investment & Loan Corporation, whose assets now are largely shares in the Imperial Loan Co., the National Agency, and the National Land, Fruit & Packing Co.; (3) deposits with the Imperial Loan & Investment Co. from time to time, amounting to $44,000. The rate of interest given by the Imperial Loan & Investment Co. was five per cent.

"Did it not occur to you as head of the Union Life," asked Mr. Masten, referring to these deposits, "that it was a little dangerous to place deposits in a company claiming to pay five per cent. interest on them?"

"The Imperial Loan suggested the deposits and we agreed to it," was the answer.

The point was, as was brought out by Mr. Masten, that these deposits were paid out of the Imperial Loan & Investment Co. almost immediately they were received.

(4) $60,000 in mortgages was placed in the northwest during [illegible] ember, 1912.

The foregoing five transactions account for over $[illegible],000 of the lost money.

In order to allow E. R. C. Clarkson, the appointed liquidator of the Union Life Assurance Co., to prepare further exhibits and assemble other material from the books of the numerous subsidiary companies, which have only recently been received by Mr. Clarkson, an adjournment of the investigation until Wednesday, Dec. 10, was made by Referee Kappele.

Belgians Ask Concession.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 26.—The first bill to be introduced in the new Mexican Congress was one to ratify a concession to Europeans. The Department of Communications sent yesterday to the chamber for ratification a concession to a Belgian syndicate, to build 5,000 miles of narrow gauge railway in Mexico. This was referred to a committee.

VILLA IS VICTORIOUS

Constitutionalist Strikes Heavy Blow at Huerta's Troops

FEDERALS ARE RETREATING

EL PASO, Texas, Nov. 26.—Gen. Francisco Villa, commander of the Constitutionalists' army, in the state of Chihuahua, last night sent the following telegram to Col. Juan N. Medina, his chief of staff in Juarez: "I communicate with satisfaction that we have completely routed the enemy. We took all his artillery and three trains. The federals are in full and shameless retreat."

After twenty-four hours of the fiercest battle of the Mexican revolution, fought on the open plain along the Mexican National Railroad fourteen miles south of the border, Pencho Villa's Constitutionalist forces have successfully maintained their positions in a long battle front, effectually blocking the Federal advance on Juarez. Whether the Federals have retreated beyond Samalayuca or not is unknown. No news comes from their commanders. That Villa stands firm at Mesa is indicated by an order he sent at dark to rush another train to the battlefield for wounded. Wounded who arrived on a train into Juarez at the same hour said the Federals had drawn off to the south.

The battle was marked by an almost incessant artillery fire from daylight until night. All attempts of the Federals at flanking have been repulsed. Cannon of all sizes have been used with terrible effect by both armies. Dead and wounded men and horses are strewn over an area of several miles. Hospitals and hotels in Juarez are filled with wounded waiting permission from the Washington Government to be brought to El Paso for treatment.

A reply to the request of Juan N. Medina, Villa's chief of staff in Juarez on the local Red Cross for aid forwarded to Charles L. Magee, secretary of the American Red Cross Society, is awaited by local physicians and nurses who are ready to move to Juarez and bring the wounded to El Paso hospitals and Fort Bliss. El Paso people have listened all day to the heavy firing, fearful that the tide of battle would lap the thresholds of this city, should the rebels fail to stand their enemy off. All the United States troops in this district are massed along the river front as a precautionary measure, Major R. F. L. Michle, the commander, says: Medina has transmitted the assurances of his chief that there will be no fighting in the border town that will jeopardize American lives or interests.

Notwithstanding this, there is likelihood of a renewal of fighting today. The Federals are said to have numbered 7,000 when the engagement opened yesterday and may have been reinforced from Chihuahua City during the day.

Mexican Rebels Repulsed.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 26.—Three thousand rebels have moved eastward from Torreon. According to the War Department they attacked a federal force under Gen. Argmedo, at Gen. Capeda, about 125 miles east of Torreon, but were repulsed, 45 of them being killed.

Traffic over the main line of the National Railway, which was resumed Monday, after many weeks, has again been interrupted, the rebels cutting the line south of Saltillo.

Lind Goes To Tampico.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26. — President Wilson and members of the Cabinet discussed the Mexican situation briefly yesterday, and assurances later were given that no change in the attitude of the United States toward the Huerta Provisional Government had taken place.

Most important of the day's developments from the American standpoint was the departure of President Wilson's special envoy, John Lind, on the battleship Rhode Island with Rear Admiral Fletcher for Tampico and Tuxpan to investigate conditions, where the British oil interests have been regarded as in grave danger.

The sending of Mr. Lind is generally regarded here as an indication that the United States is extremely desirous to avert any hostile move, and that a thorough examination of the situation would be made before American marines were landed on Mexican soil.

Bribed To Shoot Detective.

TRINIDAD, Col., Nov. 26.—Lewis Zancanelli, under arrest on the charge of assassinating George W. Belcher, a detective who was shot to death on the street here on Nov. 20, has made a confession, according to Adjutant-General Chase. He implicates three organizers of the United Mine Workers of America, who, Zancanelli says, gave him $25 and promised him $1,000 more to kill Belcher.

James Moore Ends Life.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Nov. 26.—J. C. Moore, aged 31, whose parents live in Toronto, committed suicide yesterday in a rooming house at 56 Bendor street. He had just come from Prince Rupert and was suffering from an hallucination that an enemy was pursuing him. He swallowed the contents of a bottle of carbolic acid.

FLOUR RATE TOO HIGH.

Millers Want Ocean Carrying Tolls Reduced.

OTTAWA, Nov. 26.—A delegation representing four of the great milling companies of Canada, the Ogilvie, the Lake of the Woods, the Western Canada, and the Maple Leaf, waited upon Hon. George E. Foster, Minister of Trade and Commerce, yesterday afternoon, and urged that some action be taken to remove the discrimination which at present exists between the ocean freight rates on wheat and flour exported from Canada.

The members of the delegation claimed that during the past year a good export business had been ruined by the discriminatory rates in favor of the raw product charged by the steamship companies. During the past year or so steamship rates had increased from 50 to 100 per cent. The millers did not mind that, but in the same period the rates charged for the carriage of flour were from five to twelve cents per hundred higher than on wheat. This discrimination they held was heavily in favor of the foreign and British miller, who was enabled to take advantage of the low rate on wheat.

Mr. Foster said the Imperial Trade Commission was investigating the general question at present. He would, however, give the matter his most earnest attention.

Whisky Fines Total $900.

COLLINGWOOD, Nov. 26.—Fines aggregating $900 were imposed here last night by Police Magistrate Hogg on various restaurateurs for infraction of the liquor laws. The cases lasted the greater part of two days. Those included in the penalty list were: Cadillac, $300; Globe, $100; Cook's, $200; Dunbar's, $200; Baltimore, $100. Three other cases will be disposed of on Monday next.

BABY ALL COVERED WITH ECZEMA

Could Not Sleep Day or Night. Itched and Burned Terribly. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured in a Month. Also Cured Mother of Salt Rheum.

Quarryville, N. B.—"For a month after my baby was born he could not sleep day or night with eczema. He was all covered with small watery pimples which would break in a day or two and leave a humoury scab that would itch and burn terribly. He scratched so much that he made sores. His skin burned all the time and when the scab came off it left little marks like chicken-pox. At last I saw Cuticura Soap and Ointment advertised. After the first application he rested easier. I applied the Cuticura Ointment lightly and after an hour I would wash him with Cuticura Soap. After a month's treatment he was cured.

"I was greatly troubled with salt rheum on my hands. They broke out in little watery pimples and would be so itchy I could tear them to pieces. Then they would dry up and crack and bleed and when I put them in water the disease would eat in to the bones. They were so painful I had to keep them tied up with cotton rags. I could not do any work. One box of Cuticura Ointment with the Cuticura Soap cured them." (Signed) Mrs. Gratton, July 31, 1913.

Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere. For a liberal free sample of each, with 32-p. book, send post-card to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Dept. D, Boston, U. S. A.

CURE SICK HEADACHE.

"That Affair Next Door"

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

"I see, I see," he repeated with great dryness, "and I hope the jury will be satisfied. And they probably will, unless they remember the anxiety which,' according to your story, was displayed by your wife to have the whole outfit in keeping with the appearance as a working girl. If she was so particular as to think it necessary to dress herself in store-made undergarments, why make all these precautions void by carrying into the house a hat with the name of an expensive milliner inside of it?"

"Women are inconsistent, sir. She liked the hat and hated to part with it. She thought she could hide it somewhere in the great house, at least that was what she said to me when she tucked it under her cape."

The Coroner, who evidently did not believe one word of this, stared at the witness as if curiosity was fast taking the place of indignation. And I did not wonder. Howard Van Burnam, as thus presented to our notice by his own testimony, was an anomaly, whether we were to believe what he was saying at the present time or what he had said during the morning session. But I wished I had had the questioning of him.

His next answer, however, opened up one dark place into which I had been peering for some time without any enlightenment. It was in reply to the following query:

"All this," said the Coroner, "is very interesting; but what explanation have you to give for taking your wife into your father's empty house at an hour so late, and then leaving her to spend the best part of the dark night alone?"

"None," said he, "that will strike you as sensible and judicious. But we were not sensible that night, neither were we judicious, or I would not be standing here trying to explain what is not explainable by any of the ordinary rules of conduct. She was set upon being the first to greet my father on his entrance into his own home, and her first plan had been to do so in her own proper character as my wife, but afterwards the freak took her, as I have said, to personify the housekeeper whom my father had cabled us to have in waiting at his house,—a cablegram which had reached us too late for any practical use, and which we had therefore ignored,—and fearing he might come early in the morning, before she could be on hand to make the favorable impression she intended, she wished to be left in the house that night; and I humoured her. I did not foresee the suffering that my departure might cause her, or the fears that were likely to spring from her lonely position in so large and empty a dwelling. Or rather, I should say, she did not foresee them; for she begged me not to stay with her, when I hinted at the darkness and dreariness of the place, saying that she was too jolly to feel fear or think of anything but the surprise my father and sisters would experience in discovering that their very agreeable young housekeeper was the woman whom they had so long despised."

"And what,' persisted the Coroner, edging forward in his interest and so allowing me to catch a glimpse of Mr. Gryce's face as he too leaned forward in his anxiety to hear every word that fell from his remarkable witness,—"why do you speak of her fear? What reason have you to think she suffered apprehension after your departure?"

"Why" echoed the witness, as if astounded by the other's lack of perspicacity, "if she not kill herself in a moment of terror and discouragement? Leaving her, as I did, in a condition of health and good spirits, can you expect me to attribute her death to any other cause than a sudden attack of frenzy caused by terror?"

"Ah!" exclaimed the Coroner in a suspicious tone, which do doubt voiced the feelings of most people present; "then you think your wife committed suicide?"

"Most certainly," replied the witness, avoiding but two pairs of eyes in the whole crowd, those of his father and brother.

"With a hat-pin," continued the Coroner, letting his hitherto scarcely suppressed irony become fully visible in voice and manner, "thrust into the back of her neck at a spot young ladies surely would have but little reason to know is practically fatal! Suicide when she was found crushed under a pile of bric-a-brac, which was throw down or fell upon her hours after she received the fatal thrust!"

"I did not know how else she could have died," persisted the witness, clamly, "unless she opened the door to some burglar. And what burglar would kill a woman in that way, when he could pound her with his fists? No; she was frenzied and stabbed herself in desperation; or the thing was done by accident, God knows how! And as for the testimony of the experts—we all know how easily the wisest of them can be mistaken even in matters of as serious import as these. If all the experts in the world"—here his voice rose and his nostrils dilated till his aspect was actually commanding and impressed us all like a sudden transformation—"if all the experts in the world were to swear that those shelves were thrown upon her after she had lain there for four hours dead, I would not believe them. Appearances or no appearance, blood or no blood, I here declare that she pulled that cabinet over in her death struggle; and upon the truth of this fact I am ready to rest my honour as a man and my integrity as her husband."

An uproar immediately followed, amid which could be heard cries of "He lies!" "He's a fool!" The attitude taken by the witness was so unexpected that the most callous person present could not fail to be affected by it. But curiosity is as potent a passion as surprise, and in a few minutes all was still again and every body intent to hear how the Coroner would answer these asseverations.

"I have heard of a blind man denying the existence of light," said that gentleman, "but never before of a sensible being like yourself urging the most untenable theories in face of such evidence as has been brought before us during this enquiry. If your wife committed suicide, or if the entrance of the point of a hat-pin into her spine was effcted by accident, how comes the head of the pin to have been found so many feet away from her and in such a place as the parlour register ?"

"It may have flown there when it broke, or, what is much more probable, been kicked there by some of the many people who passd in and out of the room between the time of her death and that of its discovery."

"But the register was found closed," urged the Coroner. "Was it not Mr. Gryce ?"

That person thus appealed to, rose for an instant.

"It was," said he, and deliberately sat down again.

The face of the witness, which had been singularly free from expression since his last vehment outbreak, clouded over for an instant and his eye fell as if he felt himself engaged in an unequal struggle. But he recovered his courage speedily and quietly observed:

"The register may have been closed by a passing foot. I have known of stranger coincidences than that."

"Mr. Van Burnam," asked the Coroner, as if weary of subterfuges and argument, "have you considered the effect which this highly contradictory evidence of yours is likely to have on your reputation ?"

"I have."

"And are you ready to accept the consequences ?"

"If any especial consequences follow, I must accept them, sir."

"When did you lose the keys which you say you have not now in your possession? This morning you asserted that you did not know; but perhaps this afternoon you may like to modify that statement."

"I lost them after I left my wife shut up in my father's house."

"Soon ?"

"Very soon."

"How soon ?"

"Within an hour, I should judge."

"How do you know it was so soon ?"

"I missed them at once."

"Where were you when you missed them ?"

"I dont know; somewhere. I was walking the streets, as I have said. I don't remember just where I was when I thrust my hands into my pocket and found the keys gone."

"You do not ?"

"No."

"But it was within an hour after leaving the house ?"

"Yes."

"Very good; the keys have been found."

The witness started, started so violently that his teeth came together with a click loud enough to be heard over the whole room.

"Have they ?" said he, with an effort at nonchalance, which, however, failed to deceive any one who noticed his change of colour. "You can tell me, then, where I lost them."

"They were found," said the Coroner, "in their usual place above your brother's desk in Duane Street."

"Oh!" murmured the witness, utterly taken aback or appearing so. "I cannot account for their being found in the office. I was so sure I dropped them in the street."

"I did not think you could account for it," quietly observed the Coroner. And without another word he dismissed the witness, who staggered to a seat as remote as possible from the one where he had previously been sitting between his father and brother.

XV.

A Reluctant Witness.

A pause of decided duration now followed; an exasperating pause which tried even me, much as I pride myself upon my patience. There seemed to be some hitch in regard to the next witness. The Coroner sent Mr. Gryce into the neighbouring room more than once, and finally, when the general uneasiness seemed on the point of expressing itself by a loud murmur, a gentleman stepped forth, whose appearance, instead of allaying the excitement, renewed it in quite an unprecedented and remarkable way.

I did not know the person thus introduced.

He was a handsome man, a very handsome man, if the truth must be told, but it did not seem to be this fact which made half the people there crane their heads to catch a glimpse of him. Something else, something entirely disconnected with his appearance there as a witness, appeared to hold the people enthralled and waken a subdued enthusiasm which showed itself not only in smiles, but in whispers and significant nudges, chiefly among the women, though I noticed that the jurymen stared when somebody obliged them with the name of this new witness. At last it reached my ears, and though it awakened in me also a decided curiosity, I restrained all expression of it, being unwilling to add one jot to this ridiculous display of human weakness.

Randolph Stone, as the intended husband of the rich Miss Althorpe, was a figure of some importance in the city, and while I was glad of this opportunity of seeing him, I did not propose to lose my head or forget, in the marked interest his person invoked, the very serious cause which had brought him before us. And yet I suppose no one in the room observed his figure more minutely.

He was elegantly made and possessed, as I have said, a face of peculiar beauty. But these were not his only claims to admiration. He was a man of undoubted intelligence and great distinction of manner. The intelligence did not surprise me, knowing, as I did, how he had raised himself to his present enviable position in society in the short space of five years. But the perfection of his manner astonished me, though how I could have expressed anything less in a man honoured by Miss Althorpe's regard, I cannot say. He had that clear pallor of complexion which in a smooth-shaven face is so impressive, and his voice when he spoke had that music in it which only comes from great cultivation and a deliberate intent to please.

He was a friend of Howard's, that I saw by the short look that passed between them when he first entered the room; but that it was not as a friend he stood there was apparent from the state of amazement with which the former recognized him, as well as from the regret to be seen underlying the polished manner of the witness himself. Though perfectly self-possessed and perfectly respectful, he showed by every means possible the pain he felt in adding one feather-weight to the evidence against a man with whom he was on terms of more or less intimacy.

But let me give his testimony. Having acknowledged that he knew the Van Burnam family well, and Howard in particular, he went on to state that on the night of the seventeenth he had been detained at his office by business of a more than usual pressing nature, and finding that he could expect no rest for that night, humoured himself by getting off the cars at Twenty-first Street instead of proceeding on to Thirty-third Street, where his apartments were.

The smile which these words caused (Miss Althorpe lives in Twenty-first Street) woke no corresponding light on his face. Inded, he frowned at it, as if he felt that the gravity of the situation admitted of nothing frivolous or humoursome. And this feeling was shared by Howard, for he started when the witness mentioned Twenty-first Street, and cast him a haggard look of dismay, which happily no one saw but myself, for every one else was concerned with the witness. Or should I except Mr. Gryce?

"I had of course no intentionse beyond a short stroll through this street previous to returning to my home," continued the witness, gravely; "and am sorry to be oblized to mention this freak of mire, but find it necessary in order to account for my presence there at so unusual an hour."

"You need make no apologies," returned the Coroner. "Will you state on what line of cars you came from your office?"

"I came up Third Avenue."

"Ah! and walked towards Broadway?"

"Yes."

"So that you necessarily passed very near the Van Burnam mansion?"

"Yes."

"At what time was this, can you say?"

"At four, or nearly four. It was half-past three when I left my office."

"Was it light at that hour? Could you distinguish objects readily?"

"I had no difficulty in seeing."

"And what did you see? Anything amiss at the Van Burnam mansion?"

"No, sir, nothing amiss. I merely saw Howard Van Burnam coming down the stoop as I went by the corner."

"You made no mistake. It was the gentleman you name, and no other whom you saw on this stoop at this hour?"

"I am very sure that it was he. I am sorry——"

(But the Coroner gave him no opportunity to finish.

"You and Mr. Van Burnam are friends, you say, and it was light enough for you to recognize each other; then you probably spoke?"

"No, we did not. I was thinking—well of other things," and here he allowed the ghost of a smile to flit suggestively across him firm-set lips. "And Mr. Van Burnam seemed preoccupied also, for, as far as I know, he did not even look my way."

"And you did not stop?"

"No, he did not look like a man to be disturbed."

(To be continued)

FREE OF ALL THREE DISEASES

"Fruit-a-tives" Brought Him Perfect Health

AVON, ONT., May 14th. 1913.

"I am younger since I have been taking "Fruit-a-tives". I was troubled very badly with Piles, Constipation and Stomach Disorder, but I found "Fruit-a-tives" was the panacea for the whole three.

Now I am free of all these diseases and enjoying perfect health, and able to work whenever I like. Five years ago, I started taking "Fruit-a-tives". I took two every night and they worked wonders for me.

No other medicine I could get was so good and I took lots of different remedies before I found out how good "Fruit-a-tives" were.

I keep "Fruit-a-tives" on hand all the time, and am never without them. I even take them with me when I go motoring, so I can have them handy. "Fruit-a-tives" are worthy of every good word I can say about them. The fact that they cured me of Piles, was something to be everlastingly thankful for"

MABEL'S CHITCHAT

What One Woman Thinks of the Suffrage Question.

EDUCATE, NOT AGITATE.

An Up to Date Interpretation of the Old Adage, "A Soft Answer Turneth Away Wrath"—Simple Household Convenience That Saves Time.

Dear Elsa—Our woman's club had its first meeting of the season yesterday, and the guest of honor was a talker of the wordy but unconvincing sort, one who never gets anywhere except on one's nerves. The lady's subject was suffrage, and when she had finished laying down the law that ought to be my feelings were similar, methinks, to those of Henry Ward Beecher, who when subjected in his own pulpit to a like dissertation rose and in a calm, dispassionate manner said to the tired congregation, "And I still believe that women should speak in public."

Nasty remark? Yes, it certainly was. But Mr. Beecher's sense of humor, I believe, was often known to upset his manners.

You asked me in your last letter how I stood on the suffrage question. I stand, to use an Irishism, "on the fence." There is a powerful lot of talk going on among women as to whether they want to vote or not. But, do you know, it seems to me that this is hardly the question. I feel that if it is right we shall get it whether we want it or not. The real question as it appears to me is, Are we prepared to vote if we had the opportunity?

It is a tremendous responsibility we women will have to face if we do get the franchise, and if we are to do the good we are expected to do we must know how to handle the weapon if it is put into our hands.

So strong are my convictions on this subject that I have urged the club committee in charge of entertaining to ask a well known lecturer to give us a course in civil government this winter, so that we may be not only prepared for the ballot if it comes, but should also learn something of the principles upon which various governments are founded. So, dear, in a few months I expect to be a very learned lady in civic affairs. Frankly, now, I do not know whether I want to vote or not, but I do think that in the meanwhile it is better to educate than to agitate.

"The bunch," as Dick calls three or four of the girls who trot around together, were having a heart to heart talk over the teacups at our house the other afternoon, and in some way the old, old story of disagreements between husband and wife was touched upon. Louise D. surprised us all by telling her first experience of this kind and how she met it.

"When Ed and I married," she said, "we had an agreement on this point. We knew that there were sure to be times when things would not run smoothly and we'd have disagreements. We had experienced a little friction of this kind during our courtship, so we made this agreement: If an argument began or if one spoke sharply to the other about anything, no matter what, the second one was to keep perfectly quiet and not answer back. We both realized that it was not what was originally said that made the trouble, but that it was in the 'answering back,' and then, if this was committed on both sides the result was almost surely to be a serious quarrel.

"Well, we agreed to try this quiet treatment if the expected disagreement came, and, sure enough, it did come. It was over a very trivial affair, and I am sorry to say that I was the aggressor in the first case, although I have not always been the first to start it since. Ed lived right up to his part of the agreement and never said a word, and I felt so ashamed that I could have welcomed a beating. At any rate, that argument stopped just about where it began. I think Ed had the same experience the first time he was the aggressor, and he, too, began to keep a very careful watch upon his tongue. So you see our plan has worked beautifully, not only in helping us to avoid unpleasant discussions, but also from keeping us from beginning them." Not a bad idea, is it? Simply a new way of applying the soft answer adage.

Here's another hint one of the girls of "the bunch" told us about that is worth passing on. It seems that the linen closet in her home is in the hall, and as she could not have a table there she was forced to sort the wash out on the nearest bed and then carry it piece by piece to the closet. This process was both tiresome and not particularly hygienic. Some one asked her why she didn't have a hinged shelf put up. Of course Dorothy never had thought of such a thing in this connection, but the idea germinated into what has been a great convenience in sorting the wash.

A wide, thin board was hinged on to the lowest shelf of the closet, just as a leaf is hinged on to a kitchen table. When this leaf is not in use it goes down flat, but when it is needed for sorting clothes the flap is pulled out, and, with the assistance of a couple of supports underneath, it is made firm for the work in hand. It is one of the very simple contrivances that one so seldom thinks of, but are of such infinite service when found.

I am obliged to stop chattering to you and interview a prospective candidate for culinary honors. Devotedly yours, MABEL.

Edward Young's Tragedy.

In Garrick's time the church had a decided leaning toward the stage. The great actor suffered a plague of stage struck clergymen. He read many of their plays and produced at least one. The Rev. Edward Young of Welwyn parish and of "Night Thoughts" fame wrote a tragedy of "The Two Brothers," which Garrick produced. Its reception was a tragedy. It "was only fit to make an icehouse of a theater." Young, however, had counted his chickens. He had promised £1,000, the expected proceeds of his author's rights, to the Society For the Propagation of the Gospel. And here he shone. He dipped deeply into his private purse and made up the thousand.—London Chronicle.

Keep the Air Fresh.

Nothing causes chills more than hot, stuffy rooms. We often hear people complaining that they took cold when they came out into the night air. Yet it was not the night air which did the mischief, but the poisonous atmosphere in the room itself, due to the accumulated exhalations of many lungs, etc. Had the apartment been well ventilated the so called chill would never have occurred.—From "Nervous Breakdown."

FOR THE AUTO VISITOR.

Cinnamon Toast a Dainty That Is Easily Prepared.

It is the frequent experience of the cottager in the suburbs in these days to receive visits unexpectedly from friends who are touring in automobiles, and she finds that she must have something delectable for afternoon tea always on hand. First among dainties easily prepared is cinnamon toast.

Use a cooky cutter of fancy shape and cut thin slices of white bread, spread with butter, then sprinkle thickly with powdered cinnamon and sugar on one side. Put the buttered sides together, sandwich fashion, and toast. This leaves the exposed toasted sides absolutely dry, and the sandwich can thus be eaten without the use of a fork.

Another dainty in the way of a sandwich is called dream cake. This is prepared in the same way except that instead of the cinnamon and sugar a slice of dairy cheese is used as a filling, while a dash of paprika, a little salt and a bit of mustard, if desired, are added.

The combination of Boston brown bread and white bread spread with cream cheese proves also palatable to many and cut in fancy shapes is attractive as well. Chopped nuts may be mixed with the cheese when desired.

Tomato sandwiches are another appetizing adjunct to the afternoon tea table. Cut slices of white bread, but do not butter them. Cut very thin slices of tomato, being careful to choose those not too ripe, add mayonnaise or, if preferred, French dressing.

A combination of tomato, cucumber, lettuce and green peppers, all chopped very fine and made into a paste by adding cream cheese, a little oil and vinegar, pepper and salt and put between slices of graham bread, is also a delicious sandwich.

If one has soft finger rolls ready an extremely pretty way to prepare them is to cut the roll lengthwise and fill with watercress, well salted. No oil or vinegar is used in this case.

Kitchen Chat.

A preserve for which our English cousins are rightly famous is a combination of greengages and damsons. First of all, a sirup should be made of five cups of sugar, the juice of six very sweet oranges, one-half pint each of brown brandy and port wine. Cover and let simmer for an hour. Allow it to come to a boil then and add two quarts of greengages and one of damsons—the stones having been removed. One teacupful of their kernels, however, is to be added. Again the pan must be covered and the contents allowed to simmer for an hour. Remove from the fire and leave jam to stand over night in the same pan. On the following day bottle the mixture and seal. This is warranted to keep for months if properly sealed. It also makes a good tart filling.

HAD INDIGESTION.
Almost Despaired of Ever Getting Well.
When your food has not been properly digested, your body has not received the benefit it should. The exertions of the gastric juice have been confined entirely to removing the unmasticated, undigested portions of food, which they cannot properly digest as speedily as possible from the body, therefore only giving the blood a small percentage of nourishment with which to feed the tissues. No wonder then that Indigestion and Dyspepsia attack the stomach. No medicine can surpass Burdock Blood Bitters as a cure for this particular disease. It regulates the bowels, promotes perfect digestion, makes pure blood, tones the stomach, and thus restores perfect health to the debilitated system.
Mrs. Mary MacKay, Hunter's Mountain, N.S., writes:—"I was troubled with Indigestion for more than ten years. I tried several Doctor's medicines claiming the power to cure, but all without success. Having heard of the many cures effected by Burdock Blood Bitters, I decided to give it a trial. After taking two bottles I was completely cured. My appetite which was very poor, is now good, and I can eat most everything without any disagreeable feelings. I can strongly recommend B.B.B. to anyone suffering from Indigestion."

She Disguised Herself!

Extraordinary stories are told of the character and exploits of a girl desperado, the leader of a gang of eight international thieves who are in prison in France. At one time she kept a small bar in London, Eng., where she used to tell fortunes by cards. Her real vocation, however, was that of ringleader of a band of thieves, and after having to leave London she was heard of in Paris and many provincial towns, where the gang committed jewel robberies. One of the robbers was a butcher by trade, and stolen jewels often reached Paris embedded in butcher's meat consigned to his care. The girl was finally arrested, and while in prison she set to work to batter her face against the cell walls in order to change her appearance. She smashed her teeth, distorted her mouth, and damaged herself so severely that she almost succeeded in her object of rendering herself unrecognisable as the same woman.

Good Terms.

"I'm sure we shall be on good terms," said the man who had just moved into the neighborhood to the grocer.

Aeroplane Poison.

He was a wag and was a spectator at an aeroplane contest.

"That's a terrible poison that's been discovered," he remarked amiably to no one in particular.

"What's it called?" inquired an elderly gentleman beside him.

"Why, aeroplane poison, of course!" came the curt reply.

"Is it deadly?" asked the E. G.

"I should say so!" jerked out the juvenile wag.

"And how much would kill a person?" went on the questioning one.

"Oh, one drop!" came the retort.

The principal collecting stations are Bagdad, Alexandretta and Smyrna, at which places the exporters maintain offices, hydraulic presses and warehouses.

Expedition Formed to Recover Treasure Ravished by Peruvian Pirates Nearly a Century Ago

WHEN Carl Badendick, a well to do business man of No. 3 Stuyvesant avenue, Jersey City, formerly before the mast in American and British ships, hears from Mr. Jacob Polly, of Cowes, England, as he expects to do before the middle of December, he and a number of adventurous souls will leave New York on an expedition to recover several millions of dollars and much valuable silver and jewels ravished nearly a century ago by pirates from the Cathedral of Lima, Peru. This plunder is believed to be located on the Island of Trinidad, 700 miles east of the Brazilian coast, and of late years best known as the island which Baron Harden-Hickey, son-in-law of John H. Flagler, futilely tried to colonize and then intended to reign over as King James I.

Mr. Badendick, who in manner and appearance is anything but a visionary, says he believes that the Baron, who is now dead, was in reality aiming at the hidden hoard rather than the sovereignty of the island. Mr. Badendick is interested in the venture not because he heard of the story from some unreliable source but because, as will appear from his narrative below, he has visited the island himself under circumstances that lend much plausibility to his belief that the millions supposed to be hidden there are in reality there still. The Jersey City man says that he expects to head the expedition to the island and hopes to land there some time around Christmas. The island is uninhabited and belongs to Brazil. Mr. Badendick's story, as told verbatim to the writer and backed up more or less by discharges from the ships he has sailed in, is as follows:—

"In May, 1860, I shipped in the barkentine John, belonging to J. Tully, of Sunderland, England, with a cargo of coal for Santos, Brazil. After leaving Santos the crew believed the ship was bound for Bull River, N. C. At the end of eight days we arrived off an island. Captain John Pyper called us and told us we had been steering east instead of north. He told us that the owners of the ship, the Tully firm, had information that a great quantity of money and valuables was hidden on this island. The skipper was ordered by them to conceal this plan from us before, lest any of the sailors going ashore at Santos should talk about it and put the government on our track.

"Captain Pyper told us that if we were willing to aid in the search we should have our proper share of the treasure if it were discovered.

"Among those on the John was a passenger—a young man named Polly, as well as I can remember it. He was a son of a retired sea captain living on the Isle of Wight, in England. It turned out that he was to take a leading part in the search for this treasure.

"June 15, 1860, was the day we arrived off Trinidad. The captain had been told there was a place for good anchorage in the Southwest Bay, and he tried this, but the wind was too southerly to make it possible to anchor with safety. The ship kept under sail while a party was sent in a lifeboat to attempt a landing on the island. In the party were Captain Pyper, young Polly, John Adam, Fred Sweeney, John McCarthy and myself. We took water and provisions, rifles and lanterns. There was a heavy wind, and when we neared the shore we found that a thundering surf made an attempt to land the same thing as suicide.

"The island coast is a mass of huge, rocky cliffs, which are in most places more than 3,000 feet high. There are only two small patches of beach on the island. One is at Southwest Bay and the other at Southeast Bay. The former is guarded by a number of rocks, and the surf was tremendous on the southwest side when we went there. We made another unsuccessful attempt to land on the second day. Then young Polly asked the captain to take him as near the shore as possible, as he said he would attempt to swim ashore. Captain Pyper had orders from the owners of the John not to let Polly go ashore alone, and he told Polly so. Then the captain asked the crew if any one would volunteer to swim ashore with Polly, and McCarthy and I volunteered. So on the third day we were taken in the boat to Southeast Bay, and when we got in as near as was safe Polly jumped overboard and McCarthy and I followed him. All three reached the shore safely. We landed at six o'clock. Things were not at all inviting, for the shore was alive with gigantic crabs and turtles. Some of the latter, I believe, weighed at least 1,000 pounds.

"The sun had made the sand terribly hot. We had gone into the water in our underclothing, and we were obliged to take this off and bind it around our feet to protect them. The noise of the surf was so great that you could not hear a man speak five yards away. It was dark when we reached the high land, and young Polly told me it would be useless until morning to look for the marks which were to lead us to the treasure. We wandered about the island all night.

"I can hardly tell how hard a time we had. We were continually attacked by huge birds, and had to stay awake to fight them off with all. A blow from one of their wings would knock a man down. The place where the treasure was said to be hidden was a sugarloaf, a high pointed cliff on the southwest side of the island. It was not more than six miles across the island at this place, and we got to the base of the sugarloaf early in the morning. South of the sugarloaf there is a deep, dry gully, which leads some distance into the island. Polly told us we were to follow this for a certain distance, looking for marks described in papers which he possessed. We should at last come to a hole leading four feet into the base of the sugarloaf. The treasure would then be found, buried three feet deep at the end of the hole. We followed Polly some way into the gully and found all the marks as he said they would be. At last we came to a place where a large part of the cliff had given way and fallen into the gully. Polly said he believed that this covered the entrance into the hole. We had no tools and there was nothing to do but go back.

"At four o'clock in the afternoon we sighted the ship from the Southwest Bay. Polly was nearly dead. He said he would rather stay ashore and die than to try to swim out again. The ship put off a boat, but she could not get near the shore, so we swam out to a rock in the bay with young Polly and were taken off by the help of a cable.

"The captain consulted us about continuing the search, but we told him it would take a good force of men with plenty of tools and provisions, and that they ought to remain ashore at least two weeks. He decided that he could not afford the time and the risk. There was no safety for the ship as long as she remained near the island.

"For three days after returning to the John young Polly was very sick. When he got well he told us how he was connected with the enterprise.

"His father about 1877 was captain of the ship Aurea, belonging to the Tully firm, the owners of the John, and went to Callao, Peru. On the voyage home he shipped an English sailor named John Smith. This man was taken very sick when the Aurea was rounding the Horn, and found himself at the point of death. Captain Polly's young wife was aboard, and she nursed the man. He was grateful to her for her care and when he felt sure he was about to die he gave her some papers which he said would make her and her husband the richest people alive. He asked her not to look at these papers until twelve hours after his death. He died, and twelve hours later Mrs. Polly gave the papers to her husband. One of them told that Smith had been a member of the crew of a pirate during the war between Chili and Peru. The others of the crew of this pirate ship were eighteen Spaniards and another Englishman. In 1841 the pirates plundered Lima, the richest city in South America, carrying off the plate from the Cathedral and quantities of valuables that had been stored in other places. They carried away their cargo of loot to Trinidad, and were returning to Peru when a British man-of-war captured their ship. The Spaniards were hanged from the yardarm as pirates, but the two Englishmen said they had been shanghaied in Callao, and they were let go.

"Smith, according to his papers, was put ashore in Callao and worked along shore there for many years. But as he was growing to be an old man, he made his mind up to go back to the old country, and fell in with Captain Polly. Another of Smith's papers was a rough map of Trinidad showing where the treasure was hidden.

Captain Polly had to pass Trinidad on his way home, but he had not time to land. In the English Channel his ship was wrecked, but all hands and the ship's papers were saved. Polly told the story to the owners of the ship, and they asked him if he wanted to attempt the search. He said he did not, but he would let his son go some day, and it was in 1860 that the son went in the John, as I have told."

Mr. Badendick for many years said nothing about his landing in Trinidad, hoping some day to be able to go there himself and get the treasure. He has corresponded with the British government and with other people in England whose advice and assistance would prove valuable, including the surviving relatives of Captain Polly in the Isle of Wight. In 1911 he was about to leave for Trinidad when he was taken ill and for several weeks was near death's door. But having since recovered his health his desire to get the treasure he firmly believes is hidden in Trinidad has grown stronger, and he says that it is only a matter of a few weeks when he will land on the island and unearth the pirates' loot stored there seventy-two years ago.

Map of Trinidad Island, Showing Where $25,000,000 Treasure Is Buried.

Relics of Ponce de Leon.

A COLLECTION of relics, not related in any way, but each object of which is particularly interesting in itself, is that of Mr. Michael Robinson, of Shawneetown, Illinois, to whose treasures was recently added a piece of the coffin in which Ponce de Leon was buried in the old cathedral at San Juan, Porto Rico.

When the leaden coffin of the explorer was examined before it was transferred from the old cathedral to be now one it was found to be in a very poor condition. So insecure did it appear that it was decided a new coffin should be provided. The old one was then discarded and cut into pieces, which were given to persons of prominence who attended the cathedral ceremonies. Cardinal Farley, who was in charge of the celebration, gave one of these pieces to Captain O. P. Townsend, who commanded the guard of honor for the body, and Captain Townsend gave the relic to Mr. Robinson to add to his already interesting collection.

From eons and eons further back in the history of this continent comes another relic which Mr. Robinson treasures, a block of sandstone bearing the clear imprint of the human foot. It was taken from "The Rocks," a short distance from Shawneetown, but over the border line in Kentucky. It is believed in the neighborhood that the imprint is that of prehistoric man.

A third era of the continent's history, that which brings the collection down to the modern world, is represented by an old silk Revolutionary flag.

HUNTING DENIZENS OF THE ARCTIC AMID TREACHEROUS ICE FLOES

CAPTURING walrus, polar bears, brown bears, Kodiac bears, antelopes and strange birds and studying seals at short range, Captain Frank E. Kleinschmidt and his party of eighteen made their leisurely way far northward through narrow straits and difficult ice floes last summer in a three masted schooner fitted with auxiliary power.

The expedition was partly scientific and partly sporting and was unusually successful in both fields. The sportsmen brought back splendid trophies and several museums are the richer for rare specimens that Captain Kleinschmidt obtained. He is an experienced explorer, indifferent to the dangers of Arctic travel, and enthusiastic about its pleasures. With him on this trip was his wife, who was born in Alaska, the daughter of one of the first missionaries sent to that country, and their twin children, six years old.

Of the various kinds of sport which men go in search of, Captain Kleinschmidt holds that nothing surpasses the walrus. A member of the party who the year before had been after big game in Africa, where he had shot lions, giraffes, tigers and other animals of the jungle, agreed with him after his taste of the walrus chase on this trip. The element of danger in it is greater than in shooting animals that have to be pursued on land. "There," as Captain Kleinschmidt pointed out, "the man can get in his deadly work before the animal has a chance to do any damage. With the walrus it is different. It is a peculiar animal and comparatively little is known about it. You know it is practically extinct on the Atlantic coast and getting scarcer on the Pacific coast. Why, last summer over nine hundred were slaughtered for commercial purposes in the far northern waters by one company. The skin is valuable for belts and many industrial purposes, and of course the tusks are sought for their ivory.

"The walrus starts north as soon as the warm weather sets in, following the ice. We saw herds of them and pursued them to the ice floe on which they take refuge. The reason why it is so difficult to capture a walrus is that he is hard to kill and if he is injured he falls off into the water and sinks immediately. One famous experience we had was when we started to fight the walrus in the old way. We put two kayaks, skin boats, together—that makes a fine catamaran—and the Eskimos went out in it to spear the walrus, while I followed in another boat, with my moving picture apparatus all ready to take a photograph of the fight. Well, we got one. We moved out toward the ice and suddenly I saw a large cow walrus in the water, which is wonderfully clear. I called out to the Eskimos, and they prepared to spear her. However, she did not wait for them to act, but dived deep and came up under the boat, ripping it with her tusks and cutting through the sealskin leggins of one of the men, gashing his leg horribly. It was fortunate that there were the two boats, for the one was gone completely and the walrus was still diving and coming up with the evident purpose of doing more damage. She was diverted, however, by my boat and dived underneath it, but luckily came up at one side. As she was about to make an attack I fired straight into her face and killed her. She was an enormous creature.

"You can't get a walrus unless you hit it in the head, but you do not need a heavy gun. Many persons blaze away and fill the beast full of shot. A clean shot lodged in the base of the brain from a .30-caliber automatic is about right. Oh, yes, we got enough walrus to satisfy our most ambitious sportsmen and to send some fine specimens to museums in the United States."

Captain Kleinschmidt had very good luck with his bear shooting. He made a record by getting five of the rare Kodiak bears, four in one place, and he shot three polar bears standing within twenty feet of the camera. One day, when he was trying to get some good moving pictures of a bear capture, a bear swam right through the water, clambered up on the land and came forward to attack the pursuer. Annie, when he tried to capture a cub by throwing a noose over it, the mother put up such a splendid fight for it that he let it go. He wanted it, too, as a companion for another cub that he had obtained for a Western zoological park. Several very large brown bears were shot by the sportsmen of the party.

Captain Kleinschmidt pursued one, a female, with two cubs, to the mountains to which they are accustomed to retreat in order to protect their young against the polar bears, which are likely to destroy them. Here, five thousand feet above the sea, he found in a few spots bare of snow the nest and egg of an almost unknown bird, and later found the bird itself. It is called the kittlitzi murrelet. Natives tell stories of these birds that lay their eggs far up in the mountains on the snow, but they had not been found heretofore by white men. The ornithological studies were very valuable. Many persons almost wholly given over to birds were visited and the characters and habits of the birds studied. On blue foxes, some volcanic islands where there is scarcely any vegetation the birds' eggs were so thick that the visitors could hardly step without treading on them.

On this trip Captain Kleinschmidt discovered a new kind of mountain sheep. Heretofore, the further north that these animals were found the whiter they became, but this one, which lives the furthest north of any known mountain sheep, is dark colored—a saddle back. Captain Kleinschmidt got the skin and horns of one of them. The antelope, Dr. Elting, of Albany, bringing back a particularly fine head. They also took pictures of the much coveted musk ox, with seals were as amusing as they were interesting. "Do you see the master there?" he asked, pointing to a large, bold looking seal in a photograph he had taken. "That row of demure creatures are his thirty wives. Oh, yes, a good bull seal will have anywhere from four to forty wives and he makes it his business to keep them in order. Now, this fellow is on guard against other bulls that come seeking to invade his harem and to lure away one or more of his wives. They have terrific fights over the matter sometimes. The wives, too, are frequently keen on getting [illegible] and will be only too ready to [illegible] their lords and masters usually round them up and bring them back, and punish them well. One day I pretended that I was a seal, got down on my hands and knees and approached. Most of the ladies trundled off into the water, but the bull came after me aggressively. Of course, I could outrun him and was not in any real danger, but every time I came back he was ready to attack me. You know the seals are protected now and are so little molested that one can approach them quite easily.

"We passed through the straits and cruised along the Siberian coast, but it was up there that we had our worst accident. In a violent storm we lost our rudder and it looked as if we would not be able to make a port, but we finally got into a harbor. Here is how we made shift with a beam hanging over like that for a rudder and two men sitting on it part of the time to keep it down." The explorer showed a picture of this feat that he had taken. "This is the first year that I have not come back with wounds or injuries. Some of my men had some smashed members this time, but I escaped. I was reported as dead, though. That always happens.

"Among the most impressive sights in those northern waters are the icebergs, often as tall as Madison Square tower. While one is looking they will become detached and, tottering, fall into the deep, deep water. There will be a great boiling of the waters and then the sweep of a tidal wave. It is terrific. But the ice and the snow are the only things that most persons think of in reference to the country up there. They will hardly believe me when I say that I found the humming bird in that region. Grass grows sometimes six feet high and there are bushels of wild berries. It is a beautiful and fruitful country. Of course, the season is short, but when you have twenty-four hours of daylight, warm sunshine and all kinds of favoring elements you can grow a great deal in a few months. Violets, forget-me-nots and other flowers grow in profusion. It is a delightful summer resort.

"I went as far north as 72 degrees. I took no chances of getting caught, but as soon as I saw signs of ice accumulating I turned back. Four vessels got caught this fall, one of them, the Polar Star, with Harvard kids aboard. They will get along all right, though. They have sufficient supplies to last them until next summer. One boat was lost entirely. I love the north, but I was grateful to get back this year before it was too late."

Captain Kleinschmidt sent one of the bears he captured in a frozen state to [illegible], where it was skinned and is to be mounted. He also shipped frozen walrus flippers, antelope steaks and other delicacies from the north to New York, where they were kept in cold storage for the Canadian dinner.

FAMOUS HOAXERS AND HOAXES

HOAXERS exist in every profession and walk of life; they flourish in every age and clime; they ply their art either as a means of livelihood or from the sole desire to gull the credulous public.

It was the latter which incited that prince of practical jokers, Theodore Hook, to perpetrate the most audacious of all hoaxes, the Berners street hoax, that for a time roused all London to laughter and indignation.

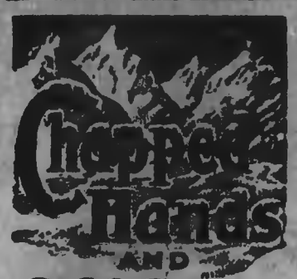
Hook bet a guinea that a certain modest dwelling in a quiet thoroughfare leading out of Oxford street would become the most notorious house in town, and set about winning his wager by addressing over a thousand letters, containing orders to tradesmen, with the request that they would at a certain hour on a certain day deliver their goods at a certain house in Berners street.

Besides the unfortunate shopkeepers, who suffered much loss through damage to their goods, others were included in the "fun." The Lord Mayor, the Lord Chief Justice, the Archbishop of Canterbury and the commander in chief were among the many victims that fell into the trap, and, duly arriving at the appointed spot, experienced most unceremonious treatment amid the turbulent and exasperated throng.

As the result of a bet between the Duke of Montague and Lord Chesterfield that the former would, by advertising an utterly impossible performance, find fools enough to fill a playhouse, it was announced that on January 16, 1749, on the Game of the Haymarket Theatre, a person would get into a tavern quart bottle, and while there sing several songs.

On the evening appointed for the accomplishment of this marvelous feat the house was packed from floor to ceiling, among the expectant audience being no less a personage than the Duke of Cumberland. For a while all sat in patient silence, but, as the curtain not rising, catcalls and whistles soon swelled to open riot. Some one now threw a lighted candle upon the stage, and a general stampede for that part of the house immediately followed, and in the melee that ensued the Duke of Cumberland lost his sword.

The papers, especially those of the Jacobite party, made great fun of this affair, and in Old England appeared this burlesque advertisement, having reference to the Duke of Cumberland's loss:—"Found entangled in the slit of a lady's demolished smock petticoat, a gilt handled sword of martial temper and length, not much the worse of wearing, with the Spey curiously engraven on one side and the Scheldt on the other; supposed to be taken from the fat sides of a certain great general in his hasty retreat from the Battle of Battle Noddles, in the fayrmarkyt. Whoever has lost it may inquire for it at the sign of the Bird and Bagging Lyard, in Bot . . . Cow."



Chapped Hands AND Cold-Sores

Are your hands chapped, cracked or sore? Have you "cold cracks" which open and bleed when the skin is drawn tight? Have you a cold sore, frost bite, chilblains, or a "raw" place, which at times makes it agony for you to go about your household duties? If so, Zam-Buk will give you relief, and will heal the frost-damaged skin. Anoint the sore places at night, Zam-Buk's rich healing essences will sink into the wounds, end the smarting, and will heal quickly.

Mrs. Yellen, of Portland, says: "My hands were so sore and cracked that it was agony to put them near water. When I did so they would smart and burn as if I had scalded them. I seemed quite unable to get relief from anything I put on them until I tried Zam-Buk, and it succeeded when all else had failed. It closed the big cracks, gave me ease, soothed the inflammation, and in a very short time healed my hands."

Zam-Buk also cures chafing, rashes, winter eczema, piles, ulcers, festering sores, sore heads and backs, abscesses, pimples, ring-worm, eczema, burns, bruises, scalds, sprains. Of all druggists and stores, or post free from the Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. Price 50c a box.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

THAT OTHER WOMAN

The frosty October day made the crackling fire on the hearth very cozy and very cheerful. They sat before it, Bob Standish and Betty Arnold, two very happy, care-free children for the time being. Standish put his fingers in his vest pocket and drew out a little case of morocco.

"I got the one I wanted, Betty," said he. "I made 'em take it out of that pendant. There wasn't another one like it."

He snapped open the cover of the case and the dancing flames burned in a thousand many coloured reflections in the heart of a perfect diamond.

Standish reached over for the girl's slim hand, but to his utter amazement she drew it back—very gently, but with a determination. Glancing up, he saw her eyes were troubled.

"Oh, just a moment—just a moment before you put it on my finger, dear," she breathed quickly. "I—I—don't know just how to say it. I'm afraid."

"Afraid?" he echoed with a boyish laugh. "Of what you dear little Miss Tease?"

"Honestly, Bob," she panted, as he would have snatched her to him. "Oh, please—just a minute—let me be sure!"

She drew away from him. Her face was just the least bit twisted as with pain—for him.

"Yes, that's just it," she said with downcast eyes. "I wan't to be certain that I am sure of you."

"Betty!" he cried, reproachfully. But still she held him off.

"I've—I've heard something," she said. "I don't believe it, but it—it hurts. It hurts till you let me know it isn't so."

He scowled. "Who's been talking now?" he said, almost harshly.

"Mrs. Malvern."

"That—that trouble-monger!"

"Bob!"

"Well, what has she been saying?"

The girl stared long into the fire. Bob Standish saw she was biting her under lip.

"I wouldn't listen to her nor believe it," she said at last. "Still I had to hear some of the things—and—and—thinking them over—the few I did hear — I'm afraid; just the weeniest bit afraid, dear. She said you were buying a whole lot of flowers every Thursday at Rondeau's — that you went away every Thursday in your car right after lunch and—and that you didn't get back until dinner time. She said you always wore your heart on your sleeve and that—Bob!" she said suddenly, sitting very straight, "tell me it isn't so. It's hurt — awfully; more than I'd admit."

His own face became very grave. He kicked back an ember that came hurtling across the hearth.

"About wearing my heart on my sleeve—that isn't so," he said. About the flowers—well, I'll have to admit them."

She looked up quickly. He wasn't looking at her. She felt some vague sense of something dreadful impending.

"Oh," she said.

"And perhaps I had best explain about them before I put the ring on," said he.

She waited silently for him to go on. She did not know she was pressing her hands tightly together.

"It's really all right, dearie," he said quietly at last. "She's an old friend of the family. Her people have met reverses. She's living on gamely, pluckily, on what was left. She isn't asking odds of anybody. I—I wanted to make it just a little easier for her. I want to think that once in a while she has a few of the things she used to have. So every Thursday I blow myself for some orchids for her at Rondeau's, and—yes, I take them to her myself, I might as well own up, for I take her for a spin in the car for a few hours—out to Milville, or over to the old turnpike to that cosy little inn at Bridgton for tea. It makes her forget. It's so very little I do and so entirely innocent. You've forgiven me already, haven't you?"

"I—I don't know," said she, rather hoarsely.

She noticed he stiffened a bit. Then he grinned, she thought to cover his embarrassment.

"She is here in town, then all the time?" she asked.

"Oh, yes."

"Is she pretty?"

He wrinkled his brows as if debating a point in his mind.

"Beautiful is a better word," said he.

Again she looked up. His face was all ashine. She turned away that he might not see how badly she was hurt.

"I don't know why I have not told you all this before," said he. "The very fact I haven't shows how lightly I thought of it. I have meant to tell you at different times, and I certainly should have told you before we were married, because I want to buy her those flowers every Thursday just the same and take her for the spin. You wouldn't mind, would you?"

She flushed beautifully. He caught the sound of a little half-frightened gasp.

"Oh, Bob, I'm afraid I do care," she said. "I'm afraid I'm not a bit broad. I'm selfish. Of course, it's very noble of you and there isn't the least bit of harm in it, still——"

"She's so plucky about it all," he said, as if in self-defence.

She tried to stop them, but two big tears slipped out of her eyes and coursed, one down each cheek.

"Suppose you come and see her with me—now, this afternoon, this minute," he said. "Then you can decide, and I'll abide by it."

"You don't understand," she said hotly. "It isn't that."

"Come just the same," said he.

She shook her head.

"Not if I insist?"

"You wouldn't."

"But I do."

She arose very proudly. "Very well," said she.

She ran upstairs. In a moment she was down again, smiling now, but very coldly, he noticed.

"Yes," he said, shortly, and opened the door.

His car was drawn up at the curb outside. He tucked her in, climbed in himself, and away they spun through the crisp autumn air with its more than hint of frost.

He did not speak; neither did she, watching the streets slip past one after another. At last they shot into the suburbs, turned in at a wide gate, flanked on either side by great stone posts, and drew up before a huge building.

He helped her out, led her up the stone steps and into a wide hall, where a smiling woman came forward to greet them.

"May we see Mrs. Horton?" Standish asked. "I know it isn't my day, but I thought she'd be glad to see us just the same."

"Glad? She'll be delighted as a child," said the woman.

Betty had clutched his arm.

"What place is this?" she whispered.

For answer he led her a few steps down the hall and pointed to a brass tablet on the wall.

"For lonely and aged women whose slender means offer them but scant comfort in the all too forgetful world they have served, the fund for this home is given by Helen P. Corlis."

Later the car whissed down the wide drive through the afterglow of a glorious October sunset.

"Isn't she a dear!" cried Betty, nestling close to Bob. "Beautiful doesn't half do her justice. I don't wonder you hesitated when I asked you if she was pretty.

"You'll let me buy her the flowers and take her joy-riding, then, just the same after we're married?" he asked.

"Indeed I won't," said she with much emphasis. "We'll buy her flowers, and we'll take her motoring, and we'll have her to dinner very, very often. Now, Bob, dear, stop the car right here, and put that ring on my finger."

A YEAR INDOORS

"For thirteen months I was so bad with chronic indigestion that I could not go out of doors. Nerves were unstrung, the heart bad and smothering feelings came on till I thought I would choke. Doctors' treatment failed me, so I began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which I thank for my present good health. I am now doing my housework and have a family of ten."

Adulterat d Lime Juice.

Chief Analyst A. McGill, of Ottawa, has been collecting samples of lime fruit juice on a large scale in Toronto for the purpose of analysis, and prosecution will follow where the gross adulteration justifies it.

Lime fruit juice is the fresh fruit juice obtained from the lime fruit, and has specific gravity of 1.030 and not greater than 1.040, and containing not less than ten per cent. of solids and not less than seven per cent. of free citric acid.

Only five samples out of the thirty collected recently fully meet the requirements of the law. Over 30 per cent. of the samples give unmistakable evidence of being adulterated with water. It is the purpose of the department to prosecute largely on the collection of samples now being taken, as warning has been given in the last bulletin sent out. Many samples taken in Toronto, some of them labelled "pure," have been found adulterated. Offenders, who are guilty in this respect, may be more harshly dealt with on conviction for manufacturing adulterated lime fruit juice.

Reindeer Have Escaped.

The efforts of the Interior Department to propagate the raising of reindeer in the Peace River country have not been attended by much success. The animals have stampeded and taken to the tall timbers.

Fifty were brought from Labrador the suggestion originating with Dr. Grenfell. It was thought they would be of utility for transportation and domestic purposes. A report just received states that twelve died en route and twenty-six broke away from the corral last year and eight this year. Only four remain.

Efforts are being made to catch some of the deserters and place them on an island.

Freaks of Nature.

Monument park, near Colorado Springs, Colo., contains some odd freaks of nature. Among the most singular is a group of light grayish-yellow sandstone pillars twenty or more feet high capped with a thin layer of dark colored rock which resemble the tops of giant mushrooms which have shriveled and partially dried up. The dark colored capping being of a much harder (ironstone) rock than the pillars has to some extent protected the latter from disintegration. Especially at nightfall is the traveler impressed with the weird effect of these gigantic and grotesque forms, which in the uncertain light assume the attitudes of huge human or animal shapes.—Argonaut.

A Life Saver.

"No," said the timid man, "I don't want any flying machines today. I'm afraid of them."

"Why, sir," said the persuasive salesman, "a flying machine might save your life."

"How?"

"You might be out riding in one when an earthquake takes place."—Washington Star.

All His Fault.

"Better lap up that split milk," said the first cat. "If the missus sees that mess you'll catch fits."

"Not me," said the second feline. "The woman I live with blames everything what happens on her husband."—Pittsburgh Post.

Much Harder.

"It is hard for one to have to live in the past," announced the melancholy man who had retired from business.

"Yes, but often it is harder to live down the past."—Buffalo Express.

Jesters must be content to taste their broth.—Latin Proverb.

A Face and an Offense.

Captain—If I see your face in my house again I shall slap it. Noble Foreigner—Ah, but it ees a punishable offense! Captain—Of course it is. That is why I want to slap it.—Judge.

Grandma Never Let Her Hair Get Grey

Kept Her Locks Dark, Thick, Glossy, With Sage Tea and Sulphur

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is mussy and troublesome. For 50 cents you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use tonic called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all grey hair disapears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant. You will also discover dandruff is gone and hair has stopped falling.

Grey, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur and look years younger.

Was Confined To His Bed For Four Months With Rheumatism.

Mr. W. H. Riley, Ruddell, Sask., writes:—"It is with the greatest of pleasure that I can recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to all suffering with rheumatism. I was so bad with this terrible disease, I was unable to get up from my bed for four months, and nothing seemed to relieve me until a friend recommended Doan's Pills. I had my doubts about them, but was so desperate I would try anything suggested to me. After taking half a box I was able to get up, and after taking two boxes could get around quite well. After taking six boxes I was completely cured, and able to work for the first time in five months, and have not had a touch of rheumatism since. Anyone who saw me then would not know me now, as I am strong and active since taking your valuable medicine."

Doan's Kidney Pills help the kidneys to flush off the acid and poisonous impurities which have collected, and thus clean out the kidneys, and dispel the rheumatism from the system.

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

If ordering direct specify "Doan's."

Irritations and Eruptions of the Skin

Besides that annoying and torturing itching of eczema, you cannot forget that, left to itself, it becomes chronic and spreads over the body.

It is wonderful how quickly Dr. Chase's Ointment affords relief from the itching and sets the healing process in action. Gradually the sores disappear and new, smooth skin takes their place.

Mrs. Nettie Massey, Canoeson, Ont., writes:—"For five years I suffered with what three doctors called psoriasis or chronic eczema. They could not help me, and one of them told me if anyone offered to guarantee a cure for $50.00 to keep my money, as I could not be cured. The disease spread all over me, even on my face and head, and the itching and burning was hard to bear. I used eight boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and I am glad to say I am entirely cured, not a sign of a sore to be seen. I can hardly praise this ointment enough."

Dr. Chase's Ointment owes its wonderful success to the fact that it positively cures eczema. Put it to the test. 60c. a box, all dealers. Sample box free, if you mention this paper. Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

ROMANCE OF PICTURE.

Alex. Crawford of Toronto Finds a Precious Heirloom.

A short notice in a Toronto magazine a few weeks ago in regard to the "Line of Mar" led to a search in an old sea chest belonging to a gentleman in the north end of that city, and the finding of a letter of January 1, 1370, from the successful possessor of the ancient title of the premier Earl of Scotland, thanking the father of the Toronto citizen for a complete list of the Mar pictures and family relics, and the impression of old Mar seals. Further search resulted in finding the list referred to, giving the names of the different members of the Mar family, whose features and figures had been emblazoned on canvas, in oil, by some of the celebrated artists of the time, such as Rigaud, Lely, Kneller, Raeburn, Jameson and Allan.

On looking at the wall of his little room in the city the gentleman referred to found hanging there a painting representing three children, which he had heard his father say over sixty years ago was by Sir Peter Lely, court painter in the reign of Charles I. and Charles II., being the picture of three children of the Mar family. If such was the case, how could such a claim be proved? The present Earl of Mar and Garioch had a bitter fight before the House of Lords, but succeeded (he being the nephew of the Earl of Mar who had fought at the battle of Waterloo), the unsuccessful claimant being given a new creation by Queen Victoria.

The owner thought it would be as hard a fight to prove the painter of the picture; but by a close examination of the oil painting his fears were dispelled, and, in place of a portrait group by Sir Peter Lely, he found himself to be the fortunate possessor of a beautiful work by Sir Godfrey Kneller, who succeeded to the title of court painter on the death of Sir Peter Lely in 1680. In 1692 William III. knighted Kneller, and in 1715 George I. made him a baronet. His best known productions are "The Beauties of Hampton Court," painted by order of William III., and his portraits of nine sovereigns, Charles II. to George I. of England, Louis XIV., Peter the Great and the Emperor Charles VI. A monument was erected to Kneller in Westminster Abbey, with a highly laudatory inscription by Pope.

Amidst a lot of old paper Mr. Alex. Crawford — for he is the fortunate owner—found a contract of 1697, betwixt Anne Noble and Potent Earl, John Earl of Mar and Thomas Bauchop, for the building of an arch to Tullibody Bridge.

The recent history of the Mar family would be interesting even to Canadians, seeing that on the death of John Francis Erskine, Earl of Mar and Kelly (whose countess was a Monteith), a claim to the earldom was advanced by a gentleman of the name of Erskine, residing near Carleton Place, claiming to be a son of the earl who died about 1866 (the countess having died some years before this claim was made). Erskine alleged he had been taken from Scotland when a baby; nothing came of this. The premier Earl of Mar was married in 1866 to Miss Alice Hamilton of Hilston Park, near Monmouth. They have an only child, a son, Lord Garioch.

A Columbus man sues for $25.000 each for four toes lost in an accident. My, what a howl that man must have raised every time he stubbed those precious toes on the corner of the library table in the dark!

Unquestionably the greatest need of the American city today is a hospital service which will not be beyond the means of the average citizen who declines to be an object of charity and who cannot pay the unreasonable charges that are now imposed for private treatment and accommodations.

Money For Harbor Works.

Thirty-five million dollars worth of harbor improvements at the different ports of Canada are now underway, and the 1914 estimates in course of preparation by the Dominion Public Works Department provide mainly for these undertakings. Mr. M. P. Davis recently signed the contract for the Quebec Dry Dock. The cost is $2,721,116.

Stamps Bought $6,749,690.

The postage stamp revenue of Canada for the first six months of the fiscal year was $6,749,690, an increase of $501,164 over the same six months last year, and $4,112,000 greater than the half year ten years ago. The September receipts increased by $128,105 to a total of $1,153,535.

BACKACHE VANISHES RHEUMATIC PAINS GO

Few Doses of Croxone Ease Stiff, Sore Swollen Joints and Muscles, Relieving Backache and Bladder Disorders

If you suffer with backache—have pains in the neck or sides—nervous or dizzy spells—a few doses of Croxone will relieve the congestion and you will be surprised how quickly all kidney, bladder and rheumatic troubles will disappear.

Croxone promptly relieves these diseases because it really does reach the real cause. It soaks right into the walls and linings of the kidneys, cleans out the stopped-up, inactive organs, neutralizes and dissolves the uric acid and makes the kidneys sift from the blood the waste and poisonous matter that lodge in the joints and muscles to scratch and irritate and acute rheumatism. It soothes and heals the delicate linings of the bladder and gives the kidneys renewed strength so they can filter the blood and keep you well.

Croxone is different from all other remedies. It is so prepared that it is practically impossible to take it without results. An original package of Croxone costs but a trifle, and all druggists are authorised to return the purchase price if it should fail in a single case.

Lord Kelvin and the Cable.

The success of the Atlantic cable was due to the calculations and experiments of the late Lord Kelvin, at that time plain William Thomson. He discovered that the current through a long cable would arrive gradually at the receiving end and devised the apparatus which rendered it possible to utilise such a current for making the Morse signals. It was through disregard of his theoretical predictions that the first Atlantic cable, in 1858, was ruined by two powerful currents. Without his mirror galvanometer to translate into visible signals the delicate impulses received through the cable the enterprise would have been a complete failure.

BLIND WOMAN WAS BURNED TO DEATH

OSSINING, N.Y., Nov. 25—Shortly after eight o'clock yesterday morning screams were heard coming from a front room at 14 Waller Avenue.

Miss Phoebe Croft, an aged maiden woman, eighty-four years of age; and living in the same building was awakened and rushed to the bedroom from whence the screams came, to find her blind sister, Mrs. Mary Hopper, sitting in a chair in the middle of the room blazing from head to foot. Heedless of the danger that her own night clothing might become ignited, Miss Croft beat the flames with her hands and endeavoured to lift a rug from the floor, but her strength became exhausted.

The old lady hobbled to the window and screamed for help, and soon drew the attention of Gus Anderson, a man who was passing the house. He dashed into the room and found the clothing had been completely burned from Mrs. Hopper's body. She was unconscious and apparently dead. A doctor was called in, who found the entire surface of the unfortunate woman's body charred, and said death probably resulted from inhaling the flames.

It is thought the woman, being blind, had moved too near a hot stove which was in the room and her dress had caught fire. Confused in her endeavours to reach her sister's room she sat down in a hopeless condition in the chair and waited.

WORK IS GOING ON

Second Ocean Rates Board Is Needed Say British Officials.

OTTAWA, Nov. 26.—The report of Mr. H. L. Drayton, chairman of the Railway Commission, who went to England to investigate ocean freight rates as affecting Canada, was made public yesterday.

He endeavored to obtain the appointment of a joint commission to make thorough and complete investigation of rates and charges of ocean carriers, insurance charges, the operation of terminal and port authorities, and ocean traffic generally.

To the proposals of Mr. Drayton, the Board of Trade replied that under the circumstances, the board, after consultation with the Secretary of State for the Colonies, felt that it would not be possible at the present time to advise his Majesty's Government to appoint a second commission representing Canada and the United Kingdom, to investigate a subject which is already being examined by the royal commission, and which body will very shortly be taking evidence in Canada.

It is stated that the alleged theft of the money occurred at Portland, Ore., whence the money came to Vancouver. The total consignment was of many thousands of dollars.

Kaffirs' Courtship.

The Kaffirs are a very light-hearted people and do not worry about the future. As soon as the girls have finished their work they may take up the igubu, which is an elementary musical instrument, consisting of a taut bow fixed to a gourd, and march across country twanging the string with a little piece of reed. The instrument, as a rule, gives but one note, but to the girl's sweetheart such music is "the food of love."—World's Work.

IF MEALS HIT BACK AND STOMACH SOURS

"Pape's Diapepsin" Ends Indigestion, Gas, Dyspepsia and Stomach Misery in Five Minutes

If what you just ate is souring on your stomach or lies like a lump of lead, refusing to digest, or you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food, or have a feeling of dizziness, heartburn, fullness, nausea, bad taste in mouth and stomach headache, you can get blessed relief in five minutes.

Ask your pharmacist to show you the formula, plainly printed on these fifty-cent cases of Pape's Diapepsin, then you will understand why dyspeptic troubles of all kinds must go, and why they relieve sour out-of-order stomachs or indigestion in five minutes. "Pape's Diapepsin" is harmless; tastes like candy, though each dose will digest and prepare for assimilation into the blood all the food you eat; besides, it makes you go to the table with a healthy appetite; but, what will please you most, is that you will feel that your stomach and intestines are clean and fresh, and you will not need to resort to laxatives or liver pills for biliousness or constipation.

This city will have many "Pape's Diapepsin" cranks, as some people will call them, but you will be enthusiastic about this splendid stomach preparation, too, if you ever take it for indigestion, gases, heartburn, sourness, dyspepsia, or any stomach misery.

Get some now, this minute, and rid yourself of stomach trouble and indigestion in five minutes.

Switzerland Expels Spy.

GENEVA, Switzerland, Nov. 26.—The Swiss authorities, after a lengthy investigation as the result of complaints made by a number of Governments, have discovered an extensive and cleverly organized international military espionage bureau here. The bureau, it is alleged, was conducted by a French ex-army captain of the name of Larguier and yesterday he was ordered expelled from Switzerland.

The expulsion order places Larguier in an extraordinary dilemma, as, it is asserted, the moment he crosses either of the four frontiers — the French, German, Austrian or Italian —he will be placed under arrest by the officials of the country he enters.

TO EAT NO EGGS.

Chicago Campaign Begins—Hamilton To Join Movement.

CHICAGO, Nov. 26.—The campaign of self-denial in the matter of eating eggs began here yesterday in an effort to reduce the price. It is estimated that 12,444 club women and their families are engaged in the movement, which has for its object the reduction of the price to 32 cents a dozen. Until that point is reached the women have pledged themselves to go without the eggs.

Fresh eggs are selling retail here at from 45 to 49 cents. Speculators are said to control the market. A year ago the women broke the price by selling eggs themselves.

Football Fans Left Goods.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 26.—Nearly $10,000 worth of valuable furs, jewels, pocketbooks containing large sums of money, hats and other personal effects repose in the vault of the Harvard Athletic Association awaiting identification by their owners. Eleventh Man Is Gone.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—The band of avengers that for eight years have hounded twelve men suspected of murdering Francisco Madenio, an alleged counterfeiter, got their eleventh victim yesterday. He was Joseph Farino, a Brooklyn fruit inspector, found dead with three bullet wounds in a vacant hallway.

Farino's death leaves alive only one of the dozen arrested in 1905 for the murder of Madenio. It was said at the time that Madenio was killed because his murderers feared he would betray them to the police. The dozen men were held for eleven months and then discharged for lack of evidence. Since then eleven of them have been murdered in various parts of the world, one in Chicago, one in Palermo, Italy, and three in Brooklyn.

If failure is but preliminary to success most of us may be excused for disliking preliminaries.

Do You Pay For It Afterward?

If You Do, Just Carry a Little Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet in Your Vest Pocket and a Big Meal Will Be Easily Laid Away.

Get away from the foreboding that every time you enjoy yourself heartily and eat a full meal, that you will pay for it afterward. There is no sense in your not enjoying every meal to the utmost. And you can do so without danger from a protesting stomach if you take the precaution always to have Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets with you. Then if you overeat, or eat something that disagrees with you as the most careful person will sometimes, one or two of these tablets will restore normal conditions in your stomach in a very few minutes.

"I Am Going to Enjoy This Meal For I Have a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet in My Vest Pocket."

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are nothing more than a concentrated form of the natural secretions which the stomach employs in digesting food. And Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets merely step in when the stomach is too tired or too sluggish to perform its functions properly and supply a sufficient quantity of these digestive ferments to digest completely all food, under either acid or alkaline conditions, in the stomach.

It has long been known that the various digestive ferments could be produced as perfectly in the laboratory as in the stomach, but Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are the first attempt outside of certain hospitals, to utilize these discoveries for the benefit of sufferers from indigestion and kindred complaints.

The perfect freedom to eat what you please and as much as you please which Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets gives, has won it thousands of friends who make it a constant, vest pocket companion. Join to-day the vast army of people who have declared their independence of stomach worries. You can get a 50c box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets from any druggist.

A Keen Creative Brain

Has value far above money alone because such a brain can win not only money, but—what money often fails to win—SUCCESS.

Brains are built—same as other parts of the body—from the food one eats.

The ordinary diet often lacks certain elements essential to the well balanced nourishment of both body and brain. Especially is this true of white bread flour, which, to make it white, is deprived of valuable mineral salts in the milling process.

Grape-Nuts FOOD

made of finest whole wheat and barley, retains the mineral salts (grown in the grain) and other nutritious elements, and thus supplies perfectly what white flour bread lacks.

This lack is often the difference between a weak body and dull, ineffective brains and the strong, keen, creative kind.

Grape-Nuts comes ready to eat direct from package—fresh and clean. Delicious with cream or good milk.

It is a concentrated, easily digested food, and as the cereal part of the usual meal has helped thousands toward a new and successful life.

PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 26, 1913

THE COUNCIL WILL INSIST ON THE CONSTRUCTION OF A SWING BRIDGE

Mr. Burnham's Communication to the Local Press Was Reviewed at Length by the City Council—Will Interview the Federal Member and Then "Hike" for Ottawa.

WAS "STARTLED"

Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., is to be interviewed by three members of the Council. This decision was recorded at a special meeting of the City Council on Tuesday evening after an hour's deliberation, in which the entire Council participated, with the exception of Ald. McIntyre. The latter was absent. The committee who has been commissioned to wait upon the Federal member in accordance with the mandatory resolution of the Council, is composed of His Worship Mayor Bradburn, Aldermen Johnston and Langford.

A Telegram.

Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., submitted the following telegram to the Council on Tuesday evening.

"Montreal, Nov. 25.

"J. H. Burnham, M.P.,
Peterborough.

"Telegram received. To move suggested hundred foot swing span from centre to west end of bridge would be most inconvenient and expensive. Two additional piers would be required and would narrow up west channel about twenty feet, costing $3,000 plus ten dollars for the one hundred and twenty-five fixed span now ready to be placed in position. Would Government be willing to assume this cost.

"F. L. WANLYN."

His Worship wired to Mr. Wanklyn last evening, asking just what the C.P.R. intends doing. A reply is expected this morning.

A Statement.

Ald. Buller, chairman of the Board of Works, and prospective mayoralty candidate, undertook single handed on Monday last to interview Mr. Burnham in respect to the government's position regarding the C.P.R. bridge, with the result that a communication was precipitated in the direction of the local press. It was this communication or "statement," to use the definition of its author, Mr. Burnham, that prompted Ald. Gordon to request Mayor Bradburn to state his attitude regarding the C. P. R. bridge, which is under the course of erection over the Otonabee river.

Was "Startled."

Ald. Gordon outlined the circumstances incident to the construction of the new bridge. He implied that the communication indicated that someone was seeking "cover," and that the Government was desirous of shifting the responsibility for the construction of a swing bridge upon the City. Ald. Gordon expressed himself as being somewhat 'startled' at the position assumed by Mr. Burnham in respect to the bridge question.

His Sole Reason.

Ald. Buller, whom Mr. Burnham referred to in his "statement" to the local press, stated that his sole reason for calling upon the Federal member on Monday last was to find out whether the Government would insist upon the C.P.R. constructing a swing bridge in place of the old stationary bridge so that the City could make similar provision in regard to the proposed Dalhousie Street bridge. The two bridges will run parallel within a short distance of each other. If the C.P.R. include a swing in their new bridge, then it will devolve upon the City to make a similar provision.

"What's the object of the Government spending several thousand dollars in dredging the channel, unless it is rendered navigable by the use of swing bridges?" inquired Ald. Johnston "It's a high-handed piece of business and I don't think there is any use in Mr. Burnham trying to shift the responsibility on to the City.

Not Wide Enough.

The responsibility referred to, concerns the Government's apparent disinclination to compel the C.P.R. to construct a swing bridge in accordance with the wishes of the Council. The Company is willing to construct a hundred foot span in the middle or easterly section of the bridge. This would provide a thirty-three foot waterway on each side of the pivot pier. The Council contend that the width is insufficient to accommodate the larger boats with safety owing to the velocity of the current at that particular point. Failing to come to some mutual agreement, the C.P.R. are proceeding with the construction of a stationary bridge. The Council claim that the Government is responsible for the maintenance of the Otonabee river as a navigable stream and that in accordance with an existing agreement, it has the power to enforce the C.P.R. to construct a swing bridge of ample proportions.

Went to Ottawa.

SUPPLIED BLACKLISTERS WITH WHISKY

Ernest Lowes Admitted the Charges and Will Spend the Next Sixty Days in Gaol

OTHER CASES HEARD

Ernest Lowes pleaded guilty to two charges against him in Police Court this morning, and as a result will spend the next 60 days in the County gaol. Lowes was charged with supplying liquor to Herbert Landry, a local young man, who is on the blacklist. He pleaded guilty, and was fined $25 or 30 days in gaol.

"I'll take the thirty days," was the prisoner's remark.

"You are also charged with supplying liquor to Joseph Reynolds, knowing he was on the blacklist," said the Magistrate.

"He drank out of the same bottle," admitted Lowes. He was fined $25 and costs, or 30 days in gaol, on this charge. Lowes expressed the fact that he was not sufficiently prosperous to pay the fine, so that he would have to take the 30 days on each charge. As the sentences do not run concurrently, he will remain a resident at Castle Nesbitt for the next sixty days.

Herbert Landry, who several days ago, was charged with being drunk while on the blacklist, came again before the Magistrate this morning. When before the court a few days ago, he told a fairy story of meeting a stranger on Aylmer street, who gave him the liquor. He was therefore remanded for a week. This morning he was fined $10 and costs.

Joseph Reynolds was arrested the same day that Landry was. Reynolds invented a narrative about Paddy O'Shea giving him two bottles of whiskey. The only reward for his fiction was a remand for a week. This morning he was fined $10 and costs.

"I wish to call yor Worship's attention to the evidence given by Reynolds the other day," said the Chief. "When he swore that he did not see Lowes the day he was drunk."

"Yes, that is perjury," was the Magistrate's reply.

Roland Hill, while under the influence of liquor, established somewhat of a record between here and Lakefield yesterday. He left the city at 4:30 o'clock, drove to Lakefield where he transacted some business, and was back in the city at 6:30 o'clock. This means that he covered the 20 miles in somewhat less than two hours. Had he not collided with two or three other outfits on his return to the city, and created a brief reign of terror on the main streets, Hill might never have been arrested, and the world in general would still be in ignorance of his achievement. But fate decreed otherwise, and overlooking his turf accomplishment, Magistrate Dumble fined him $5.75 for being drunk in charge of a rig, to which charge Hill pleaded guilty.

Edward Kimble, a blackliater, should have appeared to answer to a charge of being drunk. He did not, so the case was enlarged until to-morrow.

The Employed Boys' contest between the Grants and Rovers was won by the Grants, 14 to 4.

The Senior League game for to-night is Saw Bones vs. Financiers.

THE CITY COUNCIL DECLINES TO ESTABLISH PRECEDENT BY RECOGNIZING CHURCH AFFAIRS

Rev. James Price Makes Application For a Civic Reception--"Let the Honest Ratepayer Shovel His Own Snow"--Council Voted $100 to the Lakes Disaster Fund--Outbreak of Typhoid Fever.

The Rev. Jas. Price of St. George's Anglican Church waited upon the City Council on Tuesday evening, with a view of ascertaining whether the Council would tender the Hon. Sir John M. Gibson and Lady Gibson a civic welcome. The distinguished visitors will officiate at the formal opening of the Grand Bazaar, which is being held in the Armouries on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week.

"If we undertake to give the visitors a fit and proper reception, it will resemble a village tea party. If you do it," said Mr. Price, addressing the Council, "it will be a state affair."

The Mayor objected to this procedure upon the grounds that it would establish a precedent, if the City commenced to recognize Church affairs.

"You can't get the Lieutenant-Governor every day," countered Mr. Price.

On motion of Ald. Buller and Duffus the matter was left in the hands of Mayor Bradburn and the Reception Comitte of the City Council.

Mr. Price obtained permission to put up a streamer across George Street.

The Honest Ratepayer.

The snow-ploughing by-law was given its third and final reading. "Let the honest ratepayer get out a little earlier in the morning and shovel his own snow," was Ald. Gordon's comment.

Voted $100.

The sum of $100 was granted to the Lakes Disaster Fund. Doubt existed in the minds of some of the Aldermen as to the actual amount of money that was devoted to the aleviation of the sufferings of the widow and orphans. Ald. Green opposed the grant on general principles.

Ald. Gordon's legal mind evolved the possibility of holding the Shipping Companies liable, as the wrecked ships in nearly every instance had left the harbours with the storm signals opposed to them.

Deputations.

Messrs. Morrison and Penrose waited upon the Council with the request for a number of improvements in the neighbourhood of Bolivar and Sherbrooke Streets. The desired improvements include the diversion of a water channel, the construction of a crossing on Sherbrooke Street, between Park Street and the boundary and the construction of the proposed new street on the west side of the property recently acquired by the City for that purpose. The Council promised to visit the locality and ascertain the need for the proposed improvements.

Outbreak of Typhoid.

The Council recommended the installation of a water service on McDonnell Street, west of Park Street. An outbreak of typhoid fever was reported from that district recently. It was attributed to a number of wells that were believed to have been contaminated. A petition, signed by a number of Walton Street residents, was referred to the Board of Works. Also the matter of settling the differences between David Conroy and City, in respect to the Romaine Street sewer.

Wants Recognition.

Mr. C. E. Adams wants to know whether the City will recognise his claim for damages alleged to have resulted to his property in East City as the outcome of the construction of a railway siding.

The matter was referred to the Legal Committee.

The Vermont Marble Company, through their solicitors, Peck, Kerr and McElederry, have applied to the City for a conveyance of the property now occupied by the Company. The conveyance will be executed as soon as the necessary arrangements can be made.

Those present at the meeting were His Worship Mayor Bradburn, Aldermen Anderson, Langford, Johnston, Green, Duffus, Gordon, Gillespie, Duncan and Buller.

Alterations At The Royal

Will be Made Big Enough to Accommodate 1100 People

A Toronto architect is here just now looking over the Royal Theatre with a view to arranging the plans for the alterations which Manager Clayton proposes to carry out. The architect states that the Royal has the same frontage as the Strand Theatre in Toronto and can be made a prettier theatre than that well known amusement place. He estimates that he can provide accommodation for 1,100 people. The Royal will, of course, have to be closed while the alterations are under way.

NO HOPE FOR SETTLEMENT AT PRESENT

Examiner Special:

SCHENECTADY, N.Y., Nov. 26.—There seems to be no hope for an immediate settlement between the General Electric strikers and their employers to-day. Pickets are guarding the shops, and there were some minor riots about eight o'clock this morning.

LIVERY STABLE FIRE GAVE FIREMEN AHARD BATTLE

Jas. Akey's Barn Gutted Last Night By Fire That Broke Out in the Loft—Will Continue Business in Same Place.

ONE MAN INJURED

Jas. Akey's livery barns on Chambers street were gutted by fire which broke out in the hay loft last night at ten o'clock and swept through the upper storey giving the brigade one of the most stubborn battles with which they have had to contend in a long time. Mr. Akey lost all his hay and oats, but rescued his stock, harness and vehicles.

Mr. Fred Rishea, of the Examiner press room was eating his lunch at ten o'clock when he noticed flames shooting from the upper part of the barns, and immediately ran across Chambers street to the barns, and rushing into the office asked Mr. Akey if he knew his barns were on fire. The latter immediately called the fire station and running out into his stables saw at a glance that to fight the fire was out of the question. He began opening the gates of the stalls and leading out the horses.

The floor of the loft was on fire in a number of places and sparks were falling into some of the stalls. Mr. Akey was struggling against time, and fortunately a number of citizens rushed into the place and joined him in the work. Mr. Jas. R. Bell got eight of the horses out and worked at top speed. It looked for a time as if the fire would stop the rescue work, but no one ceased working until every stall was emptied and the harness and buggies out on the street.

There was nothing slow about the way that Messrs. Akey, Bell, Frank Eano, and others cleaned the barn of moveables. And it all happened in only two or three minutes, so far had the fire advanced before it was noticed. In addition there was a very strong wind which fanned the flames at a great rate.

The loft had been recently filled with hay for the winter's use and was a raging furnace by the time Chief Howard's men turned the water into it. Chambers street was a flue for the smoke from the building, and dense clouds filled it. Sparks were carried through the air to the north and east, and the situation looked serious for a time.

Mr. Akey's Story.

To an Examiner reporter Mr. Akey stated this afternoon that he had no idea of the origin of the fire unless it started from a switch in a wiring circuit. He was sitting in his office at his books. Mr. C. Fleetwood was with him. They heard one of the horses pawing and Fleetwood went out to see what the trouble was, and on opening the door between the barn and stable saw that the loft was on fire. Mr. Akey called the Fire Department and immediately ran out and began bringing his horses out.

Mr. Harry Graham, the only one injured in the fire, was in the barn when a reporter arrived on the scene. His hand was cut and his clothes and general appearance intimated that he had received a scorching. He was taken to Dr. Carmichael's office where he received medical treatment.

Mr. Akey lost five single and one double sets of harness that were upstairs in a box, but saved all his buggies and horses and the harness that were on the pegs in the stable.

The hay in the loft is practically useless. Mr. Akey will continue to do business in his present stand and his friends will be pleased to know that his loss is slight in comparison to what it might have been.

"If I hadn't been here, I guess I would have lost everything," Mr. Akey stated.

At his home, on Water Street, it was stated to-day that Mr. Graham was resting easily and that his burns were not considered serious.

Among those who joined the firemen in the fight were Al. Spenceley, Captain of the De Laval Fire Brigade, who had three of his men assisting him; Ald. Duffus, who is an honorary member of the Department, and Adjutant McKibbenny of the Salvation Army.

The barn is the property of the Bradburn Estate. Mayor Bradburn estimates the damage at about $1000, which is covered by insurance.

C. G. E. WILL SPEND $150,000 IN EXTENSIONS

Providing the City Will Concede the Right to Construct One Mile of Electric Railway Track

FOR TESTING PURPOSES

That the Canadian General Electric Company is prepared to expend $150,000 in extensions, providing they receive from the Council permission to construct one mile of track, was revealed to the City Council on Tuesday evening. The Company has recently secured a numbr of large contracts for the construction of electric locomotives. Owing to the lack of testing facilities at the Peterborough plant, the contracts in question have been turned over to the parent firm, which is located at Schenectady, N.Y. The Company is desirous of manufacturing electric locomotives in Peterborough. In order to achieve this purpose it would be necessary to have at least one mile of trackage for testing purposes.

A Suggestion.

The matter was brought to the Council's attention in the form of a communication from Mr. Frederic Nichols, General Manager of the Canadian General Electric Company. Mr. Nichols suggested that the track be constructed on the west side of Monaghan Road, running from King Street to the C. P. R. tracks.

The track would only be used on occasions when it was necessary to test the locomotives.

Ald. Duncan suggested that a portion of the abandoned G. T. R. track north of the Margaret Cox Home, be utilized by the Company for the purpose required.

The Council decided to look over the ground in company with Mr. W. G. Howden of North Monaghan and report back at the next meeting of the Council.

BASKET SOCIAL WAS A SUCCESS

A very successful basket social was held last evening in the schoolroom of St. Luke's Church, under the auspices of the Girls' Auxiliary. A large number was present and an exceedingly pleasant time was spent. The Rector, Rev. F. J. Sawers, M.A., occupied the chair, and introduced the following numbers.

Piano solo—Miss K. Leary.
Vocal solo—Miss E. Adams.
Decitation—Miss Kathleen Vincent.
Vocal solo—Mrs. James McDonald.
Veal solo—Mr. F. Henfield.
Piano solo—Miss Lillian Calder.
Reading—Miss Clara Adams.
Vocal solo — Master Sam Whitehouse.

Following the programme, the baskets, creations of the most artistic beauty, were offered for sale. Mr. Sid Gibbs acted in the capacity of auctioneer, performing his duties most creditably. A considerable sum was realized in this way from the sale. The contents of the baskets, consisting of a choice and varied assortment of dainties, were greatly enjoyed by the buyers and the fair donors of them.

The singing of the National Anthem brought to a conclusion a very happy evening.

Conductor of St. George's Choral Society which gave its annual autumn concert last evening.

PHOTOGRAPH OF G. C. E. SWITCH BOARD DEPT

A very interesting and artistic group photograph of the members of the Switch Board Department of the C.G.E. has just been completed from the Orme Studio, Charlotte street. The twenty-five itndividual pictures were photographed cabinet size and afterwards reduced and carefully arranged for an equal number of pictures 11 by 14. The sitters were delighted with the life-like likenesses and the skillfully arranged grouping.

DENY AND DISPROVE.

Mr. Rowell reiterates again in East Middlesex that the Whitney government and the liquor interests are allies—that the latter made two contributions to the Conservative campaign fund in the previous East Middlesex bye-election. He says that if any member of the government will deny this statement, he will move in the House for an investigation, and will prove it is true. The government cannot afford to ignore so serious a charge. They must deny and disprove it—if possible.

A NEW DEPARTURE.

Those in Peterborough behind the Laymen's Missionary Movement are taking a leaf out of the book of the worldly-wise. The appearance of the Laymen Missionary advocates in the advertising columns of The Examiner is not to be regarded as an exhibition of unfaith in the ordinary medium of appeal—the pulpit, etc. It is a frank recognition of the power of the press; of the benefit of judicious advertising, which is evidently considered capable of being made as effective in moral as in business enterprises; if indeed we can disassociate missionary propagandism from business. Business and Christianity are closely associated. Our blessed Lord felt the compulsion, "To be about my Master's business," and the Laymen interested in the business of Gospel propagation cannot do better than resort to effective promulgation of the claims of the mission enterprise upon all Christians. This exercise of the wisdom of the serpent on the part of the laymen is certainly a new departure. It is perhaps the first instance of the direct commercial employment of the press through its advertising pages, to the promulgation of religious appeal. The advertisements of the Laymen, which will appear in The Examiner during the present week are commended to all interested in the Laymen's Missionary Movement; and more specially commended to those not now interested; for the arguments they contain may well appeal to the indifferent or hostile to one of the characteristic impulses of the age, and perhaps arouse a now dormant or absent interest.

CANADA CAN DO THINGS.

Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, somewhat superciliously declared Canada's incapacity for building ships. He, perhaps, got his inspiration from Mr. Borden, who said Canada would not be capable of building ships within twenty-five or fifty years. Both are wrong. A despatch on this page describes the interest excited at Port Arthur by a trial trip of what is described as the finest ship on the Great Lakes. It did not take 25 or 50 years to build this ship in a Canadian shipyard—its keel was laid on October 24th, 1912, and it was launched on June 2nd, 1913. The whole is the product of Canadian material shaped by Canadian workmanship. If, in the course of ordinary business enterprise, Canada can do so well in shipbuilding, is it not certain that with specially equipped ship-building yards, Canada could, in the beginning build most of the ships needed for a Canadian fleet unit, and with experience, and in a short time, be able to build any sort of craft demanded?

We need the Canadian statesmanship that has faith in Canada and her resources and capacity for achievement. If Sir John Macdonald, a generation ago, had had so little faith in Canada's capabilities we should have had no Canadian Pacific Railway—built by Canadians. If Sir Wilfrid Laurier, a dozen years ago, had Mr. Borden's little faith we should not have now had the second transcontinental railway — built by Canadians. If the builders of the Canadian Northern had been of the shrinking, hesitating, halting mind of Mr. Borden, we should not have had the now almost completed, the third transcontinental railway—built by Canadians—all monuments to Canadian enterprise and capability, and all destined to prosperous operation in the development of the practically inexhaustable resources of Canada. If Canadian statesmen of the past had had the unfaith of Mr. Borden we should not have had the most splendid system of canal transportation in the world—built by Canadians.

Mr. Borden is self contradictory. In continuing the great work of Welland Canal enlargement he is making Canadians do a far greater work than building Dreadnoughts. If he were logical, he would hand over the fifty million the enlargement will cost, to the Mother Country, to expend for us. Nothing could be more craven than Mr. Borden's attitude towards the ability of Canada to build warships, nor anything more brazen than Mr. Churchill's declaration to the same effect.

Borden Policy Denounced As Centralization

Comparison of statements by leading Imperialists in Great Britain and of Mr. Borden in Canada leads irresistibly to two conclusions—that Mr. Borden is absolutely wrong in his centralizing naval policy and that his whole trend of thought is of a reactionary nature, repellent to the mother country as well as to Australia, New Zealand and South Africa. Mr. Borden has out-Toried the Tories in his anxiety to get back to conditions which made the Family Compact a name of evil repute in Canada.

Mr. Richard Jebb, the famous English naval and imperial authority, on November 4th, issued an appeal to the British admiralty to abandon "Its present policy of naval centralization and return to the plan of well organized co-operative alliance as laid down in the admiralty memorandum to Sir Wilfrid Laurier in 1909."

Proceeding, Mr. Jebb says: "Free choice for Britain and compulsory choice for the Dominions. Is that their prescription for securing unity of the Empire until federation? The difference between 'may' and 'shall' is just the difference between the late liberty which made and sustained the present Empire and the new intolerance which by the abuse of loyalty would turn the Dominions into subject countries."

Admiral W. H. Henderson—"Until Imperial federation is secured, which will, I think, take much longer than ten years, the only form of naval policy under existing conditions which the motherland and her daughter nations can adopt must be on the lines undertaken by the Australian Comomnwealth. . . the question is one of 'no taxation without representation,' by ignoring which we lost the American colonies."

Admiral Freemantle . . . "The admiralty at the request of the Commonwealth sent out Sir Reginald Henderson to confer with the Australian government, and his proposals, though thorough and entailing heavy expenditures, were accepted by all parties, and were carried out by the Labour government loyally, so that the Australian unit is now in a fair way to completion while suitable defence and training establishments are being established. Surely this is an object lesson in the right course to adopt, and the enthusiasm of naval defence in the commonwealth is in strong contrast to the unfortunate political difficultips (in which Premier Borden has been involved in his endeavours to meet the Admiralty's views."

In the light of these statements how wide of the mark are the words of Premier Borden, on the closing day of parliament. . . "In view of the fact that these proposals were made by the Government of Canada upon information which they had received from the British government through the Admiralty, which they regarded as disclosing grave conditions, it may be possible in the future to make right that which has been made wrong at the present . . . it is the firm intention and determination of this government. . . to bring down at a later date proopsals for the acquisition or corstruction of three battle-ships as was proopsed in the Naval Aid Bill of 1912. . . Canada will take over and pay for and acquire these ships and will place them at the disposal of His Majesty the King."

CANADIAN BUILT FINEST ON LAKES

PORT ARTHUR, Nov. 24. — The giant steamer Noronic, 385 feet long, the finest ship on the Great Lakes, plowed the waters of Thunder Bay and Lake Superior for the first time when at 2 o'clock this afternoon she left the Port Arthur drydock for a two and a half hours' tour about the bay to allow the adjustment of her compasses by Captain Morrison of Sarnia.

She will load flour at Fort William and leave for Sarnia, to be delivered by the drydock company to her owners, the Northern Nuvigation Company.

Thousands of people looked on as the big steamer cruised around the bay this afternoon.

The keel was laid October 24, 1912. She was launched June 2, 1913. The rapid construction reflects a great deal of credit to the local shipbuilding plant, Canadian workmanship and Canadian material.

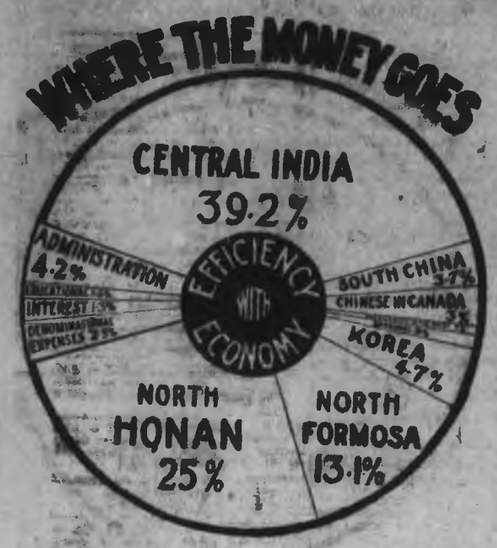
How Much of the Money Given for Missions Ever Reaches the Foreign Field?

Does It Not Require $9 to Send $1 Abroad?



The Expenditures of the Presbyterian Church on Foreign Missions

¶ There is a general impression that mission funds are handled inefficiently — that it takes a lot of money to send mission funds abroad.

¶ The facts are: Few, if any, business enterprises are handled as economically or obtain as large returns for the money expended as do our Home and Foreign Mission Boards.

¶ Note the two diagrams on this page: The smaller one shows how the money spent by the Presbyterian Church in Canada for Foreign Missions is apportioned. This church has been made responsible for conducting the work of evangelization in certain mission fields. Other denominations are responsible for other mission fields. Thus the work has been organized and placed on a business basis. Overlapping is thereby avoided. Note that out of every $100 raised for foreign missions only about $9.00 is required for all purposes not directly missionary in character and that only $4.2 is required for purely administrative purposes.

¶ The large diagram to the right shows how the money raised for both home and foreign missions by the Church of England in Canada is expended. Note that only $4.5 dollars is required out of every $100 raised for purely administrative purposes, and that $90.2 out of every $100 goes direct to the mission fields. That record speaks well for the manner in which missionary funds are handled.

¶ The great Methodist and Baptist denominations have records that are equally creditable.

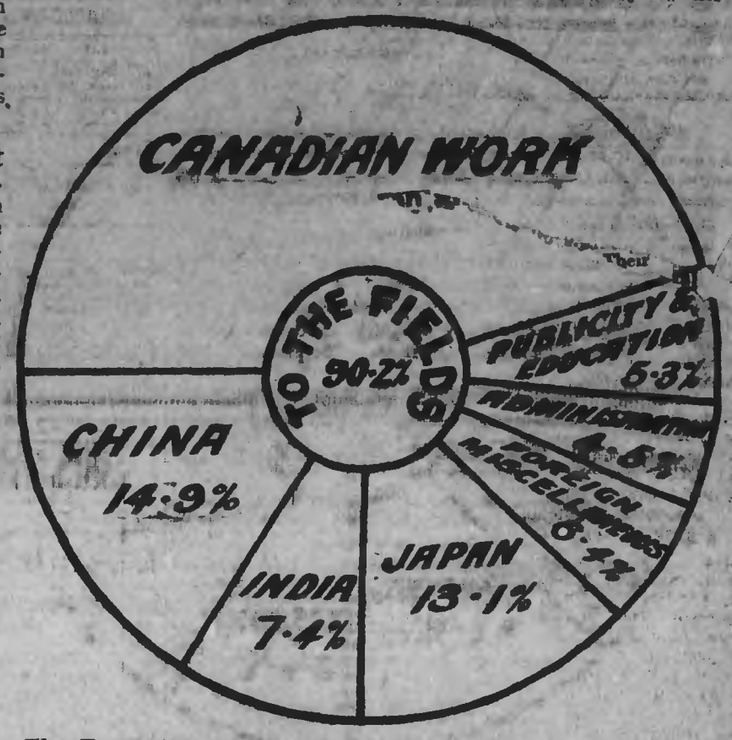
MOST OF THE MONEY IS SPENT AT HOME.

¶ Some people have an impression that Protestant churches spend most of the money they raise for missions on the foreign fields. The reverse is the case. Note once more the large diagram. This shows that 48.3% out of 90.2% is spent on the Canadian mission fields. In addition large sums are spent in Canada on the colleges and for other special work connected with the church the expenditures on which are not included in those dealt with in the diagram which refers to home and foreign missionary expenditures only.

¶ The Methodist Church in Canada expended last year $384,253 on home missions and $297,982 on foreign missions, not including some special expenditures for hospital purposes. In addition several hundred thousand dollars was spent for special work in Canada by the home church.

¶ The Baptists of Ontario and Quebec alone last year gave to home missions $122,446, foreign missions $75,628.25.

¶ Out of $1,200,000 apportioned by the Presbyterian Church in Canada for work this year, $325,000 was set apart for foreign missions, $425,000 for home missions and $450,000 for other work connected with the home church in Canada. Thus the work of the home churches is not being neglected



The Expenditures of the Church of England in Canada on Home and Foreign Missions

GENERAL SIR CHARLES WARREN, Governor of Natal: "For the preservation of peace between the colonists and natives, one missionary is worth a battalion of soldiers."

SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, Governor of Cape Colony: "I have relied more upon the labors of the missionaries for the peaceful government of the natives than upon the presence of British troops."

LORD JOHN LAWRENCE, Viceroy of India: "Notwithstanding all that the English people have done to benefit the country, the missionaries have done more than all other agencies combined."

APPEAL IN LOCAL CASE DISMISSED

The appeal of Edward Sanderson against the decision of His Honour Judge Huycke, in the case of Sanderson vs. Gillespie, heard in Toronto yesterday, was dismissed with costs.

Mr. J. G. Smith of Toronto, appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. F. D. Kerr, for the defendant.

It will be remembered that on the 11th of June, the case came before His Honour Judge Huycke, in the County Court here. In the case Sanderson claimed the sum of $250 from Mr. George A. Gillespie. Mr. Gillespie had bought the Sanderson farm, and also arranged to buy the stock of the farm on the 1st of March. Mr. Sanderson, however, was to remain in charge of the farm and stock until Mr. Gillespie's brother returned from the west. An agreement was signed to that effect, but in it nothing was said as to who should be responsible for the lives of the stock until March 1st. Before that date one of the horses was killed in an accident, and Mr. Gillespie refused to pay for the animal, which was valued at $250.

Mr. Sanderson contended that as Mr. Gillespie had given him notes for the money, he was owner of the horse when it was killed, and entered suit for the $250.

The defence claimed that it was through Mr. Sanderson's negligence the horse was killed. This was upheld by the judge, who refused to allow the plaintiff's claim. Mr. Sanderson appealed against the judgment of the court but the appeal was dismissed in Toronto yesterday.

MINERS ARE ACQUITTED

Special Wire to The Examiner.

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C., Nov. 26.—Two of the one hundred cases against the striking miners were ended here last night with a verdict of not guilty, which was received with an ovation and cheers in the courtroom.

ALD. BULLER WILL ENTER THE CONTEST

Ald. W. H. Buller has signified his intention to enter the mayoralty contest. He will be opposed by Ald. G. A. Gillespie. This move will leave a vacancy in both the centre and south wards and will ensure at least a couple of new faces on the Council Board of 1914. Mayor Bradburn, who has declined to enter a mayoralty contest, will in all probability retire in view of the present trend of events.

A TREAT FOR MUSIC LOVERS

Mr. Rupert Gliddon, director of the Peterborough Conservatory of Music, and Mr. G. C. Wainwright have completed an engagement by which the music-lovers of Peterborough will be afforded an opportunity of hearing Miss Florence Hinkle, the famous American soprano, who for the past three years has been the soloist at the concerts of the Mendelssohn Choir in Toronto. Miss Hinkle will appear here in the Grand Opera House on January 16th in conjunction with the orchestra of the Conservatory of Music. Miss Hinkle is an artist of the first rank; she has been associated with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Philadelphia Orchestra, has toured with the Theodore Thomas Orchestra of Chicago and the New York Symphony Orchestra. She has sung in oratorio with the New York Oratorio Society, and has appeared in concert engagements all over the Continent.

WILL ACT AS ARBITRATOR

Hon. Wallace Nesbitt, of Toronto, has been retained by the Peterborough Light and Power Company to act as arbitrator in the arbitration proceedings between the City and the company. Mr. R. A. Ross, of Montreal, has been retained by the City to act in a similar capacity.

CABINET CHANGES TO BE HELD OVER

Examiner Special:

OTTAWA, Nov. 26.—Owing to the forthcoming bye-elections it is understood here that the proposed Cabinet changes and Upper Court Judgeship have been laid over till after the New Year. Among the Ontario men affected by the postponment is E. A. Lancaster, M.P., for Lincoln, who, it was expected, would receive a judgeship.

CHICAGO IN DARKNESS AT THE NOON HOUR

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 26.—This windy city was to-day a city of midday darkness, for at noon all street cars had to move about with headlights, gleaming to present collisions. There were several accidents even at that. The weather experts said that the inky darkness was caused by a low barometer pressure combined with Chicago's famous smoke. It is expected that showers this afternoon will give relief.

MOTOR CARS COLLIDE AND FOUR ARE KILLED

Examiner Special:

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—Leonard Cohen, a prominent merchant; Thomas F. Dennie, member of the New York State Legislature, and two unidentified young women were instantly killed and another young woman named Stella Nelson is to-day dying as the result of two motor cars, going fifty or sixty miles an hour on Pelham Park way, crashing together just after midnight. The other occupants, including the drivers, are dangerously injured and will be maimed for life. The machines came together when each turned out to pass the other. Cohen's wife, who is in Pittsburg, collapsed when she heard of her husband's death.

SUBJECT TO BE GIVEN SPECIAL ATTENTION

From His Honour Sir John M. Gibson, Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario.

To the People of Ontario.

The Honourable, the Minister of Education for the Province of Ontario, has recommended that on Friday, November 28th, the trustees and principals of all the schools throughout the province shall call special attention to the subject of tuberculosis and the imperative duty of combatting and, within the shortest possible time, wiping out the disease from amongst us.

The Ministerial Associations of Toronto and the Churches of the Province have set apart November 30th as Tuberculosis Sunday. In probably 1,000 Churches throughout Ontario special reference will be made on that day to the effetcive work being odne by the National Sanitarium Association, in their thoroughly equipped institutions in Muskoka and Weston, as well as by other associations and agencies, toward prevention and cure of tuberculosis.

This wide-spread campaign should be most influential in intensifying the already deep interest in the battle for stamping out the white plague. Having intimate knowledge of the work being done by, and the plans for the future of, the National Sanitarium Association, I do not hesitate to urge and exhort the Ministers of every Church, and the Trustees and Principals of every school throughout the Province, to give their heartiest co-operation on these special days, looking toward the early defeat of this dreadful though vulnerable foe.

J. M. GIBSON,
Government House,
18th November, 1913.

ADDRESSED MEETING ON "THE PLANETS"

The regular meeting of the Royal Astronomical Society, Peterborough Centre, was held in the Physical Laboratory of the Collegiate Institute last night. The president, Mr. T. A. S. Hay, president at the meeting.

Master Hubert Cowan, son of Mr. H. B. Cowan, was made a member of the society.

A very entertaining lecture on "The Planets," was given by the Rev. D. Marsh. Although it was intended particularly for those beginning to study astronomy, it was listened to with the closest attention by all present. Dr. Marsh dealt with the planets Mercury, Venus, Mars and Saturn, and the physical features of each planet were clearly outlined on the screen with the aid of lantern slides. The lecturer gave an interesting explanation of the laws that govern the various planets.

At the close of the lecture the Rev. Mr. Goodwill, of Keene, spoke in complimentary terms of the lecture. As Dr. Marsh will soon be leaving this centre of the society, a unanimous invitation was extended him to give an address at the annual meeting, which will be held about the middle of December.

The society was found to be in a flourishing condition, every branch of its work framing up well for the annual meeting next month.

It was moved that the best wishes of the Society be extended to Dr. Marsh for every success in his new sphere of labour. Dr. Marsh made an appropriate reply thanking the members for their kindness and expressing his appreciation of many associations with the local society.

WHY DRUGGISTS RECOMMEND

Vinol for Run-Down People.

If any one person should know the value of medicines it is the druggist who dispenses them and from our experience we want to say if people in this vicinity only knew the value of Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic (without oil) at this season of the year, we would not be able to supply the demand.

This is because Vinol is a combination of the two most world famed tonics, namely, the medicinal curative elements of cods' livers without the oil, and iron for the blood.

Vinol tones up the digestive organs, purifies and enriches the blood, promotes healthful sleep and a normal appetite.

Old people, delicate children, rundown, overworked and tired women, should try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that your money will be refunded if it does not help you.

THE COUNCIL WILL INSIST, ETC.

duced the correspondence which passed between Hon. Robert Rogers, Minister of Public Works, Mr. Wanklyn, Assistant to the Executive of the C.P.R., and Mr. J. H. Burnham in respect to the matter. A short time ago Mayor Bradburn, together with Mr. Burnham, waited upon the Minister of Public Works in Ottawa. The latter agreed with the Mayor that the City was entitled to a swing bridge. Mr. Wanklyn, who was also interviewed on that occasion, was surprised to learn that the Otonabee was a navigable stream. He intimated that the Company would be willing to construct a hundred foot swing span. The Company inferred that the City's demands were very unfair and implied that they would withdraw their proposal to construct a new bridge altogether.

Did Not State Position.

Mayor Bradburn emphatically declared that he did not indicate where the swing span was to be placed, as was insinuated by Mr. Burnham in his communication to the press. He further stated that the Council practically refused to accept a swing bridge which would only provide for a thirty foot channel.

Ald. Langford said that he was surprised to learn that there was any doubt about a swing bridge. He eulogized the Mayor for his painstaking efforts in regard to the matter.

Ald. Johnston—"What's the best possible course to pursue?"

Ald. Gordon: "It looks to me, judging by the tone of that communication, that the thing is going through and that Mr. Burnham knows it. He has washed his hands of the matter and has placed the responsibility upon the City."

Did Not Object.

An extract from Mr. Burnham's "statement' reads as follows:

The Minister wired Mr. Wanklyn of the C.P.R. to meet us at Ottawa, which he did, and after a short conference he agreed to put in a swing. My duty ended there. As I remarked to the Mayor he represented the City thereafter. I did not. The C.P.R. then made ready to put in a swing in the centre of the bridge. To this the Mayor and his Engineer objected. They wanted the west end span as a swing. To this the C.P.R. replied that such a swing was unnecessarily long, too expensive and also dangerous.

"Mr. Burnham said that Mr. Wanklyn "after a short conference agreed to put in a swing," said the Mayor in reference to the allegations made in the foregoing paragraph. "If he agreed, why did we go to see the Minister of Public Works the following morning?" He also states that the C. P.R. "made ready to put in a swing in the centre of the bridge. To this the Mayor and his Engineer objected." "We did not object," asserted the Mayor. "We had no opportunity to object."

"Up in His Sleep."

"He was up in his sleep about that time," observed Ald. Gordon. "Why didn't he make representations to the Mayor instead of rushing into print?"

Ald. Johnston—"Let us go and see what the workmen are doing on the bridge, and then hike to Ottawa. We have got to have a swing bridge," declared the north ward representative as he vigorously pounded the desk.

On motion of Aldermen Buller and Duncan, a committee comprising his Worship Mayor Bradburn, Aldermen Johnston and Langford were delegated to wait upon Mr. Burnham. The Mayor was also authorized to send a deputation to Ottawa.

Peter Hamilton's Co's. Siding.

The Dominion Railway Board reported in favour of the railway siding up Water Street to the Peter-Hamilton Co's. works with the rider that once the siding is laid it must be permanent under all conditions. The Council took exception to this order; the City's by-law in this respect granted the siding on condition that should the Peter Hamilton Co. cease business the siding would be taken up.

Aldermen Gordon and Duncan moved that the Railway Board be asked to either have their rider amended in agreement with the by-law or to repeal the order altogther. —Carried.

Ald. Anderson pointed out that the Peter Hamilton Co. did not now intend to have the siding run up Water Street, but on their own property and across Sherbrooke Street.

A BIG SISTER CLUB AT Y.W.C.A.

A "Big Sister" Club is being organized at the Y.W.C.A. on Simcoe street. This "Big Sister" Club is one of the most interesting and friendly of all "Y" clubs. A series of travel talks on different countries, various evenings with Dickens, Scott, Shakespeare and Longfellow, pleasant hours with great musicians will be among some of the "Big Sister" Club work. But knowing all work and no play is poor policy, we think the "Big" sisters and "Little" sisters and "Middle-between" sisters would all enjoy at odd times a snowshoe by moonlight, a romp in the "Gym," a skating party and of course, the ever present, always enjoyable, far from being forgotten, sociable cup of tea and the "cats" that go with it.

The membership book is wide open, waiting for your name. We're looking at you and wanting you to come along and make the "Big Sister" Club also a "Big Success" Club. It's up to you! Are you coming?

Come in and ask us about it. We'll be glad to tell you.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

Splendid Concert By St. George's Choral Society

It was a very pleasing programme that St. George's Choral Society contributed last evening at their concert in the Assembly Hall of the Collegiate Institute. The offerings were miscellaneous in character, including choruses from 'The Messiah' which the Society put on last Spring. "Judas Maccabaeus," Handel's work, which will be given in April next, and a number of part songs and popular choruses. While the choral work was interspersed with several pleasing vocal numbers.

The work of the splendid chorus, under the direction of Mr. R. J. Devey, was a striking illustration of the results of capable instruction and of steady attendance at rehearsals. Of course the organization showed greater familiarity with and sang with greater confidence "The Messiah" numbers. "Lift Up Your Heads," "All we Like Sheep," and "And the Glory of the Lord," which were splendidly sung. Four numbers from Judas Maccabaeus," the Oratorio which is to be presented next Spring, were given in splendid fashion; the rendition being remarkable when it is considered that the Choristers have only had two months' rehearsal. The "Mourn Ye Afflicted People," the opening number of the Oratorio, was sung with a full appreciation of its possibilities, while the triumphant "See The Conquering Hero Comes," a number widely different in character was splendidly given.

Another feature of the programme was the fantasia on nautical airs, which aroused great enthusiasm. The solo "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep," in this number was splendidly taken by Mr. R. Dickson with a humming accompaniment by the choristers.

A similar humming effect was produced in "The Village Blacksmith," while Mr. George Chandler sang the tenor solo in splendid voice.

Enough of the 'Judas Maccabaeus' numbers were given to show what a treat is in store for the music lovers of Peterborough next April, when the oratorio will be produced.

Miss Bessie Greenhalch contributed the solo "Flight of Ages" in splendid style, exhibiting a pure, sweet voice. Mr. E. Bartley was heard to advantage in the solo "Bedouin Love Song," and Mr. G. Harris sang "The Bandolero" very effectively. Miss Onve Cullen, the youngest member of the Choral Society, sang very sweetly the solo "When the Heart is Young". She is a very promising young vocalist.

The humorous quartette "Basso Prophundo," by Mrs. B. Read, Miss Alexander, Mr. B. Read and Mr. Dickson was cleverly sung.

Mr. Chandler conducted during the rendition of the last number "And the Glory of the Lord," from "The Messiah."

Miss M. Flowers was a very efficient accompanist.

Following was the programme:

Chorus—(a) "Lift up Your Heads" (b) "Mourn Ye Afflicted People," . . . . . Handel
Song . . . . .Miss Bessie Greenhalch
Chorus—(a) "O, Father, Whose Almighty Power'; (b) "We Come in Bright Array" . . . . . Handel

JUDGMENT RESERVED IN THE McBAIN-CAVAN COUNCIL CASE

Whole Question Revolves Round a Resolution Passed by the Council

THE ARGUMENT

Mr. Justice Middleton reserved judgment in the McBain-Municipality of Cavan case which occupied the greater part of Tuesday afternoon's session of the Non-Jury Assizes of the High Court.

Mr. Hellmuth, K.C., of Toronto, who with Mr. E. L. Goodwill representing Mr. Geo. C. McBain, stated that there was a resolution passed by the Council of Cavan to keep the course of the stream open. It read as follows:

That the Committee be instructed to deal with Mr. McBain on the following terms, namely—Council to open channel and protect it by gates on culvert, Mr. McBain to close said gates in proper time to protect the channel from filling by spring freshets, Council to keep the channel open, said offer to be without prejudice. Carried.

"If the matter had gone no further than that," said Mr. Hellmuth, "there might be a question of our position, but as soon as the municipality raised a hand in clearing the drain that settled the bargain on the part of defendants."

Mr. McBain expressed his pleasure at the Council's resolution satisfactory to him. It had been passed early in January, 1911, and the gates were put in position that year. On December 1st, 1911, plaintiff closed one of the gates, an indication, among others, of his recognition and acceptance of the terms of the resolution. It did not state that the agreement was but for one year. From its wording it might be for all time to come. That was the understanding plaintiff took from the resolution and his counsel asked, therefore, for a mandatory order compelling the municipality to continue the work when it was required which plaintiff claimed they agreed to do and which for several years they carried out.

The municipality have set up that their resolution followed by their action was not binding upon them. The plaintiff had accepted the Council's offer, the work was carried out for several years, and then it was discontinued.

His Lordship said that if this were the case of a man owing the municipality $1,000, the Council would surely have accepted it. Here was a resolution passed with an offer to a man and several years after he is told that the offer was not what it had appeared to be.

He suggested to Mr. Hellmuth that plaintiff could bring Division Court proceedings against the municipality for the payment of the cost of clearing the stream in the event of his engaging someone to do it. Counsel replied that this would result in numerous suits, possibly many times during a year or probably only on several occasions.

But one judgment would determine the matter. His Lordship remarked. The argument on this point lead to no conclusion.

Mr. Ruddy argued that the case should be tried under the Drainage Act, and hence this was not the proper court to deal with it; and secondly the agreement was not a valid one because it had not the seal of the municipality.

Mr. Hellmuth contended that the agreement was valid upon grounds stated above, and His Honour held that the agreement affected the contention regarding this court's hearing the case.

Other Evidence.

Mr. W. J. Johnston, witness for the plaintiff, stated that he remembered the stream through Mr. McBain's property for at least 25 years. He would not be without the water on his own farm for $100 a year. His replies to Mr. Hellmuth corroborated the evidence of the plaintiff.

Justice Middleton—You would clean out your stream if it only cost $10 to do so?

Witness—Well, I don't know.

Justice Middleton—I suppose it depends upon your relation with the Council.

Mr. Ruddy—The loops into the McBain property are of no value to other people?

Witness—I don't think it is.

The work was done for Mr. McBain's accommodation?

Yes.

Justice Middleton interposed to show that the action concerned the fact that there was a bargain between McBain and the Council, or there was not one.

Mr. Ruddy—You've seen the spring on McBain's farm?

Never in my life.

Witness said he had seen the eastern loop of the stream dry. This is where the spring was alleged to be located.

Mr. Jos. Sanderson.

Joseph Sanderson was sworn and stated that he resided on the west half of Lot 13, Con. 19. The stream had always been a good one about a foot or more deep. On one occasion this year he saw running water there. He saw it five times since July 13th, including that instance. Witness saw water with a green scum on it in the loop.

Mr. Ruddy—You were opposed to the drain too?

I wasn't in favour of it.

It could have been cleaned out for $5?

I wouldn't do it for $5.

You saw water in the eastern loop?

Yes any time I was there I saw water, but every time I was there I did not see the easterly loop. They were not very far apart. You can't see the easterly loop from the western one.

The Defence.

Mr. Robert Vance said he was one of the drainage referees appointed under the act.

He reported in 1904—"There are no ditches or drains for which appropriations need be made."

Mr. Vance—I did not consider the McBain stream at all.

Mr. Ruddy asked if he would change his opinion now, but Mr. Hellmuth objected and the Judge pointed out that the damages concerned had been placed by Mr. McBain at $10 a year, a total of $30, resulting from the alleged failure to carry out an alleged agreement on the part of the Council.

Mr. Chas. McNeill.

Mr. Chas. McNeill, Reeve during 1908, was next called. He said the Council had no intention of providing any water allowance for Mr. McBain. The object of putting gates on the stream was to allow water to flow from the ditch into the stream. The other gate was to keep water from flowing from the easterly loop into the ditch.

The point arrived at was to show that there was water in the eastern loop. Mr. Ruddy said he had a number of witnesses to support the claim that there is a spring in this loop.

Did Not Concern Case.

Justice Middleton emphasized that this did not enlighten him in the least. It was not a question as to whether there was a spring or not in the loop. The whole matter regarded the alleged agreement.

Mr. Thos. A. Kelly was sworn and stated that he was Reeve of Cavan during 1909, '10 and '11, following Mr. McNeill's term.

What was the object of putting the words "without prejudice" in your letter to Mr. McBain, Mr. Ruddy asked. Mr. Hellmuth objected and his plea was sustained.

Questions asked by Mr. Ruddy concerning the intentions of the Council toward Mr. McBain regarding the stream during 1908 and later years were not allowed.

This concluded the defence.

In regard to costs Justice Middleton stated that the defendants' absolute denial of rights to the plaintiff turned the question of costs upon the defence.

NOW IS THE TIME TO BUY MATTRESSES

November 27, 28, and 29, we shall display on our Floor and in our Windows, the complete line of the Famous "Ideal" Felt Mattresses.

And for the first time in Canada we shall show the new patent "NEVERSPRED" Mattress.

The patent on the "Neverspred" is the most ingenious device we have ever seen. We can't explain it in words, you must come in and have it demonstrated.

We shall also show the "HARINFELT" Mattress.

This Mattress combines the good qualities of both hair and felt mattresses. There is an increased ventilating power to these mattresses, because the alternate layers of hair and felt act as a bellows as soon as weight is placed upon it. Not only so, but the "Harinfelt" cannot mat, and so the mattress will never become hard or lumpy.

You will also be interested in the showing of the more moderately priced "ROYAL EGYPTIAN" and "DIXIE" Mattresses.

Moreover, our prices on all these lines are marked down to a figure which is most attractive to you.

Come in and see the display and at the same time note our special showing of Ideal Brass and Steel Beds, Coil and Woven Wire Springs and Babies' Cribs.

Missing Girl Is Located In Toronto

LINDSAY, NOV. 25.—News reached this Town to-day that fourteen-year-old Isabella McClay is alive and well, the young girl having taken the train on Monday morning for Toronto, where her brother resides.

Various stories are circulated giving a reason why the girl made such a hasty exit from Lindsay, but as they are of a nature involving events which might transpire around any home with similar environments, the public is not in a position to arrive at any definite conclusion as to their veracity. Rumour has it that she remained out all Saturday night and was found on the steps of a Church Sunday morning by a lady of a philanthropic term of mind, who procured her passage to Toronto by rail, that the girl might be placed in a home in the city which cares for neglected children.

ALLEGED FORGER WAS ARRESTED

LINDSAY, Nov. 25.—The Kinmount train, which is due in Lindsay at 5.40 p.m. carried [illegible] its many passengers last evening an alleged forger from the village of Bancroft. The man, whose name is Matthias Blau, also known as Max Brown, got possession of a bank book about four days ago, which was owned by another party and he issued a cheque for $10 in the owner's name. On hearing that his speculation had been discovered, and that the police were after him he left the town.

The chief of police at Bancroft wired Lindsay's chief giving a description of Blau and orders to arrest him on sight. The train from the north was watched and Chief Chilton, in company with County Constable Thornbury captured the man on the arrival of the evening train from Kinmount.

Blau was in company with a married woman when arrested, both of whom were making as rapid transit as possible to the town of Bad Axe, Michigan. The woman expressed much surprise when the paramour was snatched away by the strong arm of the law. The prisoner will be taken back to Bancroft for trial.

First Church At Stony Lake

Rev. A. W. Mackenzie and Mr. Wilbert Webster yesterday laid the foundation of the first church to be built at Stony Lake. The church is to be erected on a small island donated for the purpose by Mr. Lillicrap, of Lakefield, and situated near Hell's Gate. The expenses are being borne by private subscription and the edifice will be ready in ample time for use next summer. It will be large enough to accommodate 130 worshippers. While the services will be Anglican in character, people of all denominations will be made welcome.

Messrs. Mackenzie and Webster worked all day yesterday building cement piers for the foundations.

Will Celebrate Its Anniversary

Rev. Principal Gordon, of Queen's, Coming to Knox Church

On December 14 Knox Church will celebrate its fourth anniversary in the new church. They have secured for this occasion one of the most prominent men in the church, Rev. Principal Gordon, of Queen's. Each year on this occasion Knox Church people have been able to make a reduction of their mortgage, and they are aiming at a similar reduction this year. They have been very fortunate in securing Dr. Gordon for this anniversary occasion. The choir under the able leadership of Mr. Kenyon is preparing special music.

Well Named.

"We call our office boy the Little Dragoon."

"Warlike litle fellow, eh?"

"Oh, no; it's because he has to be booted and spurred before we can get anything out of him."

POULTRY SHOW WILL BE A RECORD ONE

The members of the Peterborough Poultry Association are preparing for their sixth annual show, which will be held on January 6th, 7th and 8th. New coops have been made with provision for 1500 birds, and it is fully expected that the exhibit will be close up to this total. The directors of the show have twenty-five silver cups and over $200 in special prizes. There are 96 classes on the entry list with the regular cash prizes in addition to the specials. A fifth prize is being offered this year in the form of a handsome ribbon.

The Peterborough Poultry Association is regarded as one of the strongest in the country, and the annual show is looked forward to by a steadily increasing number of exhibitors. Already inquiries have been received from many points between Owen Sound and Point Fortune, Que., and the citizens will see one of the finest of poultry displays when the local show is opened.

TURNBULL'S

EGG CASE CLAIMED ATTENTION OF HIGH COURT THIS MORNING

Peterboro' Cold Storage Co., Plaintiffs—Toronto Lawyers Take Prominent Part in the Hearing

EGG QUALITY DISCUSSED

The case of Peterborough Cold Storage Co., Ltd., versus John Hawley of Toronto, was opened in the High Court this morning. The particulars of the case have been previously mentioned. Messrs. Gideon and D. I. Grant of Toronto, represented defendant, and Messrs. G. H. Watson, K.C., of Toronto, and Bennet & Goodwill, of Peterborough, were plaintiff's counsel.

Mr. Scott, plaintiff in the case was examined at length by Mr. G. H. Watson. Witness stated that he had been engaged in the cold storage business for thirty years. He explained the process of candling, which involved two classifications, namely, number one selected, and number two, which comprised undersized eggs and light cracked eggs. Lower grades were consigned to the dump. The eggs involved in the suit were purchased at twenty-four cents a dozen. On resale the eggs did not average the original purchase price. The eggs were stored in a room ranging in temperature from twenty-eight to twetny-nine degrees above zero. The remainder of the eggs, which were not accepted by defendant, were eventually disposed of to Gunn Langlois at sixteen cents a dozen.

To Mr. Grant, witness said that eggs constituted the main business of the company. About seven or eight thousand cases were handled by the firm last season. The freezing system consists of a Cooper Brine plant, and was located above the room, in which the eggs were stored. He admitted that complaints were occasionally received respecting the inferior condition of cold storage products. Witness asserted that he would rather buy April and May eggs and take delivery in October, than buy July eggs and take delivery during the same month.

You can tell me how many rotten eggs you threw away last season out of storage.

No.

Would it be ten cases?

I wouldn't like to say.

Out of the 8,000 cases put in storage last year, how many eggs were taken out as rotten eggs?

Out of No. 2 room there would be very few. It might run ten cases.

What about No. 3 room?

There would be a greater number. They were put in during the summer.

You can see must in eggs when they are candled. There is a dark spot in it. We consider that a rotten egg. It is not fit for food. It is injurious to cooking.

I am told that if a baker breaks one musty egg into a cookery where 12 good ones have also been placed, it will destroy the entire lot.

Mr. Scott—I guess that's right.

Did your candlers report musty eggs to you?

No.

Did Mr. Hawley complain of must when you called on him in Toronto.

He mentioned must in some of them. I said I would see the eggs were selected according to the contract.

Witness said that must usually appears on the outside. All must did not indicate a bad condition. There might be a slight must on the outside, but the egg was not necessarily bad. He admitted that this might indicate a slightly impaired condition.

Mr. Scott said he had no method of measuring the humidity of the room.

Mr. Grant—You had previous dealings with Mr. Hawley?

Yes.

And found him a good man to deal with?

Yes.

He always paid his bills and was not a "kicker"?

Yes.

Regarding instructions for shipments, Mr. Scott said that after the first they were usually ordered over the telephone. He did not remember any complaints with these orders. Some of his employees received the messages.

Do you remember an order for 20 cases?

Yes. Shipped 20 cases by express. They never complained to me until after Jan. 1.

Mr. Hawley did telephone you that they were small?

Yes, but that was on Jan. 8.

Did you speak to them about getting a faster delivery of eggs?

Yes. I told them I wanted to get them moved.

Did they complain then that they could not move them faster because of their quality?

No. The quality of the eggs was mentioned only twice.

You understood that these eggs were sold for food purposes to the trade?

That was my opinion. I would not want him to take must eggs.

Mr. Watson Again.

You agreed to supply best selected eggs candled out of storage?

Yes.

Might they be best selected eggs and yet undisclosed must might be on the inside?

Yes.

His Lordship—Assuming you could not detect it, and yet Mr. Hawley showed you must in the eggs when they arrived in Toronto, would you regard it as a loss to you, or would you expect Mr. Hawley to pay you?

Mr. Scott—Under my contract, I did not expect I would have had to take back such eggs.

His Lordship— Supose, as an extreme case you sent him 100 cases and inside the eggs there was so much must they could not be used, would you expect Hawley to pay for them?

Mr. Scott—Yes, if you could not detect the must from the outside.

What is candling for?

To detect rotten eggs.

Regarding his cold storage plant, Mr. Scott said it had been examined by Mr. J. A. Ruddick, Dairy Commissioners for Ontario. He examined the plant five years ago and was quite satisfied with it. The last inspection was two years ago by his representative.

Justice Middleton wanted to know the nature of the "approval," as this point was indefinite. Calcium chloride in the coil room draws the moisture from the air after it comes from the storage room.

Mr. Grant—How often do you replace the calcium?

The pans are kept replenished.

Your best selected eggs are the best you have for table use or any other consumption.

Yes.

Harry Rightmeyer.

Witness said he had been employed in the egg business with Mr. Scott for 13 years. He had experience of 11 years in candling.

Describing that work he said there would be two cases, one of which was for selects and another for No. 2. Those with black spots detected by candling are thrown away. The eggs for Room No. 2 were sorted before candling and others before being put in storage. The small eggs and cracks were taken to the main floor and sold to bakers. Candling is done when the eggs were sent out.

Speaking of particular shipments, Mr. Watson said—Did you know those eggs were for Mr. Hawley?

Yes. I got the information from Mr. Scott.

Did you observe the directions for "candling out?"

Yes. They were then put in No. 3 room.

How soon after candling were they shipped?

It might have been the same day. After 900 cases were set aside for Mr. Hawley, there were 600 that were not shipped to him?

Yes.

What was the description of the 525 cases for Montreal.

They were our best selected.

You do not know that 75 cases were sold about town?

No.

To Mr. D. I. Grant.

What did you take out in sorting?

We took out any that looked bad, those with any cracks, a percentage of small ones.

What does percentage mean. You figure out there is a percentage of small eggs in a case and you take out a number of them?

We have to use our own judgment. There should be a certain proportion of small eggs to a certain number of large ones. We try to make 40 lbs. to the case, or 1 1-2 lbs. to the dozen. There are 30 dozen to a case.

In candling we handle 3 eggs in each hand at once, at the rate of 3 to 4 cases an hour, depending upon the condition of the eggs.

Mr. Grant—When you are candling out you detect those that show decay, and any that didn't show decay in the candling you shipped?

Not all of them. Sometimes we notice a little "fuzz" on some of them. That shows dampness.

In the spring you took out eggs that were cracked and might cause dampness on others, so that if dampness was found when you were shipping in the fall, the dampness was occasioned in storage?

Yes. But in being laid down after sorting a few of them may have become cracked and others nearby would be affected. They would not average a half dozen to a case.

Mr. Grant—An egg may be musty inside and yet you can't detect it by the ordinary means of inspection?

How's that again?

Mr. Watson—That's a rather complicated question.

Mr. Grant broke up the query into parts—First, eggs that show spots in candling and those that show must. Can they be musty without showing fuzz on the outside?

They might be.

His Lordship—Then a buyer takes his chances on getting such eggs?

Yes.

When a contract was received the eggs in No. 2 room would be candled into No. 3, waiting an order for shipment. There might have been 300 or 400 cases candled and waiting for an order in No. 3. The number might not be 100 cases.

Mr. Grant—You can't tell me how many cases there were in No. 3 when you were candling out of No. 2? There might be several thousand.

Witness said he did not think eggs deteriorated in cold storage. If they were in too long, however, they would get an "old smell."

Were the pasteboard fillers with which Hawley's eggs were shipped new?

Some of them were.

If the eggs were candled and ready you could ship 150 cases in an hour or so?

Yes.

And shipments were timed to catch the way freight from Peterborough to Toronto in order to cut down the time spent in delivery?

Yes.

The 500 cases sent to Montreal were practically the same as those sent to Hawley?

Yes.

To Mrs Watson.

Did you let any cracked eggs go into cold storage when they were first sorted?

Not as far as we could judge.

His Lordship—There is a possibility of some eggs becoming cracked in spite of your care?

Yes, I guess there is.

Witness said some of the eggs shipped to Hawley might have been candled out of No. 2 into Room No. 3 several weeks before they were shipped. There were a few degres difference in the temperature of the two rooms.

MR. BURNHAM SUPPLIES ANOTHER STATEMENT

The appended communication was supplied by Mr. J. H. Burnham this morning. It refers to the controversy that arose at the Council meeting on Tuesday evening, in reference to a previous "statement" that Mr. Burnham supplied to the local press.

Re Swing Bridge.

The statements last night of His Worship the Mayor, and of the other guardians of the city's interests so far as they appear by the newspapers are correct. I just wish to say one or two things in reply.

1. When the C.P.R. agreed to give us a swing why did we (I mean the City Council) not find out from some practical barge or canal men where we should have it? The C.P.R. says that our selection is unreasonable. It is certainly up to us to prove that it is not.

2. Alderman Buller did not attempt to override anybody except perhaps himself in his interview with me. As an alderman no doubt it is his duty to learn what he can and to do what he can. But I warned Mayor Bradburn from the start that as I had not the power given me by the Council to act for them in the choice of a suitable swing, I would not be held responsible for the Council's action in that part of the affair and I will not. It is much easier for me to get out from under at the start than after the trouble is here and that is why I defended myself in the newspapers, as it looked to be coming.

3. I will of course do all I can in the city's interests, but surely we must interview the C.P.R. first to show them why we cannot accept their offer (if such be the case) and why we must have something else.

4. The waterway and water-side are not governmental property. The right of way over the water and the shore line are both ours and that is why we, not the government, must look after them up to a certain point.

5. I was afraid that since we refused the C.P.R.'s offer, if it proved to be reasonable and our demand proved to be unreasonable, the C.P.R. would have the right to go on and build a fixed bridge and we would have nobody to thank for our loss but ourselves (most of the blame coming my way likely).

Three Ratepayers Write on Mayoralty Representation

AGAINST THIRD TERM

Mr. Editor,—I saw in your yesterday's edition where one of our citizens was going around with a petition to reinstate Mayor Bradburn, as Mr. Bradburn will not stand for a contest. I think if Mr. Bradburn is afraid to stand the contest his friend is stopping over the line by going around with a petition. He has forgotten he is trespassing on the citizens' privileges; and I also think if Peterborough has not got another man as good as Mayor Bradburn for the chair the City is in a bad condition.

I remain, yours truly,

RATEPAYER.

Nov. 26, 1913.

WANTS BRADBURN AGAIN.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—I took considerable pleasure in signing a Citizens' petition yesterday to Mayor Bradburn, asking him to again present himself for re-election to the position of Mayor of this City. While my signature does not count for much I noticed the names of a number of men who do count.

I think Mayor Bradburn has been very aggressive and in the interests of the City we should endeavour to hold him for another year, to complete the Council's unfinished programme.

He has given very much time to the Civic affairs and has lived up to his election pledges.

Yours truly,

A Ratepayer.

Peterborough, Nov. 26, 1913.

INVESTIGATION NEEDED

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—A petition is being circulated by the friends of Mayor Bradburn with a view of endeavouring to secure him an election by acclamation for a third term as Mayor. Is it not about time that the ratepayers of Peterborough should do a little thinking on their own account, and that some exposure and criticism should be freely given against the administration of our civic affairs?

We have already had three elections of Mayor of this City by acclamation, and no real criticism made. There is ample ground for the administration of our civic affairs to be criticised. For instance, during this last 10 years the rate of taxation has increased fully 50 per cent., and the assessment of property has also increased to most people to the extent of 50 per cent. What is becoming of these increased taxes? We have very little to show for it. Our streets are in a worse condition than they were 10 years ago. The money therefore is not being spent upon street improvement. Where does our increased taxation go? Are all our ratepayers fairly assessed? Some independent enquiry should be made into that. For instance the Bradburn homestead was assessed for about $5,000, and was sold for $17,000. The Bradburn property on the corner of Bethune and Charlotte streets, opposite the Grand Trunk station is assessed for $5,500, but it is well known that the Bradburn estate refused $10,000 for this same property. To what extent are some ratepayers being favoured? Would not a fair and equitable assessment be obtained by getting away from hole and corner elections by acclamation? Would it not be in the interest of the City to have one of our old Councillors as a candidate for Mayor? For instance, James Kendry, ex-M.P., William Langford, Sr., or J. J. Hartley, would be able to bring to bear their knowledge and experience as members of the council, when our taxes were one-half what they are to-day. Any of these gentlemen would make a very close enquiry to see to what extent the ratepayers' money is being wasted and improvidently spent, and would see that the rich ratepayer and the poor ratepayer alike are assessed and taxed on an equitable basis.

As long as the ratepayers of Peterborough are prepared to put up with hole and corner methods of election by acclamation they must expect to be discriminated against and they must expect their taxes to continually increase. We certainly want no further elections by acclamation.

Yours, etc.,

HIGH-TAXED RATEPAYER.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

PARTICK THISTLE PLAYER IS TO HAVE A BENEFIT

Alex. Raisbeck's Team Will Be an International Eleven --Some Amusing Remarks Gathered From Football Matches.

Goalkeeper Molyneux, although a native of 'Lever' town, hasn't brought much "sunlight" into his Chelsea home this season.

More penalty kicks have been given for trips than for hands this season, further evidence that boot leather is growing more expensive.

The Trotters' reserve after their deahing victory at Southport, upset their own supporters by their feeble display against Liverpool.

No steady going forward line need hope to succeed when opposed to Morley and West, of Notts County. It's ball or man every time with them.

Bentley's total of goals still remains at four, all of which were obtained in his first match. The Albion supporters wish him a speedy return to form.

Common has the rare distinction of possessing medals for assistance in winning the F.A. cup, and the championships of the first and second divisions.

Both Buchan and Low have failed at penalty kick conversions for the Boker Park club this season. Last winter Sunderland registered eight peanlty goals.

Alec Raisbeck, late of Liverpool fame, and now with Partick Thistle, is to have a benefit early next yeaar, when his team will oppose an International eleven.

Walden Again.

After the Spurs and Derby match the last to leave the field was Walden, accompanied by the referee and one of the linesmen.

The following remark was overheard: "I say, Bill, why are they escorting Walden off the field?"

"I don't know," remarked the other. "Perhaps they're frightened they'll lose him in the grass." (With apologies to the ground man).

Hegazi "A Star."

During the Dulwich Hamlet and West Norwood game Hegazi, the Dulwich forward, was in fine form, and his two goals were deserved successes.

I overheard a rather unique appreciation of his skill on leaving the ground. An aeroplane was seen approaching rapidly, and a Norwood supporter asked what it was doing in that direction.

"It has come to take Hegazi to his proper sphere," was the prompt reply of the Dulwich enthusiast.

Pearls at Highbury.

He was a very keen Arsenal supporter, and when his pal said to him on Tuesday evening: "Have you seen The Star?' They've found the pearls at Highbury," he somewhat startled his informer by replying: "Oh, have they? I supose the Orient wanted to see the Arsenal's new ground."

Where Chelsea Could Train.

Joe: "What's wrong with Chelsea? They don't seem to be able to win a match."

Tom: "Well, I don't quite know The men are good enough individually, but I think a spell of training and practice at Winchelsea would do them a lot of good collectively."

Distinguished Visitors.

During Fulham's game at the Cottage a spectator with a deep voice caused much amusement by his remarks to the occupants of the directors' pavillion. At half time Mr. Kelso was seen to usher in a party of distinguished looking Japanese, whereupon the humorist inquired if Fulham hadn't had enough of "Orientals" on the previous Saturday.

The Cottagers just afterwards scored their winning goal, and he of the bass voice, turning triumphantly to the directors' guests, shouted:

"There y'are, mates; thats 'ow we bamboo-zle 'em; now we'll give 'em Tokio, an make 'em chew rice!" Whether the Japs understood his remarks or not, they all smiled pleasantly.

Poor, But Honest.

At Highbury two of the onlookers were discussing the merits of one of the players. "You can say what you like," said one, "but he always plays fair; no dirty tricks with him. In fact, he's what you might call an honest player."

"Yes," was the reply, "poor, but honest!"

There is a Distinction.

Two small boys were awaiting the arrival of the Chelsea players outside Stamford Bridge, and the following was overheard:

First boy (as two small boys dressed in football clothes walked past) — "Are they some of Chelseas players?"

Second boy—"No, they're footballers they are."

More Speed Wanted.

At the game between Chelsea and Manchester United it was only too evident that the former were hopelessly outpaced.

"Take Macfarlane," said a spectator, "I grant you that he's clever, but you can't by any stretch of imagination call him fast."

"Well, no," said his friend, "perhaps not, but then you see he really came to Chelsea as a coach."

"Coach," said the first man, with withering emphasis, 'slowcoach, you mean. What Chelsea want are motors."

Some of the "Nuts."

Smith (at a football match)— "I wonder what occupation most footballers follow?"

Sharp— "According to what I've seen, I should say ironmongers."

Smith—"What makes you think so?"

Sharp—"Why, every player, directly after the match, makes a bolt for the dressing room."

Cruel.

A very amusing remark was made by a spectator at a match between Walthamstow Thursday and Great Eastern railway. The referee, who was completely bald, gave some offside decisions that were not at all popular with the crowd. This led a spectator to wrath, who shouted: "Hi, ref! what's the matter with you? Take the hair out of your eyes."

BOXING.

Mike Fremas, of Peterborough, left to-day with Tommy Pappas, the Greek fighter, and will accompany the latter on a trip to Buffalo and other cities, where Pappas has a number of bouts slated.

BASEBALL

CHICAGO, Nov. 25.—As in every other department of the game, the Philadelphia Athletics led all the teams in the American League in fielding, according to the official averages announced last night. The closest rivals of the world's champions strangely enough, were the St. Louis Browns, while Detroit and New York Yankees were tied for last place.

Stuffy McInis was the best fielding first baseman among the men who saw regular service, with a mark of .992, while Gandil of Washington and Johnston, of Cleveland, were tied for second place at .990.

Berger, second baseman of the White Sox, playing in about half the games of the season, was first among the guardians of the keystone sack, at .988, Lajoie being second at .976. The great Eddie Collins, who made fortyone errors, turned in .949.

Midkiff did some accurate work around third base for the Yankees and led the division with an average of .957. Frank Baker was far in the rear at .919. Wagner of the Red Sox was first among the shortstops at .965, with McBride of Washington second with .961. Jack Barry of the Athletics was third.

Cree of New York, let the outfielders of the league with the high mark of .986, making only three errors. Ryan of Cleveland and Shanks of Washington were ranked high. Both Cobb and Speaker were well down in the list.

Schalk of Chicago had the best average among the regular catchers, while Walter Johnson and Ray Caldwell, among the pitchers, went through the season without making an error.

PAPPAS ACCEPTS SIMMONS' CHALLEGE

The backers of Tommy Pappas, the Greek fighter, have lost no time in snapping at the challenge hurled at him by Artie Simmons in last night's Examiner.

The challenge was accepted this morning by Pappas' manager, who says his man is ready to fight for any sum from $500 to $1,000. He wants the bout to be a fifteen round affair and to take place in Peterborough if possible.

With both boys willing it is altogether likely that the bout will be pulled off here in the near future.

HUGH BURRITT

Former Strathcona hockey player who is greatly in demand by Toronto senior teams.

Burritt With The Argonauts

Toronto Star: Hugh Burritt of the Winnipeg Victorias, has joined the Argonaut hockey team. Burritt is a centre or rover. Burritt comes from Peterborough. Three years ago he was centre of Teddy Mamott's Simcoes, and two years ago with Seaforth in Junior O.H.A. He weighs about 145 pounds. Burritt was the sensation of the Winnipeg Bankers' League last winter and Victoria picked him up. He played five or six games for the Vics. St. Michael's have been hot foot after Burritt. The Argo squad will commence gym. work to-night at St. James'.

SPORT SACRIFICED

Money the Only Consideration in Profession Baseball

Organised baseball seems to be on the verge of losing its last vestige of sport for sport's sake, according to W. J. MacBeth, a New York sporting writer. The commercial end of the enterprise overshadows all else. The magnates are out for the money and make no bones of the fact. The lust for gold is as deeply rooted in the minor leagues as in the major organizations.

The two big circuits depend upon patronage for financial gains. Because of this it is necessary for them to secure the very best talent to display before the public. Thousands upon thousands of dollars are expended every season by each club in the National and American Leagues for the sole purpose of fortifying for the future. Every club owner has several highly paid scouts beating all around the country in search of likely looking "bush" timber. Some have as many as six sleuths under salary. Besides these, there is a grand army of amateur sharps who do business on a commission basis. This policy of near extravagance is all well enough for first division aggregations; the end more than justifies the means. But it is a serious drain upon the pocketbook of the unfortunate holders of second division franchises.

Because of their weaknesses, second division clubs in the major leagues call for the greatest expenditures. This makes their lot all the more severe. The money is put up on a sure gamble, because a club away down in the race is lucky to make interest on investment. The leading teams which might well afford to speculate in talent, have not the same crying need to do so. But those leaders usually string along in a sort of "dog in the manger" fashion and often corral most promising talent which they cannot possibly use, just to keep it away from some lowly rival that might utilise it to the disadvantage of the strong.

ROYAL YACHTSMEN

Apropos of King George's success as a yachtsman, it is interesting to note that yachting in bygone times owed much to English sovereigns, from Queen Elizabeth, who had a fine pleasure schooner built at Cowes, to William IV., who founded the Royal Yacht Squadron; but the keenest of all Royal yachtsmen was Charles II. In all, the Merry Monarch owned fourteen yachts, ranging from twenty-five to 166 tons, and one of them, the "Jamie," was designed by the King himself and built at Lambeth under his supervision. Charles and his brother James generally steered their yachts themselves, and Evelyn, in his diary for October 1st, 1661, describes a sailing match between the Royal brothers—the first contest of the kind in British waters of which we have any record.

FRANK CHANCE

Men who know Frank Chance, the American league's $25,000 manager, can perhaps imagine what Chance is shouting at some Highlander, in this picture. Chance does not believe in handling his players with velvet gloves. He rules them with an iron hand and doesn't hesitate to use language that rasps. It it not difficult to imagine Chance raising the skin of some player in this instance.

Gaol for Boxers

Ruthless M. Casten de Wiast, Belgium's Minister of Justice, cast a bomb into the sporting circles of that country by declaring that all boxers must be sent to gaol.

His Excellency circularised the provincial State prosecutors instructing them to put in the dock every man who boxed, charging "criminal wounding," or "criminal attempt to wound." M. de Wiast proclaimed that even the starting of a boxing match was a criminal offence, because "it is designed against the health and bodily security of the persons engaged."

SEARCH FOR BOY WHO IS HEIR TO MILLIONS

Wanted in Connection With Charge Against Mazdaznan Priest

A STRANGE SECT

Is "Billy" Lindsay, heir to millions, and a pupil of Dr. Hanish, high priest of Mazdaznan, hiding in Montreal?

Followers of Mazdaznan in Montreal state he is not. However, the Chicago authorities, who require the lad as a witness in a charge laid against Dr. Hanish, believe he has been sent away, and that Montreal is his hiding place.

According to reports, the charge which Dr. Hanish must face in Chicago—a charge which is considered very serious and for which a sentence of five years and a fine of $1,000 on each count may be imposed—is one of circulating through the express companies copies of his book, "Inner Life," a book of medical science which deals with the care of the body in accord with the beliefs of the writer.

Another important witness is Richard Hanish, purporting to be the father of the high priest, who, it is stated, ran away in order to evade entering the witness stand. And still another is Miss Louise Gottsche, who a few years ago was a disciple of Hanish. Some of the things she will testify are that Hanish lured women of wealth by promises of eternal youth; that he hypnotized these women; that he submitted them to mental and physical torture; that he insulted them; that there were many boys and girls at the Mazdaznan temple; that weird sun dances and strange baths were practiced, and that threats of ruined homes and lives were made against women devotees to prevent their telling the secret rites of the temple.

Followers Here Deny Charge.

"Ottoman Zar-Adusht Hanish is in no way guilty of a breach of the law of the United States. Dr. Hanish is the head of our teaching. We follow him because he is an ideal man, and a perfect example of the results derived from Mazdaznan."

In these words, Mrs. Hooper Mallet, priestess of the local followers of Mazdaznan, or Sun Worshippers, as they are better known, to-day denied the reports circulated to the detriment of the chief priest.

"Billy is not here," remarked Mrs. Mallet. "I have not seen the boy for nearly two years. Then he and his mother were in Montreal attending a meeting. The boy has not been sent away; his mother and he have not been detained; these charges preferred against the high priest are not true, and there is nothing wrong with the book that he sends through the mail. This is the work of the yellow press. This is not the first nor the second charge of this kind against Dr. Hanish; such charges keep cropping up continually. Mazdaznan bases its teaching upon a pure, wholesome body. This ensures a pure active mind, and that is the hope of Mazdaznan. Mazdaznan means Master Thought. This book, 'Inner Life,' is a book of wisdom, which teaches how to live, retain strength, purity, and youth. It has been accepted at Washington, and why it should now be held from sale, I do not know.

Boy Was Persecuted.

"With regard to this lad Billy Lindsay, it is a disgrace to the United States the way in which the law has stepped in. The boy is the heir to millions. He was being taught Mazdaznan—a pupil of Dr. Hanish, when his relatives who desired to get his wealth cut him off from his allowance and the Juvenile Court persecuted that lad. But the boy has not run away. He is not here. None of the witnesses reputed to have disappeared have done so.

"No! Dr. Hanish has no kin living, and no one has ever heard of them. There is nothing to these charges. No women live at the temple. He is a good and virtuous man, and is not wholly unknown to Montreal people since he has spoken here on several occasions.

"Do we worship the sun? Well, now, that is a hard point to explain, because it might be misunderstood. We do not bow or kneel to the sun. I have never prayed to the sun or seen anyone else doing so. Still, when a person sees the sun in the morning beaming brightly and cheerily over the land he is pleased and is thankful for the blessings it furnishes. In that sense we are Sun Worshippers."

TWO BOOKS OF LOCAL INTEREST

Roughing It In The Bush
By Mrs. MOODIE

Lost In The Back Woods
By Mrs. TRAILL

The Authors of both of these Books lived in Peterboro' County and were well-known to people who are living in this vicinity.

"Roughing It in the Bush" gives a graphic and interesting account of the hardships of the Pioneers of this County in the days of the Rebellion of 1837 and the description of the Trip to Stony Lake in 1834 is very interesting. It is beautifully bound in cloth with gilt top and contains eight full page Coloured Illustrations of Rice Lake, the original Strickland Home at Lakefield, Cobourg, Toronto and other places mentioned in the story.

"Lost in the Backwoods" is of intense local interest—the scene of the story is cast on Rice Lake and the Otonabee River and will be re-read with a great deal of interest by the Public of Peterboro' and Northumberland Counties. It is published in cloth binding and contains several interesting illustrations.

Both of These Books will make Ideal Christmas Presents. The former is published at $1.50 and the later at 75c.

Last evening the Church parlours of Knox Church were the scene of a happy occasion when about forty ladies and gentlemen, the teaching staff and officers of the Sabbath school, presided over by the superintendent, Mr. Malcolm Clark, sat down to a banquet well provided for by the lady teachers.

After all the good things were enjoyed, an address of unusual interest was given by Mr. Andrew McKenzie, the school's delegate to the Sabbath School Convention held in Ottawa. Mr. McKenzie gave an excellent report, showing he had been inspired by the convention. He voiced in a helpful, suggestive way the development of the various departments of the school.

At the close, Rev. Mr. Keith referred to the excellent staff in Knox school, to the growing time and the wonderful results to be passed in the future from their present efforts. The gathering was dismissed shortly after 10 p.m.

REDUCTIONS OR RATES ARE RECOMMENDED

Special to the Examiner.

OTTAWA, Nov. 26.—Very substantial reductions in railway freight rates are recommended by J. P. Muller, rate expert for the Government in the inquiry now before the Railway Commission. The decreases recommended under the existing rates range all the way from 25 to 43 per cent. This is possibly the outstanding feature of Mr. Muller's voluminous exhibits. The Government expert bases his proposed decrease in western rates upon a computation of his own. He has first ascertained the cost of service to the railways, figured a fair gross profit to the railways on this computed fair rate on this and subtracted this rate from the present existing rate. The difference is the proposed new rate. This will greatly benefit Eastern Canadian shippers.

Stock Markets

A. H. Stratton & Co., Brokers, report the following:

The stock market this morning opened up irregular, prices being a little off from yesterday's close and developed into a dull strong market towards midday. We may witness a further moderate improvement. It continues to reflect an oversold condition. The spreading of a multitude of fake bear reports with newspaper attacks on the stock market generally mark the end of a bear campaign. The market reflects a strong undertone and sentiment has improved to the extent that some of the bear crowd expect higher prices during the remainder of the week and are trying to cover as easily as possible.

We believe the best railroad stocks are well taken and that those who have the courage to buy and hold up U.P., Atch., St. Paul, G.Q., N.P., L.N. and C.P.R., will be rewarded later on when the financial skies are cleared.

Railroads complete their case for rate advance before commission, and hearing is adjourned until Dec. 1.

London settlement concludes to-morrow.

RIOTING IN DUBLIN

Violence Attends Organization of Nationalist Army

STRIKERS WRECK MEETING

DUBLIN, Nov. 26.—An Irish National volunteer force to uphold the authority of the crown and government of Ireland on the same lines as the Ulster force, of which Sir Edward Carson is the sponsor, was organized last night, but the enrollment of volunteers was attended by scenes of violence. More than 5,000 persons assembled in the rotunda at a public meeting held for the purpose of inaugurating the movement, and several thousands were unable to gain admission. Their attempts to enter resulted in great disorder and glass doors and windows were broken.

From the first it was evident that the transport strikers, who were present in large force, opposed the movement. They maintained constant interruptions of the speakers, which culminated in free fights. Sticks were used as weapons and a number of blank cartridges were exploded.

The meeting was so disorderly that it was impossible to judge of the success of the movement, but the promoters asserted that several thousand men enrolled.

LETTERS FOR VICTIMS.

Over 200 Pieces of Mail Unclaimed at Port Huron.

SARNIA, Nov. 26.—In a few more days about 200 pieces of mail now at the marine postoffice, Port Huron, addressed to sailors who vainly braved the recent awful storm on the Great Lakes, will be forwarded to Washington. All mail received for men on the lost ships that bore the sender's address on the envelope has been returned, bearing the message, "Lost in the storm. Cannot deliver."

But there is much matter with no clue to the sender on the outside, except the post mark. Some of these places bear the names of men not heard from since their ships were lost. There are postal cards with birthday and Thanksgiving greetings; bundles of winter clothing, and envelopes stuffed with many pages of urgent pleadings of relatives anxious to know the worst. In due time the writers will receive word from the dead letter office of the non-delivery of their messages.

TRIBUTE TO BECK.

Citizens of London Unite To Do Hydro Chairman Honor.

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 26. — London's most prominent citizens, over 500 strong, and irrespective of party affiliations, arose last night and tendered Hon. Adam Beck, chairman of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario, and the city's most distinguished citizen, one of the most memorable complimentary banquets in the history of the city. Among the speakers were Bishop Fallon, head of the Catholic diocese of London; Rt. Rev. David Williams, bishop of the Anglican Diocese of Huron, Lt.-Col. Gartshore, general manager of the McLary Manufacturing Co., Dr. Flanders of the First Methodist Church, and his worship Mayor Graham.

Appreciation of the public services of the "harnesser of Niagara" was on the lips of every speaker, Conservative, Liberal and otherwise. Hon. Mr. Beck replied feelingly. In the course of the evening he was presented with a solid silver salver containing 200 ounces of silver and a set of candelabra of four pieces.

ONE WEEK TO GET OUT.

Vancouver's "Venusburg" Is To Be Put Out of Existence.

VANCOUVER, Nov. 26. — Mayor Baxter issued an order to the police to clean out the restricted district of Alexander street. Two years ago the women located in this section, which starts within a couple of blocks from the main police station in the east end. Yesterday afternoon the police accordingly notified the residents of the section that they would have until Sunday in which to pack up and get out.

On the heels of the police went a large party of women, representing the various rescue homes of the city. They sought to call on as many of the girls as would see them, offering assistance in getting them to start in the right path and offering them homes in which to begin reformation.

The work of notification and moral salvage was hampered, however, by the fact that the doors were closed against the visitors, who merely left cards of the mission homes and then came away.

CONTROL OF BUSINESS.

It Should Be Invested In Government Says J. P. Muller.

OTTAWA, Nov. 26.—The Railway Commission yesterday afternoon resumed consideration of the western rate case and took up the exhibit filed by J. P. Muller, a Government expert. The sitting was occupied chiefly with the examination of Mr. Muller, who said often a company extended a line into a new district, and for some years it produced little revenue as the district was gradually filling up. As it grew to be a greater revenue-producer another line extended a branch to tap the same territory.

The Government should be in a position, he said, to stop such competitive extensions to existing lines by compelling the companies to get Government approval of extensions.

The hearing will continue all week.

Tons of Spoiled Turkey.

BUFFALO, Nov. 26.—Health department inspectors yesterday destroyed ten tons of spoiled dressed turkey, which had been seized in local commission houses. Part of nearly every car of turkey and geese has been found unfit for use, because the fowl being packed before cooling, has spoiled in transit.

VILLA IS VICTORIOUS

Constitutionalist Strikes Heavy Blow at Huerta's Troops

FEDERALS ARE RETREATING

EL PASO, Texas, Nov. 26.—Gen. Francisco Villa, commander of the Constitutionalists' army, in the state of Chihuahua, last night sent the following telegram to Col. Juan N. Medina, his chief of staff in Juarez: "I communicate with satisfaction that we have completely routed the enemy. We took all his artillery and three trains. The federals are in full and shameless retreat."

After two ty-four hours of the fiercest battle of the Mexican revolution, fought on the open plain along the Mexican National Railroad fourteen miles south of the border, Pancho Villa's Constitutionalist forces have successfully maintained their positions in a long battle front, effectually blocking the Federal advance on Juarez. Whether the Federals have retreated beyond Samalayuca or not is unknown. No news comes from their commanders. That Villa stands firm at Mesa is indicated by an order he sent at dark to rush another train to the battlefield for wounded. Wounded who arrived on a train into Juarez at the same hour said the Federals had drawn off to the south.

The battle was marked by an almost incessant artillery fire from daylight until night. All attempts of the Federals at flanking have been repulsed. Cannon of all sizes have been used with terrible effect by both armies. Dead and wounded men and horses are strewn over an area of several miles. Hospitals and hotels in Juarez are filled with wounded waiting permission from the Washington Government to be brought to El Paso for treatment.

A reply to the request of Juan N. Medina, Villa's chief of staff in Juarez on the local Red Cross for aid forwarded to Charles L. Magee, secretary of the American Red Cross Society, is awaited by local physicians and nurses who are ready to move to Juarez and bring the wounded to El Paso hospitals and Fort Bliss. El Paso people have listened all day to the heavy firing, fearful that the tide of battle would lap the thresholds of this city, should the rebels fail to stand their enemy off. All the United States troops in this district are massed along the river front as a precautionary measure, Major R. F. L. Michie, the commander, says: Medina has transmitted the assurances of his chief that there will be no fighting in the border town that will jeopardize American lives or interests.

Notwithstanding this, there is likelihood of a renewal of fighting today. The Federals are said to have numbered 7,000 when the engagement opened yesterday and may have been reinforced from Chihuahua City during the day.

Mexican Rebels Repulsed.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 26.—Three thousand rebels have moved eastward from Torreon. According to the War Department they attacked a federal force under Gen. Argmedo, at Gen. Capeda, about 125 miles east of Torreon, but were repulsed, 45 of them being killed.

Traffic over the main line of the National Railway, which was resumed Monday, after many weeks, has again been interrupted, the rebels cutting the line south of Saltillo.

Lind Goes To Tampico.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26. — President Wilson and members of the Cabinet discussed the Mexican situation briefly yesterday, and assurances later were given that no change in the attitude of the United States toward the Huerta Provisional Government had taken place.

Most important of the day's developments from the American standpoint was the departure of President Wilson's special envoy, John Lind, on the battleship Rhode Island with Rear Admiral Fletcher for Tampico and Tuxpan to investigate conditions, where the British oil interests have been regarded as in grave danger.

The sending of Mr. Lind is generally regarded here as an indication that the United States is extremely desirous to avert any hostile move, and that a thorough examination of the situation would be made before American marines were landed on Mexican soil.

Bribed To Shoot Detective.

TRINIDAD, Col., Nov. 26.—Lewis Zancanelli, under arrest on the charge of assassinating George W. Belcher, a detective who was shot to death on the street here on Nov. 20, has made a confession, according to Adjutant-General Chase. He implicates three organizers of the United Mine Workers of America, who, Zancanelli says, gave him $25 and promised him $1,000 more to kill Belcher.

James Moore Ends Life.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Nov. 26.—J. Moore, aged 31, whose parents live in Toronto, committed suicide yesterday in a rooming house at 66 Bonsall Street. He had just come from Prince Rupert and was suffering from an hallucination that an enemy was pursuing him. He swallowed the contents of a bottle of carbolic acid.

THEY ALL GOT LOANS

Various Concerns Squandered Union Life's Funds

FRUIT COMP'Y GOT $65,000

TORONTO, Nov. 26.—The floating of $785,105 worth of stock for the Union Life Assurance Co. in England in 1911 at a cost of $152,440, or 19 per cent., the circulation of a prospectus in England, which was capable of much misinterpretation by purchasing stockholders, and the extravagant loans and uses of the floated $785,105 through the numerous subsidiary companies controlled by H. Pollman Evans, were the main features of the continued investigation into the affairs of the defunct Union Life Co. yesterday.

In the afternoon, Mr. A. C. Masten, examining Mr. Evans, showed that a loan of $65,000 to the National Land, Fruit & Packing Co., of which Mr. Evans was president, was made by the Union Life Assurance Co. in November, 1911, when the actual worth of the plant and property of the National Company at that time was only $65,238.35.

"How could you advise such a loan?" asked Mr. Masten.

"I was not aware at that time of the exact assets of the National Land, Fruit & Packing Co.," said Mr. Evans, "but I based my opinion of the loan on the valuation of Mr. Harton Walker, who set a value of $110,000 on the properties."

"Is the plant at Mimico still in use?" asked Mr. Masten. When he was told that vinegar was still stored in one of the buildings of the defunct National Land, Fruit & Packing Co., the cross-examiner remarked, "Yes, full of vinegar which is maturing."

Besides the $65,000 loan to the National Land, Fruit & Packing Co., other expenditures, which went to eat up the $785,000 English flotation, were (1) $60,000 loan to the Imperial Loan & Investment Co., which has now an application standing for liquidation; (2) $340,000 loan to the Canada Provident Investment & Loan Corporation, whose assets now are largely shares in the Imperial Loan Co., the National Agency, and the National Land, Fruit & Packing Co.; (3) deposits with the Imperial Loan & Investment Co. from time to time, amounting to $44,000. The rate of interest given by the Imperial Loan & Investment Co. was five per cent.

"Did it not occur to you as head of the Union Life," asked Mr. Masten, referring to these deposits, "that it was a little dangerous to place deposits in a company claiming to pay five per cent. interest on them?"

"The Imperial Loan suggested the deposits and we agreed to it," was the answer.

The point was, as was brought out by Mr. Masten, that these deposits were paid out of the Imperial Loan & Investment the almost immediately they were received.

(4) $60,000 in mortgages was placed in the northwest during [illegible] May, 1911, and September, 1912.

The foregoing five transactions account for over $750,000 of the lost money.

In order to allow E. H. C. Clarkson, the appointed liquidator of the Union Life Assurance Co., to prepare further exhibits and assemble other material from the books of the numerous subsidiary companies, which have only recently been received by Mr. Clarkson, an adjournment of the investigation until Wednesday, Dec. 10, was made by Referee Kappele.

Belgians Ask Concession.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 26.—The first bill to be introduced in the new Mexican Congress was one to ratify a concession to Europeans. The Department of Communications sent yesterday to the chamber for ratification a concession to a Belgian syndicate, to build 5,000 miles of narrow gauge railway in Mexico. This was referred to a committee.

FLOUR RATE TOO HIGH.

Millers Want Ocean Carrying Tolls Reduced.

OTTAWA, Nov. 26.—A delegation representing four of the great milling companies of Canada, the Ogilvie, the Lake of the Woods, the Western Canada, and the Maple Leaf, waited upon Hon. George E. Foster, Minister of Trade and Commerce, yesterday afternoon, and urged that some action be taken to remove the discrimination which at present exists between the ocean freight rates on wheat and flour exported from Canada.

The members of the delegation claimed that during the past year a good export business had been ruined by the discriminatory rates in favor of the raw product charged by the steamship companies. During the past year or so steamship rates had increased from 50 to 100 per cent. The millers did not mind that, but in the same period the rates charged for the carriage of flour were from five to twelve cents per hundred higher than on wheat. This discrimination they held was heavily in favor of the foreign and British miller, who was enabled to take advantage of the low rate on wheat.

Mr. Foster said the Imperial Trade Commission was investigating the general question at present. He would, however, give the matter his most earnest attention.

Whisky Fines Total $900.

COLLINGWOOD, Nov. 26.—Fines aggregating $900 were imposed here last night by Police Magistrate Hogg on various restaurateurs for infraction of the liquor laws. The cases lasted the greater part of two days. Those included in the penalty list were: Cadillac, $300; Globe, $100; Cook's, $200; Dunbar's, $200; Baltimore, $100. Three other cases will be disposed of on Monday next.

BABY ALL COVERED WITH ECZEMA
Could Not Sleep Day or Night. Itched and Burned Terribly. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured in a Month. Also Cured Mother of Salt Rheum.
Quarryville, N. B.—"For a month after my baby was born he could not sleep day or night with eczema. He was all covered with small watery pimples which would break in a day or two and leave a humidity scab that would itch and burn terribly. He scratched so much that he made sores. His skin burned all the time and when the scab came off it left little marks like chicken-pox. At last I saw Cuticura Soap and Ointment advertised. After the first application he rested easier. I applied the Cuticura Ointment lightly and after an hour I would wash him with Cuticura Soap. After a month's treatment he was cured.
"I was greatly troubled with salt rheum on my hands. They broke out in little watery pimples and would be so itchy I could tear them to pieces. Then they would dry up and crack and bleed and when I put them in water the disease would eat in to the bones. They were so painful I had to keep them tied up with cotton rags. I could not do any work. One box of Cuticura Ointment with the Cuticura Soap cured them." (Signed) Mrs. Grattan, July 31, 1913.
Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere. For a liberal free sample of each, with 32-p. book, send post-card to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Dept. D, Boston, U. S. A.

"That Affair Next Door"

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

"I see, I see," he repeated with great dryness, "and I hope the jury will be satisfied. And they probably will, unless they remember the anxiety which, according to your story, was displayed by your wife to have the whole outfit in keeping with the appearance as a working girl. If she was so particular as to think it necessary to dress herself in store-made undergarments, why make all these precautions void by carrying into the house a hat with the name of an expensive milliner inside of it?"

"Women are inconsistent, sir. She liked the hat and hated to part with it. She thought she could hide it somewhere in the great house, at least that was what she said to me when she tucked it under her cape."

The Coroner, who evidently did not believe one word of this, stared at the witness as if curiosity was fast taking the place of indignation. And I did not wonder. Howard Van Burnam, as thus presented to our notice by his own testimony, was an anomaly, whether we were to believe what he was saying at the present time or what he had said during the morning session. But I wished I had had the questioning of him.

His next answer, however, opened up one dark place into which I had been peering for some time without any enlightenment. It was in reply to the following query:

"All this," said the Coroner, "is very interesting; but what explanation have you to give for taking your wife into your father's empty house at an hour so late, and then leaving her to spend the best part of the dark night alone?"

"None," said he, "that will strike you as sensible and judicious. But we were not sensible that night, neither were we judicious, or I would not be standing here trying to explain what is not explainable by any of the ordinary rules of conduct. She was set upon being the first to greet my father on his entrance into his own home, and her first plan had been to do so in her own proper character as my wife, but afterwards the freak took her, as I have said, to personify the housekeeper whom my father had cabled us to have in waiting at his house,—a cablegram which had reached us too late for any practical use, and which we had therefore ignored,—and fearing he might come early in the morning, before she could be on hand to make the favorable impression she intended, she wished to be left in the house that night; and I humoured her. I did not foresee the suffering that my departure might cause her, or the fears that were likely to spring from her lonely position in so large and empty a dwelling. Or rather, I should say, she did not foresee them; for she begged me not to stay with her, when I hinted at the darkness and dreariness of the place, saying that she was too jolly to feel fear or think of anything but the surprise my father and sisters would experience in discovering that their very agreeable young housekeeper was the woman whom they had so long despised."

"And what," persisted the Coroner, edging forward in his interest and so allowing me to catch a glimpse of Mr. Gryce's face as he too leaned forward in his anxiety to hear every word that fell from his remarkable witness,—"why do you speak of her fear? What reason have you to think she suffered apprehension after your departure?"

"Why" echoed the witness, as if astounded by the other's lack of perspicacity, "if she not kill herself in a moment of terror and discouragement? Leaving her, as I did, in a condition of health and good spirits, can you expect me to attribute her death to any other cause than a sudden attack of frenzy caused by terror?"

"Ah!" exclaimed the Coroner in a suspicious tone, which do doubt voiced the feelings of most people present; "then you think your wife committed suicide?"

"Most certainly," replied the witness, avoiding but two pairs of eyes in the whole crowd, those of his father and brother.

"With a hat-pin," continued the Coroner, letting his hitherto scarcely suppressed irony become fully visible in voice and manner, "thrust into the back of her neck at a spot young ladies surely would have but little reason to know is practically fatal! Suicide when she was found crushed under a pile of bric-a-brac, which was throw down or fell upon her hours after she received the fatal thrust!"

"I did not know how else she could have died," persisted the witness, clamly, "unless she opened the door to some burglar. And what burglar would kill a woman in that way, when he could pound her with his fists? No; she was frenzied and stabbed herself in desperation; or the thing was done by accident, God knows how! And as for the testimony of the experts—we all know how easily the wisest of them can be mistaken even in matters of as serious import as these. If all the experts in the world"—here his voice rose and his nostrils dilated till his aspect was actually commanding and impressed us all like a sudden transformation—"if all the experts in the world were to swear that those shelves were thrown upon her after she had lain there for four hours dead, I would not believe them. Appearances or no appearance, blood or no blood, I here declare that she pulled that cabinet over in her death struggle; and upon the truth of this fact I am ready to rest my honour as a man and my integrity as her husband."

An uproar immediately followed, amid which could be heard cries of "He lies!" "He's a fool!" The attitude taken by the witness was so unexpected that the most callous person present could not fail to be affected by it. But curiosity is as potent a passion as surprise, and in a few minutes all was still again and every body intent to hear how the Coroner would answer these asseverations.

"I have heard of a blind man denying the existence of light," said that gentleman, "but never before of a sensible being like yourself urging the most untenable theories in face of such evidence as has been brought before us during this enquiry. If your wife committed suicide, or if the entrance of the point of a hat-pin into her spine was effcted by accident, how comes the head of the pin to have been found so many feet away from her and in such a place as the parlour register?"

"It may have flown there when it broke, or, what is much more probable, been kicked there by some of the many people who passed in and out of the room between the time of her death and that of its discovery."

"But the register was found closed," urged the Coroner. "Was it not Mr. Gryce?"

That person thus appealed to, rose for an instant.

"It was," said he, and deliberately sat down again.

The face of the witness, which had been singularly free from expression since his last vehment outbreak, clouded over for an instant and his eye fell as if he felt himself engaged in an unequal struggle. But he recovered his courage speedily and quietly observed:

"The register may have been closed by a passing foot. I have known of stranger coincidences than that."

"Mr. Van Burnam," asked the Coroner, as if weary of subterfuges and argument, "have you considered the effect which this highly contradictory evidence of yours is likely to have on your reputation?"

"I have."

"And are you ready to accept the consequences?"

"If any especial consequences follow, I must accept them, sir."

"When did you lose the keys which you say you have not now in your possession? This morning you asserted that you did not know; but perhaps this afternoon you may like to modify that statement."

"I lost them after I left my wife shut up in my father's house."

"Soon?"

"Very soon."

"How soon?"

"Within an hour, I should judge."

"How do you know it was so soon?"

"I missed them at once."

"Where were you when you missed them?"

"I dont know; somewhere, I was walking the streets, as I have said. I don't remember just where I was when I thrust my hands into my pocket and found the keys gone."

"You do not?"

"No."

"But it was within an hour after leaving the house?"

"Yes."

"Very good; the keys have been found."

The witness started, started so violently that his teeth came together with a click loud enough to be heard over the whole room.

"Have they?" said he, with an effort at nonchalance, which, however, failed to deceive any one who noticed his change of colour. "You can tell me, then, where I lost them."

"They were found," said the Coroner, "in their usual place above your brother's desk in Duane Street."

"Oh!" murmured the witness, utterly taken aback or appearing so. "I cannot account for their being found in the office. I was so sure I dropped them in the street."

"I did not think you could account for it," quietly observed the Coroner. And without another word he dismissed the witness, who staggered to a seat as remote as possible from the one where he had previously been sitting between his father and brother.

XV.

A Reluctant Witness.

A pause of decided duration now followed; an exasperating pause which tried even me, much as I pride myself upon my patience. There seemed to be some hitch in regard to the next witness. The Coroner sent Mr. Gryce into the neighbouring room more than once, and finally, when the general uneasiness seemed on the point of expressing itself by a loud murmur, a gentleman stepped forth, whose appearance, instead of allaying the excitement, renewed it in quite an unprecedented and remarkable way.

I did not know the person thus introduced.

He was a handsome man, a very handsome man, if the truth must be told, but it did not seem to be this fact which made half the people there crane their heads to catch a glimpse of him. Something else, something entirely disconnected with his appearance there as a witness, appeared to hold the people enthralled and waken a subdued enthusiasm which showed itself not only in smiles, but in whispers and significant nudges, chiefly among the women, though I noticed that the jurymen stared when somebody obliged them with the name of this new witness. At last it reached my ears, and though it awakened in me also a decided curiosity, I restrained all expression of it, being unwilling to add one jot to this ridiculous display of human weakness.

Randolph Stone, as the intended husband of the rich Miss Althorpe, was a figure of some importance in the city, and while I was glad of this opportunity of seeing him, I did not propose to lose my head or forget, in the marked interest his person invoked, the very serious cause which had brought him before us. And yet I suppose no one in the room observed his figure more minutely.

He was elegantly made and possessed, as I have said, a face of peculiar beauty. But these were not his only claims to admiration. He was a man of undoubted intelligence and great distinction of manner. The intelligence did not surprise me, knowing, as I did, how he had raised himself to his present enviable position in society in the short space of five years. But the perfection of his manner astonished me, though how I could have expressed anything less in a man honoured by Miss Althorpe's regard, I cannot say. He had that clear pallor of complexion which in a smooth-shaven face is so impressive, and his voice when he spoke had that music in it which only comes from great cultivation and a deliberate intent to please.

He was a friend of Howard's, that I saw by the short look that passed between them when he first entered the room; but that it was not as a friend he stood there was apparent from the state of amazement with which the former recognized him, as well as from the regret to be seen underlying the polished manner of the witness himself. Though perfectly self-possessed and perfectly respectful, he showed by every means possible the pain he felt in adding one feather-weight to the evidence against a man with whom he was on terms of more or less intimacy.

But let me give his testimony. Having acknowledged that he knew the Van Burnam family well, and Howard in particular, he went on to state that on the night of the seventeenth he had been detained at his office by business of a more than usual pressing nature, and finding that he could expect no rest for that night, humoured himself by getting off the cars at Twenty-first Street instead of proceeding on to Thirty-third Street, where his apartments were.

The smile which these words caused (Miss Althorpe lives in Twenty-first Street) woke no corresponding light on his face. Indeed, he frowned at it, as if he felt that the gravity of the situation admitted of nothing frivolous or humoursome. And this feeling was shared by Howard, for he started when the witness mentioned Twenty-first Street, and cast him a haggard look of dismay, which happily no one saw but myself, for every one else was concerned with the witness. Or should I except Mr. Gryce?

"I had of course no intentionse beyond a short stroll through this street previous to returning to my home," continued the witness, gravely; "and am sorry to be obliged to mention this freak of mine, but find it necessary in order to account for my presence there at so unusual an hour."

"You need make no apologies," returned the Coroner. "Will you state on what line of cars you came from your office?"

"I came up Third Avenue."

"Ah! and walked towards Broadway?"

"Yes."

"So that you necessarily passed very near the Van Burnam mansion?"

"Yes."

"At what time was this, can you say?"

"At four, or nearly four. It was half-past three when I left my office."

"Was it light at that hour? Could you distinguish objects readily?"

"I had no difficulty in seeing."

"And what did you see? Anything amiss at the Van Burnam mansion?"

"No, sir, nothing amiss. I merely saw Howard Van Burnam coming down the stoop as I went by the corner."

"You made no mistake. It was the gentleman you name, and no other whom you saw on this stoop at this hour?"

"I am very sure that it was he. I am sorry——"

But the Coroner gave him no opportunity to finish.

"You and Mr. Van Burnam are friends, you say, and it was light enough for you to recognize each other; then you probably spoke?"

"No, we did not. I was thinking—well of other things," and here he allowed the ghost of a smile to flit suggestively across him firm-set lips. "And Mr. Van Burnam seemed preoccupied also, for, as far as I know, he did not even look my way."

"And you did not stop?"

"No, he did not look like a man to be disturbed."

"Fruit-a-tives" Brought Him Perfect Health

AVON, ONT., May 14th, 1913.

"I am younger since I have been taking "Fruit-a-tives". I was troubled very badly with Piles, Constipation and Stomach Disorder, but I found "Fruit-a-tives" was the panacea for the whole three.

Now I am free of all these diseases and enjoying perfect health, and able to work whenever I like. Five years ago, I started taking "Fruit-a-tives". I took two every night and they worked wonders for me.

No other medicine I could get was so good and I took lots of different remedies before I found out how good "Fruit-a-tives" were.

I keep "Fruit-a-tives" on hand all the time, and am never without them. I even take them with me when I go motoring, so I can have them handy. "Fruit-a-tives" are worthy of every good word I can say about them. The fact that they cured me of Piles, was something to be everlastingly thankful for"

MABEL'S CHITCHAT

What One Woman Thinks of the Suffrage Question.

EDUCATE, NOT AGITATE.

An Up to Date Interpretation of the Old Adage, "A Soft Answer Turneth Away Wrath"—Simple Household Convenience That Saves Time.

Dear Elsa—Our woman's club had its first meeting of the season yesterday, and the guest of honor was a talker of the wordy but unconvincing sort, one who never gets anywhere except on one's nerves. The lady's subject was suffrage, and when she had finished laying down the law that ought to be my feelings were similar, methinks, to those of Henry Ward Beecher, who when subjected in his own pulpit to a like dissertation rose and in a calm, dispassionate manner said to the tired congregation, "And I still believe that women should speak in public."

Nasty remark? Yes, it certainly was. But Mr. Beecher's sense of humor, I believe, was often known to upset his manners.

You asked me in your last letter how I stood on the suffrage question. I stand, to use an Irishism, "on the fence." There is a powerful lot of talk going on among women as to whether they want to vote or not. But, do you know, it seems to me that this is hardly the question. I feel that if it is right we shall get it whether we want it or not. The real question as it appears to me is, Are we prepared to vote if we had the opportunity?

It is a tremendous responsibility we women will have to face if we do get the franchise, and if we are to do the good we are expected to do we must know how to handle the weapon if it is put into our hands.

So strong are my convictions on this subject that I have urged the club committee in charge of entertaining to ask a well known lecturer to give us a course in civil government this winter, so that we may be not only prepared for the ballot if it comes, but should also learn something of the principles upon which various governments are founded. So, dear, in a few months I expect to be a very learned lady in civic affairs. Frankly, now, I do not know whether I want to vote or not, but I do think that in the meanwhile it is better to educate than to agitate.

"The bunch," as Dick calls three or four of the girls who trot around together, were having a heart to heart talk over the teacups at our house the other afternoon, and in some way the old, old story of disagreements between husband and wife was touched upon. Louise D. surprised us all by telling her first experience of this kind and how she met it.

"When Ed and I married," she said, "we had an agreement on this point. We knew that there were sure to be times when things would not run smoothly and we'd have disagreements. We had experienced a little friction of this kind during our courtship, so we made this agreement: If an argument began or if one spoke sharply to the other about anything, no matter what, the second one was to keep perfectly quiet and not 'answer back.' We both realized that it was not what was originally said that made the trouble, but that it was in the 'answering back,' and then, if this was committed on both sides the result was almost surely to be a serious quarrel.

"Well, we agreed to try this quiet treatment if the expected disagreement came, and, sure enough, it did come. It was over a very trivial affair, and I am sorry to say that I was the aggressor in the first case, although I have not always been the first to start it since. He lived right up to his part of the agreement and never said a word, and I felt so ashamed that I could have welcomed a beating. At any rate, that argument stopped just about where it began. I think Ed had the same experience the first time he was the aggressor, and he, too, began to keep a very careful watch upon his tongue. So you see our plan has worked beautifully, not only in helping us to avoid unpleasant discussions, but also from keeping us from beginning them." Not a bad idea, is it? Simply a new way of applying the soft answer adage.

Here's another hint one of the girls of "the bunch" told us about that is worth passing on. It seems that the linen closet in her home is in the hall, and as she could not have a table there she was forced to sort the wash out on the nearest bed and then carry it piece by piece to the closet. This process was both tiresome and not particularly hygienic. Some one asked her why she didn't have a hinged shelf put up. Of course Dorothy never had thought of such a thing in this connection, but the idea germinated into what has been a great convenience in sorting the wash.

A wide, thin board was hinged on to the lowest shelf of the closet, just as a leaf is hinged on to a kitchen table. When this leaf is not in use it goes down flat, but when it is needed for sorting clothes the flap is pulled out, and, with the assistance of a couple of supports underneath, it is made firm for the work in hand. It is one of the very simple contrivances that one so seldom thinks of, but are of such infinite service when found.

I am obliged to stop chattering to you and interview a prospective candidate for culinary honors. Devotedly yours, MABEL.

Edward Young's Tragedy.

In Garrick's time the church had a decided leaning toward the stage. The great actor suffered a plague of stage struck clergymen. He read many of their plays and produced at least one. The Rev. Edward Young of Welwyn parish and of "Night Thoughts" fame wrote a tragedy of "The Two Brothers," which Garrick produced. Its reception was a tragedy. It "was only fit to make an icehouse of a theater." Young, however, had counted his chickens. He had promised £1,000, the expected proceeds of his author's rights, to the Society For the Propagation of the Gospel. And here he shone. He dipped deeply into his private purse and made up the thousand.—London Chronicle.

Keep the Air Fresh.

Nothing causes chills more than hot, stuffy rooms. We often hear people complaining that they took cold when they came out into the night air. Yet it was not the night air which did the mischief, but the poisonous atmosphere in the room itself, due to the accumulated exhalations of many lungs etc. Had the apartment been well ventilated the so called chill would never have occurred.—From "Nervous Breakdown."

FOR THE AUTO VISITOR.

Cinnamon Toast a Dainty That Is Easily Prepared.

It is the frequent experience of the cottager in the suburbs in these days to receive visits unexpectedly from friends who are touring in automobiles, and she finds that she must have something delectable for afternoon tea always on hand. First among dainties easily prepared is cinnamon toast.

Use a cooky cutter of fancy shape and cut thin slices of white bread, spread with butter, then sprinkle thickly with powdered cinnamon and sugar on one side. Put the buttered sides together, sandwich fashion, and toast. This leaves the exposed toasted sides absolutely dry, and the sandwich can thus be eaten without the use of a fork.

Another dainty in the way of a sandwich is called dream cake. This is prepared in the same way except that instead of the cinnamon and sugar a slice of dairy cheese is used as a filling, while a dash of paprika, a little salt and a bit of mustard, if desired, are added.

The combination of Boston brown bread and white bread spread with cream cheese proves also palatable to many and cut in fancy shapes is attractive as well. Chopped nuts may be mixed with the cheese when desired.

Tomato sandwiches are another appetizing adjunct to the afternoon tea table. Cut slices of white bread, but do not butter them. Cut very thin slices of tomato, being careful to choose those not too ripe; add mayonnaise or, if preferred, French dressing.

A combination of tomato, cucumber, lettuce and green peppers, all chopped very fine and made into a paste by adding cream cheese, a little oil and vinegar, pepper and salt and put between slices of graham bread, is also a delicious sandwich.

If one has soft finger rolls ready an extremely pretty way to prepare them is to cut the rolls lengthwise and fill with watercress, well salted. No oil or vinegar is used in this case.

Kitchen Chat.

A preserve for which our English cousins are rightly famous is a combination of greengages and damsons. First of all, a syrup should be made of five cups of sugar, the juice of six very sweet oranges, one-half pint each of brown brandy and port wine. Cover and let simmer for an hour. Allow it to come to a boil then and add two quarts of greengages and one of damsons—the stones having been removed. One teacupful of their kernels, however, is to be added. Again the pan must be covered and the contents allowed to simmer for an hour. Remove from the fire and leave jam to stand over night in the same pan. On the following day bottle the mixture and seal. This is warranted to keep for months if properly sealed. It also makes a good tart filling.

HAD INDIGESTION.

Almost Despaired of Ever Getting Well.

When your food has not been properly digested, your body has not received the benefit it should. The exertions of the gastric juice have been confined entirely to removing the unmasticated, undigested portions of food, which they cannot properly digest as speedily as possible from the body, therefore only giving the blood a small percentage of nourishment with which to feed the tissues. No wonder then that Indigestion and Dyspepsia attack the stomach. No medicine can surpass Burdock Blood Bitters as a cure for this particular disease. It regulates the bowels, promotes perfect digestion, makes pure blood, tones the stomach, and thus restores perfect health to the debilitated system.

Mrs. Mary MacKay, Hunter's Mountain, N.S., writes:—"I was troubled with Indigestion for more than ten years. I tried several Doctor's medicines claiming the power to cure, but all without success. Having heard of the many cures effected by Burdock Blood Bitters, I decided to give it a trial. After taking two bottles I was completely cured. My appetite which was very poor, is now good, and I can eat most everything without any disagreeable feelings. I can strongly recommend B.B.B. to anyone suffering from Indigestion."

She Disguised Herself!

Extraordinary stories are told of the character and exploits of a girl desperado, the leader of a gang of eight international thieves who are in prison in France. At one time she kept a small bar in London, Eng., where she used to tell fortunes by cards. Her real vocation, however, was that of ringleader of a band of thieves, and after having to leave London she was heard of in Paris and many provincial towns, where the gang committed jewel robberies. One of the robbers was a butcher by trade, and stolen jewels often reached Paris embedded in butcher's meat consigned to his care. The girl was finally arrested, and while in prison she set to work to batter her face against the cell walls in order to change her appearance. She smashed her teeth, distorted her mouth, and damaged herself so severely that she almost succeeded in her object of rendering herself unrecognisable as the same woman.

"That's a terrible poison that's been discovered," he remarked amiably to no one in particular.

"What's it called?" inquired an elderly gentleman beside him.

"Why, aeroplane poison, of course!" came the curt reply.

"Is it deadly?" asked the E. G.

"I should say so!" jerked out the juvenile wag.

"And how much would kill a person?" went on the questioning one.

"Oh, one drop!" came the retort.

To While Away an Idle Moment

Expedition Formed to Recover Treasure Ravished by Peruvian Pirates Nearly a Century Ago

WHEN Carl Badendick, a well to do business man of No. 3 Stuyvesant avenue, Jersey City, formerly before the mast in American and British ships, hears from Mr. Jacob Polly, of Cowes, England, as he expects to do before the middle of December, he and a number of adventurous souls will leave New York on an expedition to recover several millions of dollars and much valuable silver and jewels ravished nearly a century ago by pirates from the Cathedral of Lima, Peru. This plunder is believed to be located on the Island of Trinidad, 700 miles east of the Brazilian coast, and of late years best known as the island which Baron Harden-Hickey, son-in-law of John H. Flagler, futilely tried to colonize and then intended to reign over as King James I.

Mr. Badendick, who in manner and appearance is anything but a visionary, may be believed that the Baron, who is now dead, was in reality aiming at the hidden hoard rather than the sovereignty of the island. Mr. Badendick is interested in the venture not because he heard of the story from some unreliable source but because, as will appear from his narrative below, he has visited the island himself under circumstances that lend much plausibility to his belief that the millions supposed to be hidden there are in reality there still. The Jersey City man says that he expects to head the expedition to the Islands and hopes to land there some time around Christmas. The island is uninhabited and belongs to Brazil. Mr. Badendick's story, as told verbatim to the writer and backed up more or less by discharges from the ships he has sailed in, is as follows:

"In May, 1880, I shipped in the barkentine John, belonging to J. Tully, of Sunderland, England, with a cargo of coal for Santos, Brazil. After leaving Santos the crew believed the ship was bound for Bull River, N. C. At the end of eight days we arrived off an island. Captain John Pyper called us and told us we had been steering east instead of north. He told us that the owners of the ship, the Tully firm, had information that a great quantity of money and valuables was hidden on this island. The shipper was ordered by them to conceal this plan from us before, lest any of the sailors going ashore at Santos should talk about it and put the government on our track.

"Captain Pyper told us that if we were willing to aid in the search we should have our proportionate share of the treasure if it were discovered.

"Among those on the John was a passenger—a young man named Polly, as well as I can remember it. He was a son of a retired sea captain living on the Isle of Wight, in England. It turned out that he was to take a leading part in the search for this treasure.

"June 15, 1880, was the day we arrived off Trinidad. The captain had been told there was a place for good anchorage in the Southwest Bay, and he tried this, but the wind was too southerly to make it possible to anchor with safety. The ship kept under sail while a party was sent in a lifeboat to attempt a landing on the island. In the party were Captain Pyper, young Polly, John Adam, Fred Sweeney, John McCarthy and myself. We took water and provisions, rifles and lanterns. There was a heavy wind, and when we neared the shore we found that a thundering surf made an attempt to land the same thing as suicide.

"The island coast is a mass of huge, rocky cliffs, which are in most places more than 3,000 feet high. There are only two small patches of beach on the island. One is at Southwest Bay and the other at Southeast Bay. The former is guarded by a number of rocks, and the surf was tremendous on the southwest side when we went there. We made another unsuccessful attempt to land on the second day. Then young Polly asked the captain to take him as near the shore as possible, and he said he would attempt to swim ashore. Captain Pyper had orders from the owners of the John not to let Polly go ashore alone, and he told Polly so. Then the captain asked the crew if any one would volunteer to swim ashore with Polly, and McCarthy and I volunteered. So on the third day we were taken in the boat to Southeast Bay, and when we got in as near as was safe Polly jumped overboard and McCarthy and I followed him. All three reached the shore safely. We landed at six o'clock. Things were not at all inviting, for the shore was native with gigantic crabs and turtles. Some of the latter, I believe, weighed at least 1,000 pounds.

"The sun had made the sand terribly hot. We had gone into the water in our underclothing, and we were obliged to take this off and bind it around our feet to protect them. The noise of the surf was so great that you could not hear a man speak five yards away. It was dark when we reached the high land, and young Polly told me it would be useless until morning to look for the marks which were to lead us to the treasure. We wandered about the island all night.

"I can hardly tell how hard a time we had. We were continually attacked by huge birds, and had to stay awake to fight them off with sticks. A blow from one of their wings would knock a man down. The place where the treasure was said to be hidden was a sugarloaf, a high pointed cliff on the southwest side of the island. It was not more than six miles across the island at this place, and we got to the base of the sugarloaf early in the morning. South of the sugarloaf there is a deep, dry gully, which leads some distance into the island. Polly told us we were to follow this for a certain distance, looking for marks described in papers which he possessed. We should at last come to a hole leading four feet into the base of the sugarloaf. The treasure would then be found, buried three feet deep at the end of the hole. We followed Polly some way into the gully and found all the marks as he said they would be. At last we came to a place where a large part of the cliff had given way and fallen into the gully. Polly said he believed that this covered the entrance into the hole. We had no tools and there was nothing to do but go back.

"At four o'clock in the afternoon we sighted the ship from the Southwest Bay. Polly was nearly dead. He said he would rather stay ashore and die than to try to swim out again. The ship put off a boat, but she could not get near the shore, so we swam out to a rock in the bay with young Polly and were taken off by the help of a cable.

"The captain consulted us about continuing the search, but we told him it would take a good force of men with plenty of tools and provisions, and that they ought to remain ashore at least two weeks. He decided that he could not afford the time and the risk. There was no safety for the ship as long as she remained near the island.

"For three days after returning to the John young Polly was very sick. When he got well he told us how he was connected with the enterprise.

"His father about 1875 was captain of the ship Aurea, belonging to the Tully firm, the owners of the John, and went to Callao, Peru. On the voyage home he shipped an English sailor named John Smith. This man was taken very sick when the Aurea was rounding the Horn, and found himself at the point of death. Captain Polly's young wife was aboard, and she nursed the man. He was grateful to her for her care and when he felt sure he was about to die he gave her some papers which he said would make her and her husband the richest people alive. He asked her not to look at these papers until twelve hours after his death. He died, and twelve hours later Mrs. Polly gave the papers to her husband. One of them told that Smith had been a member of the crew of a pirate during the war between Chili and Peru. The others of the crew of this pirate ship were eighteen Spaniards and another Englishman. In 1841 the pirates plundered Lima, the richest city in South America, carrying off the plate from the Cathedral and quantities of valuables that had been stored in other places. They carried away their cargo of loot to Trinidad, and were returning to Peru when a British man-of-war captured their ship. The Spaniards were hanged from the yardarm as pirates, but the two Englishmen said they had been shanghaied in Callao, and they were let go.

"Smith, according to his papers, was put ashore in Callao and worked along shore there for many years. But as he was growing to be an old man, he made his mind up to go back to the old country, and fell in with Captain Polly. Another of Smith's papers was a rough map of Trinidad showing where the treasure was hidden.

Captain Polly had to pass Trinidad on his way home, but he had not time to land. In the English Channel his ship was wrecked, but all hands and the ship's papers were saved. Polly told the story to the owners of the ship, and they asked him if he wanted to attempt the search. He said he did not, but he would let his son go some day, and it was in 1880 that the son went in the John, as I have told."

Mr Badendick for many years said nothing about his landing in Trinidad, hoping some day to be able to go there himself and get the treasure. He has corresponded with the British government and with other people in England whose advice and assistance would prove valuable, including the surviving relatives of Captain Polly in the Isle of Wight. In 1911 he was about to leave for Trinidad when he was taken ill and for several weeks was near death's door. But having since recovered his health his desire to get the treasure he firmly believes is hidden in Trinidad has grown stronger, and he says that it is only a matter of a few weeks when he will land on the island and unearth the pirates' loot stored there seventy-two years ago.

Map of Trinidad Island, Showing Where $25,000,000 Treasure Is Buried.

Relics of Ponce de Leon.

A COLLECTION of relics, not related in any way, but each object of which is particularly interesting in itself, is that of Mr. Michael Robinson of Shawneetown, Illinois, to whose treasures was recently added a piece of the coffin in which Ponce de Leon was buried in the old cathedral at San Juan, Porto Rico.

When the leaden coffin of the explorer was examined before it was transferred from the old cathedral to the new one it was found to be in a very poor condition. So insecure did it appear that it was decided a new coffin should be provided. The old one was then discarded and cut into pieces, which were given to persons of prominence who attended the cathedral ceremonies. Cardinal Farley, who was in charge of the celebration, gave one of these pieces to Captain O. P. Townsend, who commanded the guard of honor for the body, and Captain Townsend gave the relic to Mr. Robinson to add to his already interesting collection.

From coins and coins further back in the history of this eminent explorer to other relics which Mr. Robinson treasures, a block of sandstone bearing the clear imprint of the human foot. It was taken from "The Rocks," a short distance from Shawneetown, but over the border line in Kentucky. It is believed in the neighborhood that the imprint is that of prehistoric man.

A third era of the continent's history, that which brings the collection down to the modern world, is represented by an old silk Revolutionary flag.

HUNTING DENIZENS OF THE ARCTIC AMID TREACHEROUS ICE FLOES

CAPTURING walrus, polar bears, brown bears, Kodiac bears, antelopes and strange birds and studying seals at short range, Captain Frank E. Kleinschmidt and his party of eighteen made their leisurely way far northward through narrow straits and difficult ice floes last summer in a three masted schooner fitted with auxiliary power.

The expedition was partly scientific and partly sporting and was unusually successful in both fields. The sportsmen brought back splendid trophies and several museums are the richer for rare specimens that Captain Kleinschmidt obtained. He is an experienced explorer, indifferent to the dangers of Arctic travel and enthusiastic about its pleasures. With him on this trip were his wife, who was born in Alaska, the daughter of one of the first missionaries sent to that country, and their twin children, six years old.

Of the various kinds of sport which men go in search of, Captain Kleinschmidt holds that nothing surpasses the walrus. A member of the party who the year before had been after big game in Africa, where he had shot lions, giraffes, tigers and other animals of the jungle, agreed with him after his taste of the walrus chase on this trip. The element of danger in it is greater than in shooting animals that have to be pursued on land. "There," as Captain Kleinschmidt pointed out, "the man can get in his deadly work before the animal has a chance to do any damage. With the walrus it is different. It is a peculiar animal and comparatively little is known about it. You know it is practically extinct on the Atlantic coast and getting scarcer on the Pacific coast. Why, last summer over nine hundred were slaughtered for commercial purposes in the far northern waters by one company. The skin is valuable for belts and many industrial purposes, and of course the tusks are sought for their ivory.

"The walrus starts north as soon as the warm weather sets in, following the ice. We saw herds of them and pursued them to the ice floe on which they take refuge. The reason why it is so difficult to capture a walrus is that he is hard to kill, and if he is injured he falls off into the water and sinks immediately. One famous experience we had was when we started to fight the walrus in the old way. We put two kayaks, skin boats, together—that makes a fine catamaran—and the Eskimos went out in it to spear the walrus, while I followed in another boat with my moving picture apparatus all ready to take a photograph of the fight. Well, we got one. We moved out toward the ice and suddenly I saw a large cow walrus in the water, which is wonderfully clear. I called out to the Eskimos, and they prepared to spear her. However, she did not wait for them to act, but dived deep and came up under the boat, ripping it with her tusks and cutting through the sealskin leggins of one of the men, gashing his leg horribly. It was fortunate that there were the two boats, for the one was gone completely and the walrus was still diving and coming up with the evident purpose of doing more damage. She was diverted, however, by my boat and dived underneath it, but luckily came up at one side. As she was about to make an attack I fired straight into her face and killed her. She was an enormous creature.

"You can't get a walrus unless you hit it in the head, but you do not need a heavy gun. Many persons blaze away and fill the beast full of shot. A clean shot lodged at the base of the brain from a .30-caliber automatic is about right. Oh, yes, we got enough walrus to satisfy our most ambitious sportsmen and to send some fine specimens to museums in the United States."

Captain Kleinschmidt had very good luck with ice bear shooting. He made a record by getting five of the rare Kodiak bears, four in one place, and he shot three polar bears standing within twenty feet of the camera. One day, when he was trying to get some good moving pictures of a bear capture, a bear swam right through the water, clambered up on the land and came forward to attack the pursuer. Again, when he tried to capture a cub by throwing a noose over it, the mother put up such a splendid fight for it that he let it go. He wanted it, too, as a companion for another cub that he had obtained for a Western zoological park. Several very large brown bears were shot by the sportsmen of the party.

Captain Kleinschmidt pursued one, a female, with two cubs, to the mountains to which they are accustomed to retreat in order to protect their young against the males, which are likely to destroy them. Here, five thousand feet above the sea, he found in a few spots bare of snow the eggs of an almost unknown bird, and later found the bird itself. It is called the furthest north of any known mountain kittiti murrelet. Natives tell stories of "the birds that lay their eggs far up in the mountains on the snow," but they had not been found heretofore by white men. The ornithological studies were very valuable. Many species almost wholly given over to birds were collected and the characteristics of the birds studied. On some volcanic islands where there is scarcely any vegetation the birds' eggs were so thick that the visitors could hardly step without treading on them.

On this trip Captain Kleinschmidt discovered a new kind of mountain sheep. Heretofore, the further north that these animals were found the whiter they became, but this one, which lives the furthest north of any known mountain sheep, is dark colored—a saddle back—and has excellent luck in getting a particularly fine head. They are frequently hunted by grizzly bears, and took pictures of the much coveted [illegible] Captain Kleinschmidt's experiences with seals were as amusing as they were interesting. "Do you see the master there?" he asked, pointing to a large, bold looking seal in a photograph he had taken. "That row of demure creatures are his fatty wives. Oh, yes, a good bull seal will have anywhere from four to forty wives and he makes it his business to keep them in order. Now, this along all right, though. They have sufficient supplies to last them until next summer. One boat was lost entirely. I love the north, but I was grateful to get back this year before it was too late."

Captain Kleinschmidt sent one of the other [illegible] them up and bring them back, and punish walrus flippers, antelope steaks and other delicacies from the north to New York, where they were kept in cold storage for the Canadian dinner.

FAMOUS HOAXERS AND HOAXES

HOAXERS exist in every profession and walk of life; they flourish in every age and clime; they ply their art either as a means of livelihood or from the sole desire to gull the credulous public.

It was the latter which incited that prince of practical jokers, Theodore Hook, to perpetrate the most audacious of all hoaxes, the Berners street hoax, that for a time roused all London to laughter and indignation.

Hook bet a guinea that a certain modest dwelling in a quiet thoroughfare leading out of Oxford street would become the most notorious house in town, and set about winning his wager by addressing over a thousand letters, containing orders to tradesmen, with the request that they would at a certain hour on a certain day deliver their goods at a certain house in Berners street.

Besides the unfortunate shopkeepers, who suffered much loss through damage to their goods, others were included in the "fun." The Lord Mayor, the Lord Chief Justice, the Archbishop of Canterbury and the commander in chief were among the many victims that fell into the trap, and, duly arriving at the appointed spot, experienced most unceremonious treatment amid the turbulent and exasperated throng.

As the result of a bet between the Duke of Montague and Lord Chesterfield that the former would, by advertising an utterly impossible performance, find fools enough to fill a playhouse, it was announced that on January 16, 1749, on the stage of the Haymarket Theatre, a person would get into a tavern bottle, and while there sing several songs.

On the evening appointed for the accomplishment of this marvelous feat the house was packed from floor to ceiling, among the expectant audience being no less a personage than the Duke of Cumberland. For a while all sat in patient silence, but when the curtain not rising, catcalls and whistles soon swelled to open riot. Some one now threw a lighted candle upon the stage, and a general stampede for the front part of the house immediately ensued, and to the relief that ensued the Duke of Cumberland lost his sword.

The papers, especially those of the Jacobite party, made great fun of this affair, and in Old England appeared this burlesque advertisement, having reference to the Duke of Cumberland's loss: "Found entangled in the slit of a lady's demolished trench petticoat, a gilt handled sword of martial temper and temple, but much the worse of wearing, with the Boyy curiously [illegible] the other; supposed to be taken from the [illegible] of a certain great general in his [illegible] retreat from the Battle of Bottle Nobbins in the Haymarket. Who ever has lost it may inquire for it at the sign of the Bird and Bagpipe Land, in Her . . . Lou."

Chapped Hands AND Cold-Sores

Are your hands chapped, cracked or sore? Have you "cold cracks" which open and bleed when the skin is drawn tight? Have you a cold sore, frost bite, chilblains, or a "raw" place, which at times makes it agony for you to go about your household duties? If so, Zam-Buk will give you relief, and will heal the frost-damaged skin. Anoint the sore places at night, Zam-Buk's rich healing essences will sink into the wounds, end the smarting, and will heal quickly.

Mrs. Yellen, of Portland, says: "My hands were so sore and cracked that it was agony to put them near water. When I did so they would smart and burn as if I had scalded them. I seemed quite unable to get relief from anything I put on them until I tried Zam-Buk, and it succeeded when all else had failed. It closed the big cracks, gave me ease, reached the inflammation, and in a very short time healed my hands."

Zam-Buk also cures chafing, rashes, winter eczema, piles, ulcers, festering sores, sore heads and backs, abscesses, pimples, ring-worm, etc., cuts, burns, bruises, scalds, sprains. Of all druggists and stores, or post free from the Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. Price 50c a box.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

THAT OTHER WOMAN

The frosty October day made the cracking fire on the hearth very cosy and very cheerful. They sat before it, Bob Standish and Betty Arnold, two very happy, care-free children for the time being. Standish put his fingers in his vest pocket and drew out a little case of morocco.

"I got the one I wanted, Betty," said he. "I made 'em take it out of that pendant. There wasn't another one like it."

He snapped open the cover of the case and the dancing flames burned in a thousand many coloured reflections in the heart of a perfect diamond.

Standish reached over for the girl's slim hand, but to his utter amazement she drew it back—very gently, but with a determination. Glancing up, he saw her eyes were troubled.

"Oh, just a moment—just a moment before you put it on my finger, dear," she breathed quickly. "I—I—don't know just how to say it. I'm afraid."

"Afraid?" 'he echoed with a boyish laugh. "Of what you dear little Miss Tease?"

"Honestly, Bob," she panted, as he would have snatched her to him. "Oh, please—just a minute—let me be sure!"

She drew away from him. Her face was just the least bit twisted as with pain—for him.

"Yes, that's just it," she said with downcast eyes. "I wan't to be certain that I am sure of you."

"Betty!" he cried, reproachfully. But still she held him off.

"I've—I've heard something," she said. "I don't believe it, but it—it hurts. It hurts till you let me know it isn't so."

He scowled. "Who's been talking now?" he said, almost harshly.

"Mrs. Malvern."

"That—that trouble-monger!"

"Bob!"

"Well, what has she been saying?"

The girl stared long into the fire. Bob Standish saw she was biting her under lip.

"I wouldn't listen to her nor believe it," she said at last. "Still I had to hear some of the things—and—and—thinking them over—the few I did hear — I'm afraid; just the weeniest bit afraid, dear. She said you were buying a whole lot of flowers every Thursday at Rondeau's—that you went away every Thursday in your car right after lunch and—and that you didn't get back until dinner time. She said you always wore your heart on your sleeve and that—Bob!" she said suddenly, sitting very straight, "tell me it isn't so. It's hurt — awfully; more than I'd admit."

His own face became very grave. He kicked back an ember that came hurtling across the hearth.

"About wearing my heart on my sleeve—that isn't so," he said. About the flowers—well, I'll have to admit them."

She looked up quickly. He wasn't looking at her. She felt some vague sense of something dreadful impending.

"Oh," she said.

"And perhaps I had best explain about them before I put the ring on," said he.

She waited silently for him to go on. She did not know she was pressing her hands tightly together.

"It's really all right, dearie," he said quietly at last. "She's an old friend of the family. Her people have met reverses. She's living on gamely, pluckily, on what was left. She isn't asking odds of anybody. I—I wanted to make it just a little easier for her. I want to think that once in a while she has a few of the things she used to have. So every Thursday I blow myself for some orchids for her at Rondeau's, and—yes, I take them to her myself, I might as well own up, for I take her for a spin in the car for a few hours—out to Milville, or over to the old turnpike to that cosy little inn at Bridgton for tea. It makes her forget. It's so very little I do and so entirely innocent. You've forgiven me already, haven't you?"

"I—I don't know," said she, rather hoarsely.

She noticed he stiffened a bit. Then he grinned, she thought to cover his embarrassment.

"She is here in town, then all the time?" she asked.

"Oh, yes."

"Is she pretty?"

He wrinkled his brows as if debating a point in his mind.

"Beautiful is a better word," said he.

Again she looked up. His face was all ashine. She turned away that he might not see how badly she was hurt.

"I don't know why I have not told you all this before," said he. "The very fact I haven't shows how lightly I thought of it. I have meant to tell you at different times, and I certainly should have told you before we were married, because I want to buy her those flowers every Thursday just the same and take her for the spin. You wouldn't mind, would you?"

She flushed beautifully. He caught the sound of a little half-frightened gasp.

"Oh, Bob, I'm afraid I do care," she said. "I'm afraid I'm not a bit broad. I'm selfish. Of course, it's very noble of you and there isn't the least bit of harm in it, still——"

"She's so plucky about it all," he said, as if in self-defence.

She tried to stop them, but two big tears slipped out of her eyes and coursed, one down each cheek.

"Suppose you come and see her with me—now, this afternoon, this minute," he said. "Then you can decide, and I'll abide by it."

"You don't understand," she said hotly. "It isn't that."

"Come just the same," said he.

She shook her head.

"Not if I insist?"

"You wouldn't."

"But I do."

She arose very proudly. "Very well," said she.

She ran upstairs. In a moment she was down again, smiling now, but very coldly, he noticed.

"Yes," he said, shortly, and opened the door.

His car was drawn up at the curb outside. He tucked her in, climbed in himself, and away they spun through the crisp autumn air with its more than hint of frost.

He did not speak; neither did she, watching the streets slip past one after another. At last they shot into the suburbs, turned in at a wide gate, flanked on either side by great stone posts, and drew up before a huge building.

He helped her out, led her up the stone steps and into a wide hall, where a smiling woman came forward to greet them.

"May we see Mrs. Horton?" Standish asked. "I know it isn't my day, but I thought she'd be glad to see us just the same."

"Glad? She'll be delighted as a child," said the woman.

Betty had clutched his arm.

"What place is this?" she whispered.

For answer he led her a few steps down the hall and pointed to a brass tablet on the wall.

"For lonely and aged women whose slender means offer them but scant comfort in the all too forgetful world they have served, the fund for this home is given by Helen P. Corlis."

Later the car whirred down the wide drive through the afterglow of a glorious October sunset.

"Isn't she a dear!" cried Betty, nestling close to Bob. "Beautiful doesn't half do her justice. I don't wonder you hesitated when I asked you if she was pretty.

"You'll let me buy her the flowers and take her joy-riding, then, just the same after we're married?" he asked.

"Indeed I won't," said she with much emphasis. "We'll buy her flowers, and we'll take her motoring, and we'll have her to dinner very, very often. Now, Bob, dear, stop the car right here, and put that ring on my finger."

A YEAR INDOORS

"For thirteen months I was so bad with chronic indigestion that I could not go out of doors. Nerves were wayward, the heart bad and smothering feelings came on till I thought I would choke. Doctors' treatment failed me, so I began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which I thank for my present good health. I am now doing my housework and have a family of ten."

Adulterat d Lime Juice.

Chief Analyst A. McGill, of Ottawa, has been collecting samples of lime fruit juice on a large scale in Toronto for the purpose of analysis, and prosecution will follow where the gross adulteration justifies it.

Lime fruit juice is the fresh fruit juice obtained from the lime fruit, and has specific gravity of 1.030 and not greater than 1.040, and containing not less than ten per cent. of solids and not less than seven per cent. of free citric acid.

Only five samples out of the thirty collected recently fully meet the requirements of the law. Over 30 per cent. of the samples give unmistakable evidence of being adulterated with water. It is the purpose of the department to prosecute largely on the collection of samples now being taken, as warning has been given in the last bulletin sent out. Many samples taken in Toronto, some of them labelled "pure," have been found adulterated. Offenders, who are guilty in this respect, may be more harshly dealt with on conviction for manufacturing adulterated lime fruit juice.

Reindeer Have Escaped.

The efforts of the Interior Department to propagate the raising of reindeer in the Peace River country have not been attended by much success. The animals have stampeded and taken to the tall timbers.

Fifty were brought from Labrador the suggestion originating with Dr. Grenfell. It was thought they would be of utility for transportation and domestic purposes. A report just received states that twelve died en route and twenty-six broke away from the corral last year and eight this year. Only four remain.

Efforts are being made to catch some of the deserters and place them on an island.

Freaks of Nature.

Monument park, near Colorado Springs, Colo., contains some queer freaks of nature. Among the most singular is a group of light grayish-yellow sandstone pillars twenty or more feet high capped with a thin layer of dark colored rock which resemble the tops of giant mushrooms which have shriveled and partially dried up. The dark colored capping being of a much harder (ironstone) rock than the pillars has to some extent protected the latter from disintegration. Especially at nightfall is the traveler impressed with the weird effect of these gigantic and grotesque forms, which in the uncertain light assume the attitudes of huge human or animal shapes.—Argonaut.

A Life Saver.

"No," said the timid man, "I don't want any flying machines today. I'm afraid of them."

"Why, sir," said the persuasive salesman, "a flying machine might save your life."

"How?"

"You might be out riding in one when an earthquake takes place."—Washington Star.

All His Fault.

"Better lap up that spilt milk," said the first cat. "If the missus sees that mess you'll catch fits."

"Not me," said the second feline. "The woman I live with blames everything what happens on her husband."—Pittsburgh Post.

Much Harder.

"It is hard for one to have to live in the past," announced the melancholy man who had retired from business.

"Yes, but often it is harder to live down the past."—Buffalo Express.

Grandma Never Let Her Hair Get Grey

Kept Her Locks Dark, Thick, Glossy, With Sage Tea and Sulphur

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is mussy and troublesome. For 50 cents you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use tonic called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all grey hair disapears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant. You will also discover dandruff is gone and hair has stopped falling.

Grey, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur and look years younger.

Beef is high because we eat so much veal. Veal is high for the same reason. If we'd eat more beef, veal would be higher, and beef would go up accordingly. Do you get the logic?

Was Confined To His Bed For Four Months With Rheumatism.

Mr. W. H. Riley, Ruddell, Sask., writes:—"It is with the greatest of pleasure that I can recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to all suffering with rheumatism. I was so bad with this terrible disease, I was unable to get up from my bed for four months, and nothing seemed to relieve me until a friend recommended Doan's Pills. I had my doubts about them, but was so desperate I would try anything suggested to me. After taking half a box I was able to get up, and after taking two boxes could get around quite well. After taking six boxes I was completely cured, and able to work for the first time in five months, and have not had a touch of rheumatism since. Anyone who saw me then would not know me now, as I am strong and active since taking your valuable medicine."

Doan's Kidney Pills help the kidneys to flush off the acid and poisonous impurities which have collected, and thus clean out the kidneys, and dispel the rheumatism from the system.

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

If ordering direct specify "Doan's."

Irritations and Eruptions of the Skin

Besides that annoying and torturing itching of eczema, you cannot forget that, left to itself, it becomes chronic and spreads over the body.

It is wonderful how quickly Dr. Chase's Ointment affords relief from the itching and sets the healing process in action. Gradually the sores disappear and new, smooth skin takes their place.

Mrs. Nettie Massey, Condeeon, Ont., writes:—"For five years I suffered with what three doctors called psoriasis or chronic eczema. They could not help me, and one of them told me if anyone offered to guarantee a cure for $50.00 to keep my money, as I could not be cured. The disease spread all over me, even on my face and head, and the itching and burning was hard to bear. I used eight boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and I am glad to say I am entirely cured, not a sign of a sore to be seen. I can hardly praise this ointment enough."

Dr. Chase's Ointment owes its wonderful success to the fact that it positively cures eczema. Put it to the test. 60c. a box, all dealers. Sample box free, if you mention this paper. Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

ROMANCE OF PICTURE.

Alex. Crawford of Toronto Finds a Precious Heirloom.

A short notice in a Toronto magazine a few weeks ago in regard to the "Linc of Mar" led to a search in an old sea chest belonging to a gentleman in the north end of that city, and the finding of a letter of January 1, 1870, from the successful possessor of the ancient title of the premier Earl of Scotland, thanking the father of the Toronto citizen for a complete list of the Mar pictures and family relics, and the impression of old Mar seals. Further search resulted in finding the list referred to, giving the names of the different members of the Mar family, whose features and figures had been emblazoned on canvas, in oil, by some of the celebrated artists of the time, such as Rigaud, Lely, Kneller, Raeburn, Jameson and Allan.

On looking at the wall of his little room in the city the gentleman referred to found hanging there a painting representing three children, which he had heard his father say over sixty years ago was by Sir Peter Lely, court painter in the reign of Charles I. and Charles II., being the picture of three children of the Mar family. If such was the case, how could such a claim be proved? The present Earl of Mar and Garioch had a bitter fight before the House of Lords, but succeeded (he being the nephew of the Earl of Mar who had fought at the battle of Waterloo), the unsuccessful claimant being given a new creation by Queen Victoria.

The owner thought it would be as hard a fight to prove the painter of the picture; but by a close examination of the oil painting his fears were dispelled, and, in place of a portrait group by Sir Peter Lely, he found himself to be the fortunate possessor of a beautiful work by Sir Godfrey Kneller, who succeeded to the title of court painter on the death of Sir Peter Lely in 1680. In 1692 William III. knighted Kneller, and in 1715 George I. made him a baronet. His best known productions are "The Beauties of Hampton Court," painted by order of William III., and his portraits of nine sovereigns, Charles II. to George I. of England, Louis XIV., Peter the Great and the Emperor Charles VI. A monument was erected to Kneller in Westminster Abbey, with a highly laudatory inscription by Pope.

Amidst a lot of old paper Mr. Alex. Crawford — for he is the fortunate owner—found a contract of 1697, betwixt Anne Noble and Potent Earl, John Earl of Mar and Thomas Bauchop, for the building of an arch to Tullibody Bridge.

The recent history of the Mar family would be interesting even to Canadians, seeing that on the death of John Francis Erskine, Earl of Mar and Kelly (whose countess was a Monteith), a claim to the earldom was advanced by a gentleman of the name of Erskine, residing near Carleton Place, claiming to be a son of the earl who died about 1866 (the countess having died some years before this claim was made). Erskine alleged he had been taken from Scotland when a baby; nothing came of this. The premier Earl of Mar was married in 1866 to Miss Alice Hamilton of Hilston Park, near Monmouth. They have an only child, a son, Lord Garioch.

Unquestionably the greatest need of the American city today is a hospital service which will not be beyond the means of the average citizen who declines to be an object of charity and who cannot pay the extraordinary charges that are now imposed for private treatment and accommodations.

Money For Harbor Works.

Thirty-five million dollars worth of harbor improvements at the different ports of Canada are now underway, and the 1914 estimates in course of preparation by the Dominion Public Works Department provide mainly for these undertakings. Mr. M. P. Davis recently signed the contract for the Quebec Dry Dock. The cost is $2,721,116.

Stamps Bought $6,749,690.

The postage stamp revenue of Canada for the first six months of the fiscal year was $6,749,690, an increase of $501,164 over the same six months last year, and $4,112,000 greater than the half year ten years ago. The September receipts increased by $128,105 to a total of $1,153,635.

BACKACHE VANISHES RHEUMATIC PAINS GO

Few Doses of Croxone Ease Stiff, Sore Swollen Joints and Muscles, Relieving Backache and Bladder Disorders

If you suffer with backache—have pains in the neck or sides—nervous or dizzy spells—a few doses of Croxone will remove the congestion and you will be surprised how quickly all kidney, bladder and rheumatic troubles will disappear.

Croxone promptly relieves these diseases because it really does reach the real cause. It soaks right into the walls and linings of the kidneys, cleans out the stopped-up, inactive organs, neutralizes and dissolves the uric acid and makes the kidneys sift from the blood the waste and poisonous matter that lodges in the joints and muscles to scrasch and irritate and acute rheumatism. It soothes and heals the delicate linings of the bladder and gives the kidneys renewed strength so they can filter the blood and keep you well.

Croxone is different from all other remedies. It is so prepared that it is practically impossible to take it without results. An original package of Croxone costs but a trifle, and all druggists are authorized to return the purchase price if it should fail in a single case.

Lord Kelvin and the Cable.

The success of the Atlantic cable was due to the calculations and experiments of the late Lord Kelvin, at that time plain William Thomson. He discovered that the current through a long cable would arrive gradually at the receiving end and devised the apparatus which rendered it possible to utilize such a current for making the Morse signals. It was through disregard of his theoretical predictions that the first Atlantic cable, in 1858, was ruined by two powerful currents. Without his mirror galvanometer to translate into visible signals the delicate impulses received through the cable the enterprise would have been a complete failure.

BLIND WOMAN WAS BURNED TO DEATH

OSSINING, N.Y., Nov. 25—Shortly after eight o'clock yesterday morning screams were heard coming from a front room at 14 Waller Avenue.

Miss Phoebe Croft, an aged maiden woman, eighty-four years of age, and living in the same building was awakened and rushed to the bedroom from whence the screams came, to find her blind sister, Mrs. Mary Hopper, sitting in a chair in the middle of the room blazing from head to foot. Heedless of the danger that her own night clothing might become ignited, Miss Croft beat the flames with her hands and endeavoured to lift a rug from the floor, but her strength became exhausted.

The old lady hobbled to the window and screamed for help, and soon drew the attention of Gus Anderson, a man who was passing the house. He dashed into the room and found the clothing had been completely burned from Mrs. Hopper's body. She was unconscious and apparently dead. A doctor was called in, who found the entire surface of the unfortunate woman's body charred, and said death probably resulted from inhaling the flames.

It is thought the woman, being blind, had moved too near a hot stove which was in the room and her dress had caught fire. Confused in her endeavours to reach her sister's room she sat down in a hopeless condition in the chair and waited.

WORK IS GOING ON

Second Ocean Rates Board Needed Say British Officials.

OTTAWA, Nov. 25.—The report of Mr. H. L. Drayton, chairman of the Railway Commission, who went to England to investigate ocean freight rates as affecting Canada, was made public yesterday.

He endeavored to obtain the appointment of a joint commission to make thorough and complete investigation of rates and charges of ocean carriers, insurance charges, the operation of terminal and port authorities, and ocean traffic generally.

To the proposals of Mr. Drayton, the Board of Trade replied that under the circumstances, the board, after consultation with the Secretary of State for the Colonies, felt that it would not be possible at the present time to advise his Majesty's Government to appoint a second commission representing Canada and the United Kingdom, to investigate a subject which is already being examined by the royal commission, and which body will very shortly be taking evidence in Canada.

Premier Cook, who has adjourned the House until after the funeral, yesterday moved a vote of condolence deploring the "loss of a young and valuable life." His death, he said, was a real deprivation to himself, the House and the country.

Tapped Gold Shipment.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Nov. 26.—When messengers from the American Express Co. attempted to deliver a large package of gold eagles to the Dominion Trust Co. yesterday, it is alleged the package was found to be $4,000 short. It is stated that the alleged theft of the money occurred at Portland, Ore., whence the money came to Vancouver. The total consignment was of many thousands of dollars.

IF MEALS HIT BACK AND STOMACH SOURS

"Pape's Diapepsin" Ends Indigestion, Gas, Dyspepsia and Stomach Misery in Five Minutes

If what you just ate is souring on your stomach or lies like a lump of lead, refusing to digest, or you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food, or have a feeling of dizziness, heartburn, fulness, nausea, bad taste in mouth and stomach headache, you can get blessed relief in five minutes.

Ask your pharmacist to show you the formula, plainly printed on these fifty-cent cases of Pape's Diapepsin, then you will understand why dyspeptic troubles of all kinds must go, and why they relieve sour out-of-order stomachs or indigestion in five minutes. "Pape's Diapepsin" is harmless; tastes like candy, though each dose will digest and prepare for assimilation into the blood all the food you eat; besides, it makes you go to the table with a healthy appetite; but, what will please you most, is that you will feel that your stomach and intestines are clean and fresh, and you will not need to resort to laxatives or liver pills for biliousness or constipation.

This city will have many "Pape's Diapepsin" cranks, as some people will call them, but you will be enthusiastic about this splendid stomach preparation, too, if you ever take it for indigestion, gases, heartburn, sourness, dyspepsia, or any stomach misery.

Get some now, this minute, and rid yourself of stomach trouble and indigestion in five minutes.

Switzerland Expels Spy.

GENEVA, Switzerland, Nov. 26.—The Swiss authorities, after a lengthy investigation as the result of complaints made by a number of Governments, have discovered an extensive and cleverly organized international military espionage bureau here. The bureau, it is alleged, was conducted by a French ex-army captain of the name of Lanculer and yesterday he was ordered expelled from Switzerland.

The expulsion order placed Lanculer in an extraordinary dilemma, as, it is asserted, the moment he crosses either of the four frontiers — the French, German, Austrian or Italian —he will be placed under arrest by the officials of the country he enters.

TO EAT NO EGGS.

Chicago Campaign Begins—Hamilton To Join Movement.

CHICAGO, Nov. 26.—The campaign of self-denial in the matter of eating eggs began here yesterday in an effort to reduce the price. It is estimated that 12,444 club women and their families are engaged in the movement, which has for its object the reduction of the price to 33 cents a dozen. Until that point is reached the women have pledged themselves to go without the eggs.

Fresh eggs are selling retail here at from 45 to 49 cents. Speculators are said to control the market. A year ago the women broke the price by selling eggs themselves.

Eleventh Man Is Gone.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—The band of avengers that for eight years have hounded twelve men suspected of murdering Francisco Madenio, an alleged counterfeiter, got their eleventh victim yesterday. He was Joseph Farino, a Brooklyn fruit inspector, found dead with three bullet wounds in a vacant hallway.

Farino's death leaves alive only one of the dozen arrested in 1905 for the murder of Madenio. It was said at the time that Madenio was killed because his murderers feared he would betray them to the police. The dozen men were held for eleven months and then discharged for lack of evidence. Since then eleven of them have been murdered in various parts of the world, one in Chicago, one in Palermo, Italy, and three in Brooklyn.

Get away from the foreboding that every time you enjoy yourself heartily and eat a full meal, that you will pay for it afterward. There is no sense in your not enjoying every meal to the utmost. And you can do so without danger from a protesting stomach if you take the precaution always to have Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets with you. Then if you overeat, or eat something that disagrees with you as the most careful person will sometimes, one or two of these tablets will restore normal conditions in your stomach in a very few minutes.

"I Am Going to Enjoy This Meal For I Have a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet in My Vest Pocket."

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are nothing more than a concentrated form of the natural secretions which the stomach employs in digesting food. And Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets merely step in when the stomach is too tired or too sluggish to perform its functions properly and supply a sufficient quantity of these digestive ferments to digest completely all food, under either acid or alkaline conditions, in the stomach.

It has long been known that the various digestive ferments could be produced as perfectly in the laboratory as in the stomach, but Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are the first attempt outside of certain hospitals, to utilize these discoveries for the benefit of sufferers from indigestion and kindred complaints.

The perfect freedom to eat what you please and as much as you please which Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets gives, has won it thousands of friends who make it a constant, vest pocket companion. Join to-day the vast army of people who have declared their independence of stomach worries. You can get a 50c box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets from any druggist.

A Keen Creative Brain

Has value far above money alone because such a brain can win not only money, but—what money often fails to win—SUCCESS.

Brains are built—same as other parts of the body—from the food one eats.

The ordinary diet often lacks certain elements essential to the well balanced nourishment of both body and brain. Especially is this true of white bread flour, which, to make it white, is deprived of valuable mineral salts in the milling process.

Grape-Nuts

FOOD

made of finest whole wheat and barley, retains the mineral salts (grown in the grain) and other nutritious elements, and thus supplies perfectly what white flour bread lacks.

This lack is often the difference between a weak body and dull, ineffective brains and the strong, keen, creative kind.

Grape-Nuts comes ready to eat direct from package—fresh and clean. Delicious with cream or good milk.

It is a concentrated, easily digested food, and as the cereal part of the usual meal has helped thousands toward a new and successful life.

PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 26, 1913

THE COUNCIL WILL INSIST ON THE CONSTRUCTION OF A SWING BRIDGE

Mr. Burnham's Communication to the Local Press Was Reviewed at Length by the City Council —Will Interview the Federal Member and Then "Wire" for Ottawa.

WAS "STARTLED"

Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., is to be interviewed by three members of the Council. This decision was recorded at a special meeting of the City Council on Tuesday evening after an hour's deliberation, in which the entire Council participated, with the exception of Ald. McIntyre. The latter was absent. The committee who has been commissioned to wait upon the Federal member in accordance with the mandatory resolution of the Council, is composed of His Worship Mayor Bradburn, Aldermen Johnston and Langford.

A Telegram.

Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., submitted the following telegram to the Council on Tuesday evening.

"Montreal, Nov. 25.

"J. H. Burnham, M.P.,

Peterborough.

"Telegram received. To move suggested hundred foot swing span from centre to west end of bridge would be most inconvenient and expensive. Two additional piers would be required and would narrow up west channel about twenty feet, costing $3,000 plus ten dollars for the one hundred and twenty-five fixed span now ready to be placed in position. Would Government be willing to assume this cost.

"F. L. WANKLYN."

His Worship wired to Mr. Wanklyn last evening, asking just what the C.P.R. intends doing. A reply is expected this morning.

A Statement.

Ald. Buller, chairman of the Board of Works, and prospective mayoralty candidate, undertook single handed on Monday last to interview Mr. Burnham in respect to the government's position regarding the C.P.R. bridge, with the result that a communication was precipitated in the direction of the local press. It was this communication or "statement," to use the definition of its author, Mr. Burnham, that prompted Ald. Gordon to request Mayor Bradburn to state his attitude regarding the C. P. R. bridge, which is under the course of erection over the Otonabee river.

Was "Startled."

Ald. Gordon outlined the circumstances incident to the construction of the new bridge. He implied that the communication indicated that someone was seeking "cover," and that the Government was desirous of shifting the responsibility for the construction of a swing bridge upon the City. Ald. Gordon expressed himself as being somewhat "startled" at the position assumed by Mr. Burnham in respect to the bridge question.

His Sole Reason.

Ald. Buller, whom Mr. Burnham referred to in his "statement" to the local press, stated that his sole reason for calling upon the Federal member on Monday last was to find out whether the Government would insist upon the C.P.R. constructing a swing bridge in place of the old stationary bridge, so that the City could make similar provision in regard to the proposed Dalhousie Street bridge. The two bridges will run parallel within a short distance of each other. If the C.P.R. include a swing in their new bridge, then it will devolve upon the City to make a similar provision.

"What's the object of the Government spending several thousand dollars in dredging the channel, unless it is rendered navigable by the use of swing bridges?" inquired Ald. Johnston. "It's a high-handed piece of business and I don't think there is any use in Mr. Burnham trying to shift the responsibility on to the City.

Not Wide Enough.

The responsibility referred to, concerns the Government's apparent disinclination to compel the C.P.R. to construct a swing bridge in accordance with the wishes of the Council. The Company is willing to construct a hundred foot span in the middle or easterly section of the bridge. This would provide a thirty-three foot waterway on each side of the pivot pier. The Council contend that the width is insufficient to accommodate the larger boats with safety owing to the velocity of the current at that particular point. Failing to come to some mutual agreement, the C.P.R. are proceeding with the construction of a stationary bridge. The Council claim that the Government is responsible for the maintenance of the Otonabee river as a navigable stream and that in accordance with an existing agreement, it has the power to enforce the C.P.R. to construct a swing bridge of ample proportions.

Went to Ottawa.

SUPPLIED BLACKLISTERS WITH WHISKY

Ernest Lowes Admitted the Charges and Will Spend the Next Sixty Days in Gaol

OTHER CASES HEARD

Ernest Lowes pleaded guilty to two charges against him in Police Court this morning, and as a result will spend the next 60 days in the County gaol. Lowes was charged with supplying liquor to Herbert Landry, a local young man, who is on the blacklist. He pleaded guilty, and was fined $25 or 30 days in gaol.

"I'll take the thirty days," was the prisoner's remark.

"You are also charged with supplying liquor to Joseph Reynolds, knowing he was on the blacklist," said the Magistrate.

"He drank out of the same bottle," admitted Lowes. He was fined $25 and costs, or 30 days in gaol, on this charge. Lowes expressed the fact that he was not sufficiently prosperous to pay the fine, so that he would have to take the 30 days on each charge. As the sentences do not run concurrently, he will remain a resident at Castle Nesbitt for the next sixty days.

Herbert Landry, who several days ago, was charged with being drunk while on the blacklist, came again before the Magistrate this morning. When before the court a few days ago, he told a fairy story of meeting a stranger on Aylmer street, who gave him the liquor. He was therefore remanded for a week. This morning he was fined $10 and costs.

Joseph Reynolds was arrested the same day that Landry was. Reynolds invented a narrative about Paddy O'Shea giving him two bottles of whiskey. The only reward for his fiction was a remand for a week. This morning he was fined $10 and costs.

"I wish to call yor Worship's attention to the evidence given by Reynolds the other day," said the Chief. "When he swore that he did not see Lowes the day he was drunk."

"Yes, that is perjury," was the Magistrate's reply.

Roland Hill, while under the influence of liquor, established somewhat of a record between here and Lakefield yesterday. He left the city at 4:30 o'clock, drove to Lakefield where he transacted some business, and was back in the city at 6:30 o'clock. This means that he covered the 20 miles in somewhat less than two hours. Had he not collided with two or three other outfits on his return to the city, and created a brief reign of terror on the main streets, Hill might never have been arrested, and the world in general would still be in ignorance of his achievement. But fate decreed otherwise, and overlooking his turf accomplishment, Magistrate Dumble fined him $5.75 for being drunk in charge of a rig, to which charge Hill pleaded guilty.

Edward Kimble, a blacklister, should have appeared to answer to a charge of being drunk. He did not, so the case was enlarged until to-morrow.

In the Business Men's League the Browns and Bowlers put up a stellar game last night. At full time the score stood twelve all and in the overtime period the Browns slipped in four baskets and won the game, by 16—12.

The Employed Boys' contest between the Grants and Rovers was won by the Grants, 14 to 4.

The Senior League game for to-night is Saw Bones vs. Financiers.

Health Talks.

Dr. A. W. McPherson will address the Senior Gymnasium Class to-morrow. The subject will be "The Heart."

A Dance Dress and Another.—The left-hand figure wears a dance-dress made of very soft mousseline-taffetas, gathered up into three layers of puffs on the skirt, the bodice of draped tulle is held into the figure with a high belt and a bouquet of roses in front. The frock on the right, composed of flesh-coloured chiffon and fine white lace, has a double tunic and draped skirt, bordered with ermine.

THE CITY COUNCIL DECLINES TO ESTABLISH PRECEDENT BY RECOGNIZING CHURCH AFFAIRS

Rev. James Price Makes Application For a Civic Reception--"Let the Honest Ratepayer Shovel His Own Snow"--Council Voted $100 to the Lakes Disaster Fund--Outbreak of Typhoid Fever.

The Rev. Jas. Price of St. George's Anglican Church waited upon the City Council on Tuesday evening, with a view of ascertaining whether the Council would tender the Hon. Sir John M. Gibson and Lady Gibson a civic welcome. The distinguished visitors will officiate at the formal opening of the Grand Bazaar, which is being held in the Armouries on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week.

"If we undertake to give the visitors a fit and proper reception, it will resemble a village tea party. If you do it," said Mr. Price, addressing the Council, "it will be a state affair."

The Mayor objected to this procedure upon—the grounds that it would establish a precedent, if the City commenced to recognize Church affairs.

"You can't get the Lieutenant-Governor every day," countered Mr. Price.

On motion of Ald. Buller and Duffus the matter was left in the hands of Mayor Bradburn and the Reception Comitte of the City Council.

Mr. Price obtained permission to put up a streamer across George Street.

The Honest Ratepayer.

The snow-ploughing by-law was given its third and final reading. "Let the honest ratepayer get out a little earlier in the morning and shovel his own snow," was Ald. Gordon's comment.

Voted $100.

The sum of $100 was granted to the Lakes Disaster Fund. Doubt existed in the minds of some of the Aldermen as to the actual amount of money that was devoted to the aleviation of the sufferings of the widow and orphans. Ald. Green opposed the grant on general principles.

Ald. Gordon's legal mind evolved the possibility of holding the Shipping Companies liable, as the wrecked ships in nearly every instance had left the harbours with the storm signals opposed to them.

Deputations.

Messrs. Morrison and Penrose waited upon the Council with the request for a number of improvements in the neighbourhood of Bolivar and Sherbrooke Streets. The desired improvements include the diversion of a water channel, the construction of a crossing on Sherbrooke Street, between Park Street and the boundary and the construction of the proposed new street on the west side of the property recently acquired by the City for that purpose. The Council promised to visit the locality and ascertain the need for the proposed improvements.

Outbreak of Typhoid.

The Council recommended the installation of a water service on McDonnell Street, west of Park Street. An outbreak of typhoid fever was reported from that district recently. It was attributed to a number of wells that were believed to have been contaminated. A petition, signed by a number of Walton Street residents, was referred to the Board of Works. Also the matter of settling the differences between David Conroy and City, in respect to the Romaine Street sewer.

Wants Recognition.

Mr. C. E. Adams wants to know whether the City will recognise his claim for damages alleged to have resulted to his property in East City as the outcome of the construction of a railway siding.

The matter was referred to the Legal Committee.

The Vermont Marble Company, through their solicitors, Peck, Kerr and McElederry, have applied to the City for a conveyance of the property now occupied by the Company. The conveyance will be executed as soon as the necessary arrangements can be made.

Those present at the meeting were His Worship Mayor Bradburn, Aldermen Anderson, Langford, Johnston, Green, Duffus, Gordon, Gillespie, Duncan and Buller.

Alterations At The Royal

Will be Made Big Enough to Accommodate 1100 People

A Toronto architect is here just now looking over the Royal Theatre with a view to arranging the plans for the alterations which Manager Clayton proposes to carry out. The architect states that the Royal has the same frontage as the Grand Theatre in Toronto and can be made a prettier theatre than that well known amusement place. He estimates that he can provide accommodation for 1,100 people. The Royal will, of course, have to be closed while the alterations are under way.

NO HOPE FOR SETTLEMENT AT PRESENT

Examiner Special:

SCHENECTADY, N.Y., Nov. 26.—There seems to be no hope for an immediate settlement between the General Electric strikers and their employers to-day. Pickets are guarding the shops, and there were some minor riots about eight o'clock this morning.

LIVERY STABLE FIRE GAVE FIREMEN AHARD BATTLE

Jas. Akey's Barn Gutted Last Night By Fire That Broke Out in the Loft—Will Continue Business in Same Place.

ONE MAN INJURED

Jas. Akey's livery barns on Chambers street were gutted by fire which broke out in the hay loft last night at ten o'clock and swept through the upper storey giving the brigade one of the most stubborn battles with which they have had to contend in a long time. Mr. Akey lost all his hay and oats, but rescued his stock, harness and vehicles.

Mr. Fred Rishea, of the Examiner press room was eating his lunch at ten o'clock when he noticed flames shooting from the upper part of the barns, and immediately ran across Chambers street to the barns, and rushing into the office asked Mr. Akey if he knew his barns were on fire. The latter immediately called the fire station and running out into his stables saw at a glance that to fight the fire was out of the question. He began opening the gates of the stalls and leading out the horses.

The floor of the loft was on fire in a number of places and sparks were falling into some of the stalls. Mr. Akey was struggling against time, and fortunately a number of citizens rushed into the place and joined him in the work. Mr. Jas. R. Bell got eight of the horses out and worked at top speed. It looked for a time as if the fire would stop the rescue work, but no one ceased working until every stall was emptied and the harness and buggies out on the street.

There was nothing slow about the way that Messrs. Akey, Bell, Frank Eano, and others cleaned the barn of moveables. And it all happened in only two or three minutes, so far had the fire advanced before it was noticed. In addition there was a very strong wind which fanned the flames at a great rate.

The loft had been recently filled with hay for the winter's use and was a raging furnace by the time Chief Howard's men turned the water into it. Chambers street was a flue for the smoke from the building, and dense clouds filled it. Sparks were carried through the air to the north and east, and the situation looked serious for a time.

Mr. Akey's Story.

To an Examiner reporter Mr. Akey stated this afternoon that he had no idea of the origin of the fire unless it started from a switch in a wiring circuit. He was sitting in his office at his books. Mr. C. Fleetwood was with him. They heard one of the horses pawing and Fleetwood went out to see what the trouble was, and on opening the door between the barn and stable saw that the loft was on fire. Mr. Akey called the Fire Department and immediately ran out and began bringing his horses out.

Mr. Harry Graham, the only one injured in the fire, was in the barn when a reporter arrived on the scene. His hand was cut and his clothes and general appearance intimated that he had received a scorching. He was taken to Dr. Carmichael's office where he received medical treatment.

Mr. Akey lost five single and one double sets of harness that were upstairs in a box, but saved all his buggies and horses and the harness that were on the pegs in the stable.

The hay in the loft is practically useless. Mr. Akey will continue to do business in his present stand and his friends will be pleased to know that his loss is slight in comparison to what it might have been.

"If I hadn't been here, I guess I would have lost everything," Mr. Akey stated.

At his home, on Water Street, it was stated to-day that Mr. Graham was resting easily and that his burns were not considered serious.

Among those who joined the firemen in the fight were Al. Spensely, Captain of the De Laval Fire Brigade, who had three of his men assisting him; Ald. Duffus, who is an honorary member of the Department, and Adjutant McElhenny of the Salvation Army.

The barn is the property of the Bradburn Estate. Mayor Bradburn estimates the damage at about $1000, which is covered by insurance.

C. G. E. WILL SPEND $150,000 IN EXTENSIONS

Providing the City will Concede the Right to Construct One Mile of Electric Railway Track

FOR TESTING PURPOSES

That the Canadian General Electric Company is prepared to expend $150,000 in extensions, providing they receive from the Council permission to construct one mile of track, was revealed to the City Council on Tuesday evening. The Company has recently secured a numbr of large contracts for the construction of electric locomotives. Owing to the lack of testing facilities at the Peterborough plant, the contracts in question have been turned over to the parent firm, which is located at Schenectady, N.Y. The Company is desirous of manufacturing electric locomotives in Peterborough. In order to achieve this purpose it would be necessary to have at least one mile of trackage for testing purposes.

A Suggestion.

The matter was brought to the Council's attention in the form of a communication from Mr. Frederic Nichols, General Manager of the Canadian General Electric Company. Mr. Nichols suggested that the track be constructed on the west side of Monaghan Road, running from King Street to the C. P. R. tracks.

The track would only be used on occasions when it was necessary to test the locomotives.

Ald. Duncan suggested that a portion of the abandoned G. T. R. track north of the Margaret Cox Home, be utilized by the Company for the purpose required.

The Council decided to look over the ground in company with Mr. W. G. Howden of North Monaghan and report back at the next meeting of the Council.

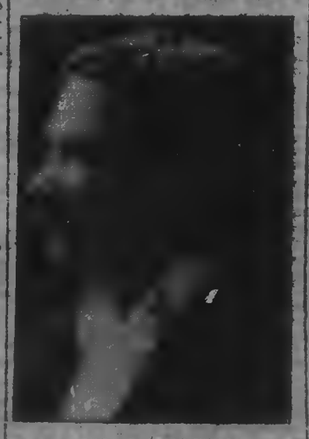
BASKET SOCIAL WAS A SUCCESS

A very successful basket social was held last evening in the schoolroom of St. Luke's Church, under the auspices of the Girls' Auxiliary. A large number was present and an exceedingly pleasant time was spent. The Rector, Rev. F. J. Sawers, M.A., occupied the chair, and introduced the following numbers.

Piano solo—Miss K. Leary.
Vocal solo—Miss E. Adams.
Recitation—Miss Kathleen Vincent.
Vocal solo—Mrs. James McDonald.
Vocal solo—Mr. F. Heafield.
Piano solo—Miss Lillian Calder.
Reading—Miss Clara Adams.
Vocal solo — Master Sam Whitehouse.

Following the programme, the baskets, creations of the most artistic beauty, were offered for sale. Mr. Sid Gibbs acted in the capacity of auctioneer, performing his duties most creditably. A considerable sum was realized in this way from the sale. The contents of the baskets, consisting of a choice and varied assortment of dainties, were greatly enjoyed by the buyers and the fair donors of them.

The singing of the National Anthem brought to a conclusion a very happy evening.



MR. R. J. DEVEY

Conductor of St. George's Choral Society which gave its annual autumn concert last evening.

PHOTOGRAPH OF C. G. E. SWITCH BOARD DEPT

A very interesting and artistic group photograph of the members of the Switch Board Department of the C.G.E. has just been completed from the Orme Studio, Charlotte street. The twenty-five individual pictures were photographed cabinet size and afterwards reduced and carefully arranged for an equal number of pictures 11 by 14. The sitters were delighted with the life-like likenesses and the skillfully arranged grouping.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unparalleled."

WEDNESDAY, NOV. 26, 1913

DENY AND DISPROVE.

Mr. Rowell reiterates again in East Middlesex that the Whitney government and the liquor interests are allies—that the latter made two contributions to the Conservative campaign fund in the previous East Middlesex bye-election. He says that if any member of the government will deny this statement, he will move in the House for an investigation, and will prove it is true. The government cannot afford to ignore so serious a charge. They must deny and disprove it—if possible.

A NEW DEPARTURE.

Those in Peterborough behind the Laymen's Missionary Movement are taking a leaf out of the book of the worldly-wise. The appearance of the Laymen Missionary advocates in the advertising columns of The Examiner is not to be regarded as an exhibition of unfaith in the ordinary medium of appeal—the pulpit, etc. It is a frank recognition of the power of the press; of the benefit of judicious advertising, which is evidently considered capable of being made as effective in moral as in business enterprises; if indeed we can disassociate missionary propagandism from business. Business and Christianity are closely associated. Our blessed Lord felt the compulsion, "To be about my Master's business," and the Laymen interested in the business of Gospel propagation cannot do better than resort to effective promulgation of the claims of the mission enterprise upon all Christians. This exercise of the wisdom of the serpent on the part of the laymen is certainly a new departure. It is perhaps the first instance of the direct commercial employment of the press through its advertising pages, to the promulgation of religious appeal. The advertisements of the Laymen, which will appear in The Examiner during the present week are commended to all interested in the Laymen's Missionary Movement; and more specially commended to those not now interested; for the arguments they contain may well appeal to the indifferent or hostile to one of the characteristic impulses of the age, and perhaps arouse a now dormant or absent interest.

CANADA CAN DO THINGS.

Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, somewhat supercilliously declared Canada's incapacity for building ships. He, perhaps, got his inspiration from Mr. Borden, who said Canada would not be capable of building ships within twenty-five or fifty years. Both are wrong. A despatch on this page describes the interest excited at Port Arthur by a trial trip of what is described as the finest ship on the Great Lakes. It did not take 25 or 50 years to build this ship in a Canadian shipyard—its keel was laid on October 24th, 1912, and it was launched on June 2nd, 1913. The whole is the product of Canadian material shaped by Canadian workmanship. If, in the course of ordinary business enterprise, Canada can do so well in shipbuilding, is it not certain that with specially equipped ship-building yards, Canada could, in the beginning build most of the ships needed for a Canadian fleet unit, and with experience, and in a short time, be able to build any sort of craft demanded?

We need the Canadian statesmanship that has faith in Canada and her resources and capacity for achievement. If Sir John Macdonald, a generation ago, had had so little faith in Canada's capabilities we should have had no Canadian Pacific Railway—built by Canadians. If Sir Wilfrid Laurier, a dozen years ago, had Mr. Borden's little faith we should not have now had the second transcontinental railway—built by Canadians. If the builders of the Canadian Northern had been of the shrinking, hesitating, halting mind of Mr. Borden, we should not have had the now almost completed, the third transcontinental railway—built by Canadians—all monuments to Canadian enterprise and capability, and all destined to prosperous operation in the development of the practically inexhaustable resources of Canada. If Canadian statesmen of the past had had the unfaith of Mr. Borden we should not have had the most splendid system of canal transportation in the world—built by Canadians.

Mr. Borden is self contradictory. In continuing the great work of Welland Canal enlargement he is making Canadians do a far greater work than building Dreadnoughts. If he were logical, he would hand over the fifty million the enlargement will cost, to the Mother Country, to expend for us. Nothing could be more craven than Mr. Borden's attitude towards the ability of Canada to build warships, nor anything more brazen than Mr. Churchill's declaration to the same effect.

Borden Policy Denounced As Centralization

Comparison of statements by leading Imperialists in Great Britain and of Mr. Borden in Canada leads irresistibly to two conclusions—that Mr. Borden is absolutely wrong in his centralizing naval policy and that his whole trend of thought is of a reactionary nature, repellent to the mother country as well as to Australia, New Zealand and South Africa. Mr. Borden has out-Toried the Tories in his anxiety to get back to conditions which made the Family Compact a name of evil repute in Canada.

Mr. Richard Jebb, the famous English naval and imperial authority, on November 4th, issued an appeal to the British admiralty to abandon "Its present policy of naval centralization and return to the plan of well organized co-operative alliance as laid down in the admiralty memorandum to Sir Wilfrid Laurier in 1909."

Proceeding, Mr. Jebb says: "Free choice for Britain and compulsory choice for the Dominions. Is that their prescription for securing unity of the Empire until federation? The difference between 'may' and 'shall' is just the difference between the late liberty which made and sustained the present Empire and the new intolerance which by the abuse of loyalty would turn the Dominions into subject countries."

Admiral W. H. Henderson—"Until Imperial federation is secured, which will, I think, take much longer than ten years, the only form of naval policy under existing conditions which the motherland and her daughter nations can adopt must be on the lines undertaken by the Australian Comomnwealth. . . the question is one of 'no taxation without representation' by ignoring which we lost the American colonies."

Admiral Freemantle . . . "The admiralty at the request of the Commonwealth sent out Sir Reginald Henderson to confer with the Australian government, and his proposals, though thorough and entailing heavy expenditures, were accepted by all parties, and were carried out by the Labour government loyally, so that the Australian unit is now in a fair way to completion while suitable defence and training establishments are being established. Surely this is an object lesson in the right course to adopt, and the enthusiasm of naval defence in the commonwealth is in strong contrast to the unfortunate political difficulties (in which Premier Borden has been involved in his endeavours to meet the Admiralty's views."

In the light of these statements how wide of the mark are the words of Premier Borden, on the closing day of parliament. . . "In view of the fact that these proposals were made by the Government of Canada upon information which they had received from the British government through the Admiralty, which they regarded as disclosing grave conditions, it may be possible in the future to make right that which has been made wrong at the present . . . it is the firm intention and determination of this government. . . to bring down at a later date proopsals for the acquisition or construction of three battle-ships as was prooposed in the Naval Aid Bill of 1912. . . Canada will take over and pay for and acquire these ships and will place them at the disposal of His Majesty the King."

CANADIAN BUILT FINEST ON LAKES

PORT ARTHUR, Nov. 24. — The giant steamer Noronic, 385 feet long, the finest ship on the Great Lakes, plowed the waters of Thunder Bay and Lake Superior for the first time when at 2 o'clock this afternoon she left the Port Arthur drydock for a two and a half hours' tour about the bay to allow the adjustment of her compasses by Captain Morrison of Sarnia.

She will load flour at Fort William and leave for Sarnia, to be delivered by the drydock company to her owners, the Northern Navigation Company.

Thousands of people looked on as the big steamer cruised around the bay this afternoon.

The keel was laid October 24, 1912. She was launched June 2, 1913. The rapid construction reflects a great deal of credit to the local shipbuilding plant, Canadian workmanship and Canadian material.

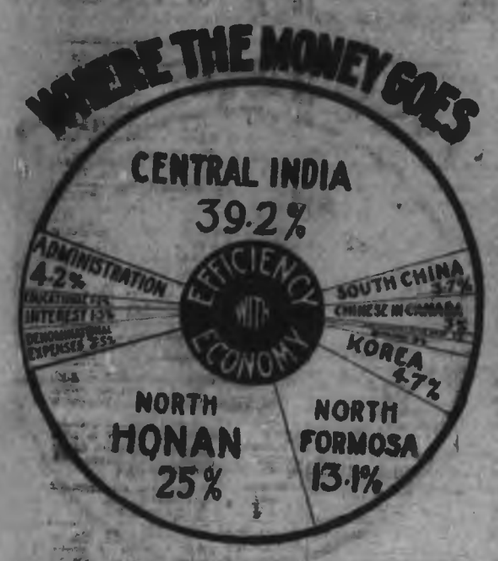
How Much of the Money Given for Missions Ever Reaches the Foreign Field?

Does It Not Require $9 to Send $1 Abroad?



The Expenditures of the Presbyterian Church on Foreign Missions

¶ There is a general impression that mission funds are handled inefficiently—that it takes a lot of money to send mission funds abroad.

¶ The facts are: Few, if any, business enterprises are handled as economically or obtain as large returns for the money expended as do our Home and Foreign Mission Boards.

¶ Note the two diagrams on this page: The smaller one shows how the money spent by the Presbyterian Church in Canada for Foreign Missions is apportioned. This church has been made responsible for conducting the work of evangelization in certain mission fields. Other denominations are responsible for other mission fields. Thus the work has been organized and placed on a business basis. Overlapping is thereby avoided. Note that out of every $100 raised for foreign missions only about $9.00 is required for all purposes not directly missionary in character and that only $4.2 is required for purely administrative purposes.

¶ The large diagram to the right shows how the money raised for both home and foreign missions by the Church of England in Canada is expended. Note that only $4.5 dollars is required out of every $100 raised for purely administrative purposes, and that $90.2 out of every $100 goes direct to the mission fields. That record speaks well for the manner in which missionary funds are handled.

¶ The great Methodist and Baptist denominations have records that are equally creditable.

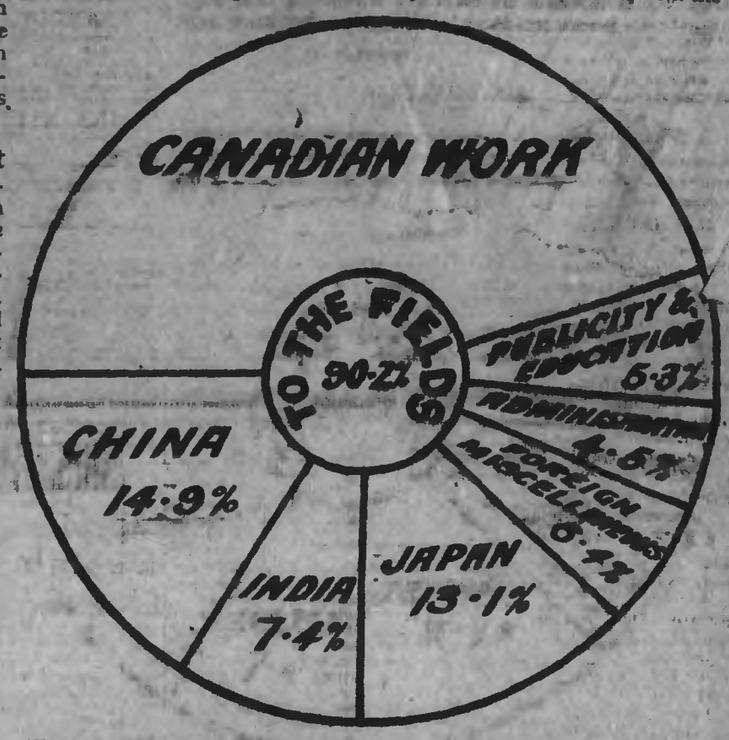
MOST OF THE MONEY IS SPENT AT HOME.

¶ Some people have an impression that Protestant churches spend most of the money they raise for missions on the foreign fields. The reverse is the case. Note once more the large diagram. This shows that 48.3% out of 90.2% is spent on the Canadian mission fields. In addition large sums are spent in Canada on the colleges and for other special work connected with the church the expenditures on which are not included in those dealt with in the diagram which refers to home and foreign missionary expenditures only.

¶ The Methodist Church in Canada expended last year $384,253 on home missions and $297,982 on foreign missions, not including some special expenditures for hospital purposes. In addition several hundred thousand dollars was spent for special work in Canada by the home church.

¶ The Baptists of Ontario and Quebec alone last year gave to home missions $122,446, foreign missions $75,628.25.

¶ Out of $1,200,000 apportioned by the Presbyterian Church in Canada for work this year, $325,000 was set apart for foreign missions, $425,000 for home missions and $450,000 for other work connected with the home church in Canada. Thus the work of the home churches is not being neglected



The Expenditures of the Church of England in Canada on Home and Foreign Missions

GENERAL SIR CHARLES WARREN, Governor of Natal: "For the preservation of peace between the colonists and natives, one missionary is worth a battalion of soldiers."

SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, Governor of Cape Colony: "I have relied more upon the labors of the missionaries for the peaceful government of the natives than upon the presence of British troops."

LORD JOHN LAWRENCE, Viceroy of India: "Notwithstanding all that the English people have done to benefit the country, the missionaries have done more than all other agencies combined."

APPEAL IN LOCAL CASE DISMISSED

The appeal of Edward Sanderson against the decision of His Honour Judge Huycke, in the case of Sanderson vs. Gillespie, heard in Toronto yesterday, was dismissed with costs.

Mr. J. G. Smith of Toronto, appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. F. D. Kerr, for the defendant.

It will be remembered that on the 11th of June, the case came before His Honour Judge Huycke, in the County Court here. In the case Sanderson claimed the sum of $250 from Mr. George A. Gillespie. Mr. Gillespie had bought the Sanderson farm, and also arranged to buy the stock of the farm on the 1st of March. Mr. Sanderson, however, was to remain in charge of the farm and stock until Mr. Gillespie's brother returned from the west. An agreement was signed to that effect, but in it nothing was said as to who should be responsible for the lives of the stock until March 1st. Before that date one of the horses was killed in an accident, and Mr. Gillespie refused to pay for the animal, which was valued at $250.

Mr. Sanderson contended that as Mr. Gillespie had given him notes for the money, he was owner of the horse when it was killed, and entered suit for the $250.

The defence claimed that it was through Mr. Sanderson's negligence the horse was killed. This was upheld by the judge, who refused to allow the plaintiff's claim. Mr. Sanderson appealed against the judgment of the court but the appeal was dismissed in Toronto yesterday.

MINERS ARE ACQUITTED

Special Wire to The Examiner.

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C., Nov. 26.—Two of the one hundred cases against the striking miners were ended here last night with a verdict of not guilty, which was received with an ovation and cheers in the court-room.

ALD. BULLER WILL ENTER THE CONTEST

Ald. W. H. Buller has signified his intention to enter the mayoralty contest. He will be opposed by Ald. G. A. Gillespie. This move will leave a vacancy in both the centre and south wards and will ensure at least a couple of new faces on the Council Board of 1914. Mayor Bradburn, who has declined to enter a mayoralty contest, will in all probability retire in view of the present trend of events.

A TREAT FOR MUSIC LOVERS

Mr. Rupert Gliddon, director of the Peterborough Conservatory of Music, and Mr. G. C. Wainwright have completed an engagement by which the music-lovers of Peterborough will be afforded an opportunity of hearing Miss Florence Hinkle, the famous American soprano, who for the past three years has been the soloist at the concerts of the Mendelssohn Choir in Toronto. Miss Hinkle will appear here in the Grand Opera House on January 16th in conjunction with the orchestra of the Conservatory of Music. Miss Hinkle is an artist of the first rank; she has been associated with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Philadelphia Orchestra, has toured with the Theodore Thomas Orchestra of Chicago and the New York Symphony Orchestra. She has sung in oratorio with the New York Oratorio Society, and has appeared in concert engagements all over the Continent.

WILL ACT AS ARBITRATOR

Hon. Wallace Nesbitt, of Toronto, has been retained by the Peterborough Light and Power Company to act as arbitrator in the arbitration proceedings between the City and the company. Mr. R. A. Ross, of Montreal, has been retained by the City to act in a similar capacity.

CABINET CHANGES TO BE HELD OVER

Examiner Special:

OTTAWA, Nov. 26.—Owing to the forthcoming bye-elections it is understood here that the proposed Cabinet changes and Upper Court Judgeship have been laid over till after the New Year. Among the Ontario men affected by the postponment is E. A. Lancaster, M.P., for Lincoln, who, it was expected, would receive a judgeship.

CHICAGO IN DARKNESS AT THE NOON HOUR

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 26.—This windy city was to-day a city of midday darkness, for at noon all street cars had to move about with headlights, gleaming to prevent collisions. There were several accidents even at that. The weather experts said that the inky darkness was caused by a low barometer pressure—combined with Chicago's famous smoke. It is expected that showers this afternoon will give relief.

MOTOR CARS COLLIDE AND FOUR ARE KILLED

Examiner Special:

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—Leonard Cohen, a prominent merchant; Thomas F. Dennie, member of the New York State Legislature, and two unidentified young women were instantly killed and another young woman named Stella Nelson is to-day dying as the result of two motor cars, going fifty or sixty miles an hour on Pelham Park way, crashing together just after midnight. The other occupants, including the drivers, are dangerously injured and will be maimed for life. The machines came together when each turned out to pass the other. Cohen's wife, who is in Pittsburg, collapsed when she heard of her husband's death.

SUBJECT TO BE GIVEN SPECIAL ATTENTION

From His Honour Sir John M. Gibson, Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario.

To the People of Ontario.

The Honourable, the Minister of Education for the Province of Ontario, has recommended that on Friday, November 28th, the trustees and principals of all the schools throughout the province shall call special attention to the subject of tuberculosis and the imperative duty of combatting and, within the shortest possible time, wiping out the disease from amongst us.

The Ministerial Associations of Toronto and the Churches of the Province have set apart November 30th as Tuberculosis Sunday. In probably 1,000 Churches throughout Ontario special reference will be made on that day to the effective work being done by the National Sanitarium Association, in their thoroughly equipped institutions in Muskoka and Weston, as well as by other associations and agencies, toward prevention and cure of tuberculosis.

This wide-spread campaign should be most influential in intensifying the already deep interest in the battle for stamping out the white plague. Having intimate knowledge of the work being done by, and the plans for the future of, the National Sanitarium Association, I do not hesitate to urge and exhort the Ministers of every Church, and the Trustees and Principals of every school throughout the Province, to give their heartiest co-operation on these special days looking toward the early defeat of this dreadful though vulnerable foe.

J. M. GIBSON,
Government House,
18th November, 1913.

ADDRESSED MEETING ON "THE PLANETS"

The regular meeting of the Royal Astronomical Society, Peterborough Centre, was held in the Physical Laboratory of the Collegiate Institute last night. The president, Mr. T. A. S. Hay, president at the meeting.

Master Hubert Cowan, son of Mr. H. B. Cowan, was made a member of the society.

A very entertaining lecture on "The Planets," was given by the Rev. D. Marsh. Although it was intended particularly for those beginning to study astronomy, it was listened to with the closest attention by all present. Dr. Marsh dealt with the planets Mercury, Venus, Mars and Saturn, and the physical features of each planet were clearly outlined on the screen with the aid of lantern slides. The lecturer gave an interesting explanation of the laws that govern the various planets.

At the close of the lecture the Rev. Mr. Goodwill, of Keene, spoke in complimentary terms of the lecture. As Dr. Marsh will soon be leaving this centre of the society, a unanimous invitation was extended him to give an address at the annual meeting, which will be held about the middle of December.

The society was found to be in a flourishing condition, every branch of its work framing up well for the annual meeting next month.

It was moved that the best wishes of the Society be extended to Dr. Marsh for every success in his new sphere of labour. Dr. Marsh made an appropriate reply thanking the members for their kindness and expressing his appreciation of many associations with the local society.

WHY DRUGGISTS RECOMMEND

Vinol for Run-Down People.

If any one person should know the value of medicines it is the druggist who dispenses them and from our experience we want to say if people in this vicinity only knew the value of Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic (without oil) as this season of the year, we would not be able to supply the demand.

This is because Vinol is a combination of the two most world famed tonics, namely, the medicinal curative elements of cods' livers without the oil, and iron for the blood.

Vinol tones up the digestive organs, purifies and enriches the blood, promotes healthful sleep and a normal appetite.

Old people, delicate children, run-down, overworked and tired women, should try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that your money will be refunded if it does not help you.

THE COUNCIL WILL INSIST, ETC.

duced the correspondence which passed between Hon. Robert Rogers, Minister of Public Works, Mr. Wanklyn, Assistant to the Executive of the C.P.R., and Mr. J. H. Burnham in respect to the matter. A short time ago Mayor Bradburn, together with Mr. Burnham, waited upon the Minister of Public Works in Ottawa. The latter agreed with the Mayor that the City was entitled to a swing bridge. Mr. Wanklyn, who was also interviewed on that occasion, was surprised to learn that the Otonabee was a navigable stream. He intimated that the Company would be willing to construct a hundred foot swing span. The Company inferred that the City's demands were very unfair and implied that they would withdraw their proposal to construct a new bridge altogether.

Did Not State Position.

Mayor Bradburn emphatically declared that he did not indicate where the swing span was to be placed, as was insinuated by Mr. Burnham in his communication to the press. He further stated that the Council practically refused to accept a swing bridge which would only provide for a thirty foot channel.

Ald. Laugherd said that he was surprised to learn that there was any doubt about a swing bridge. He eulogized the Mayor for his painstaking efforts in regard to the matter.

Ald. Johnston—"What's the best possible course to pursue?"

Ald. Gordon: "It looks to me, judging by the tone of that communication, that the thing is going through and that Mr. Burnham knows it. He has washed his hands of the matter and has placed the responsibility upon the City."

Did Not Object.

An extract from Mr. Burnham's "statement" reads as follows:

> The Minister wired Mr. Wanklyn of the C.P.R. to meet us at Ottawa, which he did, and after a short conference he agreed to put in a swing. My duty ended there. As I remarked to the Mayor he represented the City thereafter. I did not. The C.P.R. then made ready to put in a swing in the centre of the bridge. To this the Mayor and his Engineer objected. They wanted the west end span as a swing. To this the C.P.R. replied that such a swing was unnecessarily long, too expensive and also dangerous.

"Mr. Burnham said that Mr. Wanklyn "after a short conference agreed to put in a swing," said the Mayor, in reference to the allegations made in the foregoing paragraph. "If he agreed, why did we go to see the Minister of Public Works the following morning?" He also states that the C.P.R. "made ready to put in a swing in the centre of the bridge. To this the Mayor and his Engineer objected." "We did not object," asserted the Mayor. "We had no opportunity to object."

"Up in His Sleep."

"He was up in his sleep about that time," observed Ald. Gordon. "Why didn't he make representations to the Mayor instead of rushing into print?"

Ald. Johnston—"Let us go and see what the workmen are doing on the bridge, and then hike to Ottawa. We have got to have a swing bridge," declared the north ward representative as he vigorously pounded the desk.

On motion of Aldermen Buller and Duncan, a committee comprising his Worship Mayor Bradburn, Aldermen Johnston and Laugherd were delegated to wait upon Mr. Burnham. The Mayor was also authorized to send a deputation to Ottawa.

Peter Hamilton's Co's. Siding.

The Dominion Railway Board reported in favour of the railway siding up Water Street to the Peter-Hamilton Co's. works with the rider that once the siding is laid it must be permanent under all conditions. The Council took exception to this order; the City's by-law in this respect granted the siding on condition that should the Peter Hamilton Co. cease business the siding would be taken up.

Aldermen Gordon and Duncan moved that the Railway Board be asked to either have their rider amended in agreement with the by-law or to repeal the order altogther. —Carried.

Ald. Anderson pointed out that the Peter Hamilton Co. did not now intend to have the siding run up Water Street, but on their own property and across Sherbrooke Street.

A BIG SISTER CLUB AT Y.W.C.A.

A "Big Sister" Club is being organized at the Y.W.C.A. on Simcoe street. This "Big Sister" Club is one of the most interesting and friendly of all "Y" clubs. A series of travel talks on different countries, various evenings with Dickens, Scott, Shakespeare and Longfellow, pleasant hours with great musicians will be among some of the "Big Sister" Club work. But knowing all work and no play is poor policy, we think the "Big" sisters and "Little" sisters and "Middle-between" sisters would all enjoy at odd times a snowshoe by moonlight, a romp in the "Gym," a skating party and of course, the ever present, always enjoyable, far from being forgotten, sociable cup of tea and the "eats" that go with it.

The membership book is wide open, waiting for your name. We're looking at you and wanting you to come along and make the "Big Sister" Club also a "Big Success" Club. It's up to you! Are you coming?

Come in and ask us about it. We'll be glad to tell you.

GODERICH, ONT., Nov. 26.—Six years in the penitentiary was the sentence imposed this morning on Robt. Gordon for manslaughter, in connection with the death of his father. During an altercation about the punishment of a horse, Robert picked up an iron bar, he says in self defence, and struck his father, Hugh Gordon, on the head, killing him.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

Splendid Concert By St. George's Choral Society

It was a very pleasing programme that St. George's Choral Society contributed last evening at their concert in the Assembly Hall of the Collegiate Institute. The offerings were miscellaneous in character, including choruses from 'The Messiah' which the Society put on last Spring. "Judas Maccabaeus," Handel's work, which will be given in April next, and a number of part songs and popular choruses. While the choral work was interspersed with several pleasing vocal numbers.

The work of the splendid chorus, under the direction of Mr. R. J. Devey, was a striking illustration of the results of capable instruction and of steady attendance at rehearsals. Of course the organization showed greater familiarity with and sang with greater confidence "The Messiah" numbers, "Lift Up Your Heads," "All we Like Sheep," and "And the Glory of the Lord," which were splendidly sung. Four numbers from Judas Maccabaeus," the Oratorio which is to be presented next Spring, were given in splendid fashion; the rendition being remarkable when it is considered that the Choristers have only had two months' rehearsal. The "Mourn Ye Afflicted People," the opening number of the Oratorio, was sung with a full appreciation of its possibilities, while the triumphant "See The Conquering Hero Comes," a number widely different in character was splendidly given.

Another feature of the programme was the fantasia on nautical airs, which aroused great enthusiasm. The solo "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep," in this number was splendidly taken by Mr. R. Dickson with a humming accompaniment by the choristers.

A similar humming effect was produced in "The Village Blacksmith," while Mr. George Chandler sang the tenor solo in splendid voice.

Enough of the 'Judas Maccabaeus' numbers were given to show what a treat is in store for the music lovers of Peterborough next April, when the oratorio will be produced.

Miss Bessie Greenhalch contributed the solo "Flight of Ages" in splendid style, exhibiting a pure, sweet voice. Mr. E. Bartley was heard to advantage in the solo "Bedouin Love Song," and Mr. G. Harris sang "The Bandolero" very effectively. Miss Ouve Cullen, the youngest member of the Choral Society, sang very sweetly the solo "When the Heart is Young". She is a very promising young vocalist.

The humorous quartette "Basso Prophundo," by Mrs. B. Read, Miss Alexander, Mr. B. Read and Mr. Dickson was cleverly sung.

Mr. Chandler conducted during the rendition of the last number "And the Glory of the Lord," from "The Messiah."

Miss M. Flowers was a very efficient accompanist.

Following was the programme:

Chorus—(a) "Lift up Your Heads" (b) "Mourn Ye Afflicted People," . . . . . Handel

Song . . . . .Miss Bessie Greenhalch

Chorus—(a) "O, Father, Whose Almighty Power'; (b) "We Come in Bright Array" . . . . . Handel

JUDGMENT RESERVED IN THE McBAIN-CAVAN COUNCIL CASE

Whole Question Revolves Round a Resolution Passed by the Council

THE ARGUMENT

Mr. Justice Middleton reserved judgment in the McBain-Municipality of Cavan case which occupied the greater part of Tuesday afternoon's session of the Non-Jury Assizes of the High Court.

Mr. Hellmuth, K.C., of Toronto, who with Mr. E. L. Goodwill representing Mr. Geo. C. McBain, stated that there was a resolution passed by the Council of Cavan to keep the course of the stream open. It read as follows:

That the Committee be instructed to deal with Mr. McBain on the following terms, namely—Council to open channel and protect it by gates on culvert, Mr. McBain to close said gates in proper time to protect the channel from filling by spring freshets, Council to keep the channel open, said offer to be without prejudice. Carried.

"If the matter had gone no further than that," said Mr. Hellmuth, "there might be a question of our position, but as soon as the municipality raised a hand in clearing the drain that settled the bargain on the part of defendants."

Mr. McBain expressed his pleasure at the Council's resolution satisfactory to him. It had been passed early in January, 1911, and the gates were put in position that year. On December 1st, 1911, plaintiff closed one of the gates, an indication, among others, of his recognition and acceptance of the terms of the resolution. It did not state that the agreement was but for one year. From its wording it might be for all time to come. That was the understanding plaintiff took from the resolution and his counsel asked, therefore, for a mandatory order compelling the municipality to continue the work when it was required which plaintiff claimed they agreed to do and which for several years they carried out.

The municipality have set up that their resolution followed by their action was not binding upon them. The plaintiff had accepted the Council's offer, the work was carried out for several years, and then it was discontinued.

His Lordship said that if this were the case of a man owing the municipality $1,000, the Council would surely have accepted it. Here was a resolution passed with an offer to a man and several years after he is told that the offer was not what it had appeared to be.

He suggested to Mr. Hellmuth that plaintiff could bring Division Court proceedings against the municipality for the payment of the cost of clearing the stream in the event of his engaging someone to do it. Counsel replied that this would result in numerous suits, possibly many times during a year or probably only on several occasions.

But one judgment would determine the matter, His Lordship remarked. The argument on this point lead to no conclusion.

Mr. Ruddy argued that the case should be tried under the Drainage Act, and hence this was not the proper court to deal with it; and secondly the agreement was not a valid one because it had not the seal of the municipality.

Mr. Hellmuth contended that the agreement was valid upon grounds stated above, and His Honour held that the agreement affected the contention regarding this court's hearing the case.

Other Evidence.

Mr. W. J. Johnston, witness for the plaintiff, stated that he remembered the stream through Mr. McBain's property for at least 25 years. He would not be without the water on his own farm for $100 a year. His replies to Mr. Hellmuth corroborated the evidence of the plaintiff.

Justice Middleton—You would clean out your stream if it only cost $10 to do so?

Witness—Well, I don't know.

Justice Middleton—I suppose it depends upon your relation with the Council.

Mr. Ruddy—The loops into the McBain property are of no value to other people?

Witness—I don't think it is.

The work was done for Mr. McBain's accommodation?

Yes.

Justice Middleton interposed to show that the action concerned the fact that there was a bargain between McBain and the Council, or there was not one.

Mr. Ruddy—You've seen the spring on McBain's farm?

Never in my life.

Witness said he had seen the eastern loop of the stream dry. This is where the spring was alleged to be located.

Mr. Jos. Sanderson.

Joseph Sanderson was sworn and stated that he resided on the west half of Lot 13, Con. 19. The stream had always been a good one about a foot or more deep. On one occasion this year he saw running water there. He saw it five times since July 13th, including that instance. Witness saw water with a green scum on it in the loop.

Mr. Ruddy—You were opposed to the drain too?

I wasn't in favour of it.

It could have been cleaned out for $5?

I wouldn't do it for $5.

You saw water in the eastern loop?

Yes any time I was there I saw water, but every time I was there I did not see the easterly loop. They were not very far apart. You can't see the easterly loop from the western one.

The Defence.

Mr. Robert Vance said he was one of the drainage referees appointed under the act.

He reported in 1904—"There are no ditches or drains for which appropriations need be made."

Mr. Vance—I did not consider the McBain stream at all.

Mr. Ruddy asked if he would change his opinion now, but Mr. Hellmuth objected and the Judge pointed out that the damages concerned had been placed by Mr. McBain at $10 a year, a total of $30, resulting from the alleged failure to carry out an alleged agreement on the part of the Council.

Mr. Chas. McNeill.

Mr. Chas. McNeill, Reeve during 1908, was next called. He said the Council had no intention of providing any water allowance for Mr. McBain. The object of putting gates on the stream was to allow water to flow from the ditch into the stream. The other gate was to keep water from flowing from the easterly loop into the ditch.

The point arrived at was to show that there was water in the eastern loop. Mr. Ruddy said he had a number of witnesses to support the claim that there is a spring in this loop.

Did Not Concern Case.

Justice Middleton emphasized that this did not enlighten him in the least. It was not a question as to whether there was a spring or not in the loop. The whole matter regarded the alleged agreement.

Mr. Thos. A. Kelly was sworn and stated that he was Reeve of Cavan during 1909, '10 and '11, following Mr. McNeill's term.

What was the object of putting the words "without prejudice" in your letter to Mr. McBain, Mr. Ruddy asked. Mr. Hellmuth objected and his plea was sustained.

Questions asked by Mr. Ruddy concerning the intentions of the Council toward Mr. McBain regarding the stream during 1908 and later years were not allowed.

This concluded the defence.

In regard to costs Justice Middleton stated that the defendants' absolute denial of rights to the plaintiff turned the question of costs upon the defence.

NOW IS THE TIME TO BUY MATTRESSES

November 27, 28, and 29, we shall display on our Floor and in our Windows, the complete line of the Famous "Ideal" Felt Mattresses.

And for the first time in Canada we shall show the new patent "NEVERSPRED" Mattress.

The patent on the "Neverspred" is the most ingenious device we have ever seen. We can't explain it in words, you must come in and have it demonstrated.

We shall also show the "HARINFELT" Mattress.

This Mattress combines the good qualities of both hair and felt mattresses. There is an increased ventilating power to these mattresses, because the alternate layers of hair and felt act as a bellows as soon as weight is placed upon it. Not only so, but the "Harinfelt" cannot mat, and so the mattress will never become hard or lumpy.

You will also be interested in the showing of the more moderately priced "ROYAL EGYPTIAN" and "DIXIE" Mattresses.

Moreover, our prices on all these lines are marked down to a figure which is most attractive to you.

Come in and see the display and at the same time note our special showing of Ideal Brass and Steel Beds, Coil and Woven Wire Springs and Babies' Cribs.

This is, we believe, the Best Display of Mattresses, Beds and Bedding that has ever been put before the people of Peterborough.

ALLEGED FORGER WAS ARRESTED

LINDSAY, Nov. 26.—The Kinmount train, which is due in Lindsay at 5.40 p.m. carried amongst its many passengers last evening an alleged forger from the village of Bancroft. On hearing that his speculation had been discovered, and that the police were after him he left the town.

The chief of police at Bancroft wired Lindsay's chief giving a description of Blau and orders to arrest him on sight. The train from the north was watched and Chief Chilton, in company with County Constable Thornbury captured the man on the arrival of the evening train from Kinmount.

TURNBULL'S

EGG CASE CLAIMED ATTENTION OF HIGH COURT THIS MORNING

Peterboro' Cold Storage Co., Plaintiffs—Toronto Lawyers Take Prominent Part in the Hearing.

EGG QUALITY DISCUSSED

The case of Peterborough Cold Storage Co., Ltd., versus John Hawley of Toronto, was opened in the High Court this morning. The particulars of the case have been previously mentioned. Messrs. Gideon and D. I. Grant of Toronto, represented defendant, and Messrs. G. H. Watson, K.C., of Toronto, and Bennet & Goodwill, of Peterborough, were plaintiff's counsel.

Mr. Scott, plaintiff in the case was examined at length by Mr. G. H. Watson. Witness stated that he had been engaged in the cold storage business for thirty years. He explained the process of candling, which involved two classifications, namely, number one selected, and number two, which comprised undersized eggs and light cracked eggs. Lower grades were consigned to the dump. The eggs involved in the suit were purchased at twenty-four cents a dozen. On resale the eggs did not average the original purchase price. The eggs were stored in a room ranging in temperature from twenty-eight to twenty-nine degrees above zero. The remainder of the eggs, which were not accepted by defendant, were eventually disposed of to Gunn Langlois at sixteen cents a dozen.

To Mr. Grant, witness said that eggs constituted the main business of the company. About seven or eight thousand cases were handled by the firm last season. The freezing system consists of a Cooper Laine plant, and was located above the room, in which the eggs were stored. He admitted that complaints were occasionally received respecting the inferior condition of cold storage products. Witness asserted that he would rather buy April and May eggs and take delivery in October, than buy July eggs and take delivery during the same month.

You can tell me how many rotten eggs you threw away last season out of storage.

No.

Would it be ten cases?

I wouldn't like to say.

Out of the 8,000 cases put in storage last year, how many eggs were taken out as rotten eggs?

Out of No. 2 room there would be very few. It might run ten cases.

What about No. 3 room?

There would be a greater number. They were put in during the summer.

You can see must in eggs when they are candled. There is a dark spot in it. We consider that a rotten egg. It is not fit for food. It is injurious to cooking.

I am told that if a baker breaks one musty egg into a cookery where 12 good ones have also been placed, it will destroy the entire lot.

Mr. Scott—I guess that's right.

Did your candlers report musty eggs to you?

No.

Did Mr. Hawley complain of must when you called on him in Toronto.

He mentioned must in some of them. I said we would see the eggs you have for table use or any other consumption.

Yes.

Harry Rightmeyer.

Witness said he had been employed in the egg business with Mr. Scott for 12 years. He had experience of 11 years in candling.

Describing that work he said there would be two cases, one of which was for selects and another for No. 2. Those with black spots detected by candling are thrown away. The eggs for Room No. 2 were sorted before candling and others before being put in storage. The small eggs and cracks were taken to the main floor and sold to bakers. Candling is done when the eggs were sent out.

Speaking of particular shipments, Mr. Watson said—Did you know those eggs were for Mr. Hawley?

Yes. I got the information from Mr. Scott.

Did you observe the directions for "candling out?"

Yes. They were then put in No. 3 room.

How soon after candling were they shipped?

It might have been the same day. After 900 cases were set aside for Mr. Hawley, there were 600 that were not shipped to him?

Yes.

What was the description of the 525 cases for Montreal.

They were our best selected.

You do not know that 75 cases were sold about town?

No.

To Mr. D. I. Grant.

What did you take out in sorting?

We took out any that looked bad, those with any cracks, a percentage of small ones.

What does percentage mean. You figure out there is a percentage of small eggs in a case and you take out a number of them?

We have to use our own judgment. There should be a certain proportion of small eggs to a certain number of large ones. We try to make 40 lbs. to the case, or 1 1-2 lbs. to the dozen. There are 20 dozen to a case.

In candling we handle 8 eggs in each hand at once, at the rate of 3 to 4 cases an hour, depending upon the condition of the eggs.

Mr. Grant—When you are candling out you detect those that show decay, and any that didn't show decay in the candling you shipped?

Not all of them. Sometimes we notice a little "fuzz" on some of them. That shows dampness.

In the spring you took out eggs that were cracked and might cause dampness on others, so that if dampness was found when you were shipping in the fall, the dampness was occasioned in storage?

Yes. But in being laid down after sorting a few of them may have become cracked and others nearby would be affected. They would not average a half dozen to a case.

Mr. Grant—An egg may be musty inside and yet you can't detect it by the ordinary means of inspection?

How's that again?

Mr. Watson—That's a rather complicated question.

Mr. Grant broke up the query into parts—First, eggs that show spots in candling and those that show must. Can they be musty without showing fuzz on the outside?

They might be.

His Lordship—Then a buyer takes his chances on getting such eggs?

Yes.

When a contract was received the eggs in No. 2 room would be candled into No. 3, waiting an order for shipment. There might have been 300 or 400 cases candled and waiting for an order in No. 3. The number might not be 100 cases.

Mr. Grant—You can't tell me how many there were in No. 3 when you were candling out of No. 2?

There might be several thousand. Witness said he did not think eggs deteriorated in cold storage. If they were in too long, however, they would get an "old smell."

Were the pasteboard fillers with which Hawley's eggs were shipped new?

Some of them were.

If the eggs were candled and ready you could ship 150 cases in an hour or so?

Yes.

And shipments were timed to catch the way freight from Peterborough to Toronto in order to cut down the time spent in delivery?

Yes.

The 500 cases sent to Montreal were practically the same as those sent to Hawley?

Yes.

To Mr. Watson.

Did you let any cracked eggs go into cold storage when they were first sorted?

Not as far as we could judge.

His Lordship—There is a possibility of some eggs becoming cracked in spite of your care?

Yes, I guess there is.

Witness said some of the eggs shipped to Hawley might have been candled out of No. 2 into Room No. 3 several weeks before they were shipped. There were a few degrees difference in the temperature of the two rooms.

MR. BURNHAM SUPPLIES ANOTHER STATEMENT

The appended communication was supplied by Mr. J. H. Burnham this morning. It refers to the controversy that arose at the Council meeting on Tuesday evening in reference to a previous "statement" that Mr. Burnham supplied to the local press.

Re Swing Bridge.

The statements last night of His Worship the Mayor, and of the other guardians of the city's interests so far as they appear by the newspapers are correct. I just wish to say one or two things in reply.

1. When the C.P.R. agreed to give us a swing why did we (I mean the City Council) not find out from some practical hands on canal men where we should have it? The C.P.R. says that our selection is unreasonable. It is certainly up to us to prove that it is not.

2. Alderman [illegible] did not attempt to override anybody except perhaps himself in his interview with me. As an alderman no doubt it is his duty to learn what he can and to do what he can. But I warned Mayor Bradburn from the start that as I had not the power given me by the Council to act for them in the choice of a suitable swing, I would not be held responsible for the Council's action in that part of the affair and I will not. It is much easier for me to get out from under at the start than after the trouble is here and that is why I defended myself in the newspapers, as it looked to be coming.

3. I will of course do all I can in the city's interests, but surely we must interview the C.P.R. first to show them why we cannot accept their offer (if such be the case) and why we must have something else.

4. The waterway and water-side are not governmental property. The right of way over the water and the shore line are both ours and that is why we, not the government, must look after them up to a certain point.

5. I was afraid that since we refused the C.P.R.'s offer, if it proved to be reasonable and our demand proved to be unreasonable, the C.P.R. would have the right to go on and build a fixed bridge and we would have nobody to thank for our loss but ourselves (most of the blame coming my way likely).

Three Ratepayers Write on Mayoralty Representation

AGAINST THIRD TERM

Mr. Editor,—I saw in your yesterday's edition where one of our citizens was going around with a petition to reinstate Mayor Bradburn, as Mr. Bradburn will not stand for a contest. I think if Mr. Bradburn is afraid to stand the contest his friend is stopping over the line by going around with a petition. He has forgotten he is trespassing on the citizens' privileges; and I also think if Peterborough has not got another man as good as Mayor Bradburn for the chair the City is in a bad condition.

I remain, yours truly,

RATEPAYER.

Nov. 26, 1913.

WANTS BRADBURN AGAIN.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—I took considerable pleasure in signing a Citizens' petition yesterday to Mayor Bradburn, asking him to again present himself for re-election to the position of Mayor of this City. While my signature does not count for much I noticed the names of a number of men who do count.

I think Mayor Bradburn has been very aggressive and in the interests of the City we should endeavour to hold him for another year, to complete the Council's unfinished programme.

He has given very much time to the Civic affairs and has lived up to his election pledges.

Yours truly,

A Ratepayer.

Peterborough, Nov. 26, 1913.

INVESTIGATION NEEDED

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—A petition is being circulated by the friends of Mayor Bradburn with a view of endeavouring to secure him an election by acclamation for a third term as Mayor. Is it not about time that the ratepayers of Peterborough should do a little thinking on their own account, and that some exposure and criticism should be freely given against the administration of our civic affairs?

We have already had three elections of Mayor of this City by acclamation, and no real criticism made. There is ample ground for the administration of our civic affairs to be criticised. For instance, during this last 10 years the rate of taxation has increased fully 50 per cent., and the assessment of property has also increased to most people to the extent of 50 per cent. What is becoming of these increased taxes? We have very little to show for it. Our streets are in a worse condition than they were 10 years ago. The money therefore is not being spent upon street improvement. Where does our increased taxation go? Are all our ratepayers fairly assessed? Some independent enquiry should be made into that. For instance the Bradburn homestead was assessed for about $5,000, and was sold for $17,000. The Bradburn property on the corner of Bethune and Charlotte streets, opposite the Grand Trunk station is assessed for $5,500, but it is well known that the Bradburn estate refused $10,000 for this same property. To what extent are some ratepayers being favoured? Would not a fair and equitable assessment be obtained by getting away from hole and corner elections by acclamation? Would it not be in the interest of the City to have one of our old Councillors as a candidate for Mayor? For instance, James Kendry, ex-M.P., William Langford, Sr., or J. J. Hartley, would be able to bring to bear their knowledge and experience as members of the council, when our taxes were one-half what they are to-day. Any of these gentlemen would make a very close enquiry to see to what extent the ratepayers' money is being wasted and improvidently spent, and would see that the rich ratepayer and the poor ratepayer alike are assessed and taxed on an equitable basis.

As long as the ratepayers of Peterborough are prepared to put up with hole and corner methods of election by acclamation they must expect to be discriminated against and they must expect their taxes to continually increase. We certainly want no further elections by acclamation.

Yours, etc.,

HIGH-TAXED RATEPAYER.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

PARTICK THISTLE PLAYER IS TO HAVE A BENEFIT

Alex. Raisbeck's Team Will Be an International Eleven --Some Amusing Remarks Gathered From Football Matches.

Goalkeeper Molyneux, although a native of 'Lever' town, hasn't brought much "sunlight" into his Chelsea home this season.

More penalty kicks have been given for trips than for hands this season, further evidence that boot leather is growing more expensive.

The Trotters' reserve after their dashing victory at Southport, upset their own supporters by their feeble display against Liverpool.

No steady going forward line need hope to succeed when opposed to Morley and West, of Notts County. It's he" or man every time with them.

Bentley's total of goals still remains at four, all of which were obtained in his first match. The Albion supporters wish him a speedy return to form.

Common has the rare distinction of possessing medals for assistance in winning the F.A. cup, and the championships of the first and second divisions.

Both Buchan and Low have failed at penalty kick conversions for the Roker Park club this season. Last winter Sunderland registered eight penalty goals.

Alec Raisbeck, late of Liverpool fame, and now with Partick Thistle, is to have a benefit early next year, when his team will oppose an International eleven.

Walden Again.

After the Spurs and Derby match the last to leave the field was Walden, accompanied by the referee and one of the linesmen.

The following remark was overheard: "I say, Bill, why are they escorting Walden off the field?"

"I don't know," remarked the other. "Perhaps they're frightened they'll lose him in the grass." (With apologies to the ground man).

Hegazi "A Star."

During the Dulwich Hamlet and West Norwood game Hegazi, the Dulwich forward, was in fine form, and his two goals were deserved successes.

I overheard a rather unique appreciation of his skill on leaving the ground. An aeroplane was seen approaching rapidly, and a Norwood supporter asked what it was doing in that direction.

"It has come to take Hegazi to his proper sphere," was the prompt reply of the Dulwich enthusiast.

Pearls at Highbury.

He was a very keen Arsenal supporter, and when his pal said to him on Tuesday evening: "Have you seen 'The Star?' They've found the pearls at Highbury," he somewhat startled his informer by replying: "Oh, have they? I supose the Orient wanted to see the Arsenal's new ground."

Where Chelsea Could Train.

Joe: "What's wrong with Chelsea? They don't seem to be able to win a match."

Tom: "Well, I don't quite know The men are good enough individually, but I think a spell of training and practice at Winchelsea would do them a lot of good collectively."

Distinguished Visitors.

During Fulham's game at the Cottage a spectator with a deep voice caused much amusement by his remarks to the occupants of the directors' pavillion. At half time Mr. Kelso was seen to usher in a party of distinguished looking Japanese, whereupon the humorist inquired if Fulham hadn't had enough of "Orientals" on the previous Saturday.

The Cottagers just afterwards scored their winning goal, and he of the bass voice, turning triumphantly to the directors' guests, shouted:

"There y'are, mates; thats 'ow we bamboo-zle 'em; now we'll give 'em Tokio, an make 'em chew rice!" Whether the Japs understood his remarks or not, they all smiled pleasantly.

Poor, But Honest.

At Highbury two of the onlookers were discussing the merits of one of the players. "You can say what you like," said one, "but he always plays fair; no dirty tricks with him. In fact, he's what you might call an honest player."

"Yes," was the reply, "poor, but honest!"

There is a Distinction.

Two small boys were awaiting the arrival of the Chelsea players outside Stamford Bridge, and the following was overheard:

First boy (as two small boys dressed in football clothes walked past) — "Are they some of Chelseas players?"

Second boy—"No, they're footballers they are."

More Speed Wanted.

At the game between Chelsea and Manchester United it was only too evident that the former were hopelessly outpaced.

"Take Macfarlane," said a spectator, "I grant you that he's clever, but you can't by any stretch of imagination call him fast."

"Well, no," said his friend, "perhaps not, but then you see he really came to Chelsea as a coach."

"Coach," said the first man, with withering emphasis, 'slowcoach, you mean. What Chelsea want are motors."

Some of the "Nuts."

Smith (at a football match)— "I wonder what occupation most footballers follow?"

Sharp— "According to what I've seen, I should say ironmongers."

Smith—"What makes you think so?"

Sharp—"Why, every player, directly after the match, makes a bolt for the dressing room."

Cruel.

A very amusing remark was made by a spectator at a match between Walthamstow Thursday and Great Eastern railway. The referee, who was completely bald, gave some offside decisions that were not at all popular with the crowd. This led a spectator to wrath, who shouted: "Hi, ref! what's the matter with you? Take the hair out of your eyes."

BOXING.

Mike Fremas, of Peterborough, left to-day with Tommy Pappas, the Greek fighter, and will accompany the latter on a trip to Buffalo and other cities, where Pappas has a number of bouts slated.

BASEBALL

CHICAGO, Nov. 25.—As in every other department of the game, the Philadelphia Athletics led all the teams in the American League in fielding, according to the official averages announced last night. The closest rivals of the world's champions strangely enough, were the St. Louis Browns, while Detroit and New York Yankees were tied for last place.

Stuffy McInis was the best fielding first baseman among the men who saw regular service, with a mark of .992, while Gandil of Washington and Johnston, of Cleveland, were tied for second place at .990.

Berger, second baseman of the White Sox, playing in about half the games of the season, was first among the guardians of the keystone sack, at .988, Lajoie being second at .976. The great Eddie Collins, who made fortyone errors, turned in .949.

Midkiff did some accurate work around third base for the Yankees and led the division with an average of .967. Frank Baker was far in the rear at .919. Wagner of the Red Sox was first among the shortstops at .965, with McBride of Washington second with .961. Jack Barry of the Athletics was third.

Cree of New York, let the outfielders of the league with the high mark of .986, making only three errors. Ryan of Cleveland and Shanks of Washington were ranked high. Both Cobb and Speaker were well down in the list.

Schalk of Chicago had the best average among the regular catchers, while Walter Johnson and Ray Caldwell, among the pitchers, went through the season without making an error.

PAPPAS ACCEPTS SIMMONS' CHALLEGE

The backers of Tommy Pappas, the Greek fighter, have lost no time in snapping at the challenge hurled at him by Artie Simmons in last night's Examiner.

The challenge was accepted this morning by Pappas' manager, who says his man is ready to fight for any sum from $500 to $1,000. He wants the bout to be a fifteen round affair and to take place in Peterborough if possible.

With both boys willing it is altogether likely that the bout will be pulled off here in the near future.

HUGH BURRITT

Former Strathcona hockey player who is greatly in demand by Toronto senior teams.

Burritt With The Argonauts

Toronto Star: Hugh Burritt of the Winnipeg Victorias, has joined the Argonaut hockey team. Burritt is a centre or rover. Burritt comes from Peterborough. Three years ago he was centre of Teddy Mamott's Simcoes, and two years ago with Seaforth in Junior O.H.A. He weighs about 145 pounds. Burritt was the sensation of the Winnipeg Bankers' League last winter and Victoria picked him up. He played five or six games for the Vics. St. Michael's have been hot foot after Burritt. The Argo squad will commence gym. work to-night at St. James'.

SPORT SACRIFICED

Money the Only Consideration in Profession Baseball

Organized baseball seems to be on the verge of losing its last vestige of sport for sport's sake, according to W. J. MacBeth, a New York sporting writer. The commercial end of the enterprise overshadows all else. The magnates are out for the money and make no bones of the fact. The lust for gold is as deeply rooted in the minor leagues as in the major organizations.

The two big circuits depend upon patronage for financial gains. Because of this it is necessary for them to secure the very best talent to display before the public. Thousands upon thousands of dollars are expended every season by each club in the National and American Leagues for the sole purpose of fortifying for the future. Every club owner has several highly paid scouts beating all around the country in search of likely looking "bush" timber. Some have as many as six sleuths under salary. Besides these, there is a grand army of amateur sharps who do business on a commission basis. This policy of near extravagance is all well enough for first division aggregations; the end more than justifies the means. But it is a serious drain upon the pocketbook of the unfortunate holders of second division franchises.

Because of their weaknesses, second division clubs in the major leagues call for the greatest expenditures. This makes their lot all the more severe. The money is put up on a sure gamble, because a club away down in the race is lucky to make interest on investment. The leading teams which might well afford to speculate in talent, have not the same crying need to do so. But those leaders usually string along in a sort of "dog in the manger" fashion and often corral most promising talent which they cannot possibly use, just to keep it away from some lowly rival that might utilize it to the disadvantage of the strong.

ROYAL YACHTSMEN

Apropos of King George's success as a yachtsman, it is interesting to note that yachting in bygone times owed much to English sovereigns, from Queen Elizabeth, who had a fine pleasure schooner built at Cowes, to William IV., who founded the Royal Yacht Squadron; but the keenest of all Royal yachtsmen was Charles II. In all, the Merry Monarch owned fourteen yachts, ranging from twenty-five to 166 tons, and one of them, the "Jamie," was designed by the King himself and built at Lambeth under his supervision. Charles and his brother James generally steered their yachts themselves, and Evelyn, in his diary for October 1st, 1661, describes a sailing match between the Royal brothers—the first contest of the kind in British waters of which we have any record.

FRANK CHANCE

Men who know Frank Chance, the American leagues $25,000 manager, can perhaps imagine what Chance is shouting at some Highlander, in this picture. Chance does not believe in handling his players with velvet gloves. He rules them with an iron hand and doesn't hesitate to use language that rasps. It it not difficult to imagine Chance raising the skin of some player in this instance.

Gaol for Boxers

Kathleen M. Carten de Wiart, Belgium's Minister of Justice, cast a bomb into the sporting circles of that country by declaring that all boxers must be sent to gaol.

His Excellency circularised the provincial State prosecutors instructing them to put in the dock every man who boxed, charging "criminal wounding," or "criminal attempt to wound." M. de Wiast proclaimed that even the sparring of a boxing match was a criminal offence, because "it is designed against the health and bodily security of the persons engaged."

Long Shawl Collar Overcoats

THERE'S a warm comfortable look about these Shawl Collar Overcoats that will appeal to you young men who want a practical garment as well as a good looking one. And when you put one on and button it up close around the neck—feel the softness and warmth—you realize at once what an excellent storm coat it is. Then when they are priced to you at $15, $16, $17 and $18 you either buy one or wish you needed it—that's how cheap they are. AND RIGHT NOW is the best time to come and see them. You'll like the way they look and you'll like the way they wear.

SEARCH FOR BOY WHO IS HEIR TO MILLIONS

Wanted in Connection With Charge Against Mazdaznan Priest

A STRANGE SECT

Is "Billy" Lindsay, heir to millions, and a pupil of Dr. Hanish, high priest of Mazdaznan, hiding in Montreal?

Followers of Mazdaznan in Montreal state he is not. However, the Chicago authorities, who require the lad as a witness in a charge laid against Dr. Hanish, believe he has been sent away, and that Montreal is his hiding place.

According to reports, the charge which Dr. Hanish must face in Chicago—a charge which is considered very serious and for which a sentence of five years and a fine of $1,000 on each count may be imposed—is one of circulating through the express companies copies of his book, "Inner Life," a book of medical science which deals with the care of the body in accord with the beliefs of the writer.

Another important witness is Richard Hanish, purporting to be the father of the high priest, who, it is stated, ran away in order to evade entering the witness stand. And still another is Miss Louise Gottsche, who a few years ago was a disciple of Hanish. Some of the things she will testify are that Hanish lured women of wealth by promises of eternal youth; that he hypnotized these women; that he submitted them to mental and physical torture; that he insulted them; that there were many boys and girls at the Mazdaznan temple; that weird sun dances and strange baths were practiced, and that threats of ruined homes and lives were made against women devotees to prevent their telling the secret rites of the temple.

Followers Here Deny Charge.

"Ottoman Zar-Adusht Hanish is in no way guilty of a breach of the law of the United States. Dr. Hanish is the head of our teaching. We follow him because he is an ideal man, and a perfect example of the results derived from Mazdaznan."

In these words, Mrs. Hooper Mallet, priestess of the local followers of Mazdaznan, or Sun Worshippers, as they are better known, to-day denied the reports circulated to the detriment of the chief priest.

"Billy is not here," remarked Mrs. Mallet. "I have not seen the boy for nearly two years. Then he and his mother were in Montreal attending a meeting. The boy has not been sent away; his mother and he have not been detained; these charges preferred against the high priest are not true, and there is nothing wrong with the book that he sends through the mail. This is the work of the yellow press. This is not the first nor the second charge of this kind against Dr. Hanish; such charges keep cropping up continually. Mazdaznan bases its teaching upon a pure, wholesome body. This ensures a pure active mind, and that is the hope of Mazdaznan. Mazdaznan means Master Thought. This book, 'Inner Life,' is a book of wisdom, which teaches how to live, retain strength, purity, and youth. It has been accepted at Washington, and why it should now be held from sale, I do not know.

Boy Was Persecuted.

"With regard to this lad Billy Lindsay, it is a disgrace to the United States the way in which the law has stepped in. The boy is the heir to millions. He was being taught Mazdaznan—a pupil of Dr. Hanish, when his relatives who desired to get his wealth cut him off from his allowance and the Juvenile Court persecuted that lad. But the boy has not run away. He is not here. None of the witnesses reputed to have disappeared have done so.

"No! Dr. Hanish has no kin living, and no one has ever heard of them. There is nothing to these charges. No women live at the temple. He is a good and virtuous man, and is not wholly unknown to Montreal people since he has spoken here on several occasions.

"Do we worship the sun? Well, now, that is a hard point to explain, because it might be misunderstood. We do not bow or kneel to the sun. I have never prayed to the sun or seen anyone else doing so. Still, when a person sees the sun in the morning beaming brightly and cheerily over the land he is pleased and is thankful for the blessings it furnishes. In that sense we are Sun Worshippers."

TWO BOOKS OF LOCAL INTEREST

Roughing It In The Bush
By Mrs. MOODIE
Lost In The Back Woods
By Mrs. TRAILL

The Authors of both of these Books lived in Peterboro' County and were well-known to people who are living in this vicinity.

"Roughing It in the Bush" gives a graphic and interesting account of the hardships of the Pioneers of this County in the days of the Rebellion of 1837 and the description of the Trip to Stony Lake in 1834 is very interesting. It is beautifully bound in cloth with gilt top and contains eight full page Coloured Illustrations of Rice Lake, the original Strickland House at Lakefield, Cobourg, Toronto and other places mentioned in the story.

"Lost in the Backwoods" is of intense local interest—the scene of the story is cast on Rice Lake and the Otonabee River and will be re-read with a great deal of interest by the Public of Peterboro' and Northumberland Counties. It is published in cloth binding and contains several interesting illustrations.

Both of These Books will make Ideal Christmas Presents. The former is published at $1.50 and the later at 75c.

The Property Committee of the City Council met on Tuesday evening Ald. Duncan, chairman of the committee, was authorized to appoint a man to take charge of the incinerator. The contractors expect to be in a position to hand over the plant to the City within a week or two.

REDUCTIONS ON RATES ARE RECOMMENDED

Special to the Examiner.

OTTAWA, Nov. 26.—Very substantial reductions in railway freight rates are recommended by J. P. Muller, rate expert for the Government in the inquiry now before the Railway Commission. The decreases recommended under the existing rates range all the way from 25 to 45 per cent. This is possibly the outstanding feature of Mr. Muller's voluminous exhibits. The Government expert bases his proposed decrease in western rates upon a computation of his own. He has first ascertained the cost of service to the railways, figured a fair gross profit to the railways on this computed fair rate on this and subtracted this rate from the present existing rate. The difference is the proposed new rate. This will greatly benefit Eastern Canadian shippers.

Stock Markets

A. E. Stratton & Co., Brokers, report the following:

The stock market this morning opened up irregular, prices being a little off from yesterday's close and developed into a dull strong market towards midday. We may witness a further moderate improvement. It continues to reflect an oversold condition. The spreading of a multitude of fake bear reports with newspaper attacks on the stock market generally mark the end of a bear campaign. The market reflects a strong undertone and sentiment has improved to the extent that some of the bear crowd expect higher prices during the remainder of the week and are trying to cover as easily as possible.

We believe the best railroad stocks are well taken and that those who have the courage to buy and hold up U.P., Atch., St. Paul, G.Q., N.P., L.N. and C.P.R., will be rewarded later on when the financial skies are cleared.

Railroads complete their case for rate advance before commission, and hearing is adjourned until Dec. 1.

London settlement concludes to-morrow.

Chief Justice Hunter of B. C. Gives Sweeping Decision

ORDERS ARE ULTRA VIRES

VANCOUVER, Dec. 1.—Chief Justice Hunter has given a sweeping decision condemning as illegal all the Federal orders-in-council which have hitherto kept Hindus out of British Columbia. The only ground on which a Hindu may now be excluded are those of idocy, disease, crime or mendicancy, merely grounds which apply against British-born citizens entering Canadian eastern ports. For instance, there is now nothing to prevent entire shiploads of Hindus entering British Columbia, and judging from the persistence with which they have for three years been pressing the question of their entry, these shiploads may not be slow in taking advantage of the chance to come.

The decision specifically is in favor of a Sikh priest named Bhagwan Singh. Three days ago the chief justice gave an oral judgment giving Bhagwan Singh his freedom on habeas corpus proceedings. On Saturday, Chief Justice Hunter added a written judgment which went further than his brief court pronouncement. If Saturday's decision is good in law, it is difficult at this distance to see how the new regulations can be made effective by the Government to keep the Hindus out without distinctly mentioning them in a manner that might give serious offence to their British citizenship.

As to the other order-in-council referring to natives or citizens coming by a continuous journey from India, and which had been previously declared ultra vires by Justice Morrison in the case of re Rahim, the learned chief justice concurs as the order-in-council refers to "natives or citizens," whereas the statute merely says "a native or naturalized citizen."

His lordship says he assumes the Legislature had some manifest intention when it amended the act in 1908 to insert the word "naturalized" to give it large classification. He holds the word "native" is to be used as an adjective qualifying the word "citizen."

Despatch Boat Wrecked.

OTTAWA, Dec. 1.—The Mary Sachs, the ship of the Stefansson expedition which despatches say has been wrecked in an ice jam, was a supply boat accompanying the Alaska, upon which the southern section of the scientific party traveled. While the loss of scientific instruments doubtless will interfere with their work, no apprehension is felt here for the safety of the men, either on the Sachs or the Alaska. The latter, it is believed, is better equipped for ice conditions and much less likely to be damaged.

Stefansson himself is on the Karluk in another direction altogether. The naval service department has received no advice of the mishap to the Sachs.

Fatality of Whooping Cough

Many parents think lightly of whooping cough, and treat it as a necessary evil, not giving the child who has it any special attention.

The seriousness of whooping cough was emphasized by the Medical Health Officer in Toronto a few months ago, when he reported 14 deaths during the month from whooping cough, and only ten from scarlet fever, typhoid fever and measles combined.

So many people write to us about the relief and cure of whooping cough by the use of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine that we can recommend it with the greatest confidence.

It loosens the cough, aids expectoration, and by its soothing influence prevents the terrible paroxysms of coughing which are so distressing to witness, and which wear away the strength of the child. By using this treatment the disease is held in check, and cured in a few weeks, instead of months. Look for the portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M.D., on the bottle you buy. There are many imitations.

FALL OF TAMPICO IS EXPECTED AT ANY MOMENT

It is Believed That General Navarrete Has Failed to Prevent the Capture of Victoria, But Has Walked Into a Rebel Trap---Vera Cruz and Salinas Cruz Alone Remain to President Huerta---Rebels Are Advancing

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 1.—The military situation throughout the country has shown no improvement in the past week, so far as the Government is concerned, and there are slight indications that much progress will be made the coming week. Steps have been taken to strengthen the garrison at Tampico, but there is known to be a greater force of rebels to the north and west. Whether this force will move finally toward the coast or advance toward Monterey is problematical. It is in a position to do either.

The fall of Tampico is momentarily expected. Not only have the rebels captured Maxatlan, on the Pacific, but it is believed that the Government has had official news of the fall of Guaymas, the other important Pacific port.

This would leave Vera Cruz on the Gulf side and Salina Cruz on the Pacific as the only important ports in the hands of the Government.

There is no definite news of Gen. Rubio Navarrete, the Federal commander, who failed to prevent the capture of Victoria, capital of the State of Tamaulipas, except a report that he ran into the centre of the converging rebel forces. It is believed that he and his entire command were captured.

The movement of rebels south of Saltillo toward San Luis Potosi continued yesterday, the rebels entering Cedral, on the branch railway leading to Matehuala, occupied and sacked by the rebels earlier in the year. Federal troops have been sent north from San Luis Potosi in an effort to check the movement, and brisk fighting has occurred many times in the last few days, but without holding back the rebels.

In the State of Zacatecas, to the west of San Luis Potosi, according to Government reports, some advantage has been gained by Huerta's troops, but the mobility of the rebels has gone far toward neutralizing the advances made by the Government.

Operations in Michoacan and other regions farther south have been about equalized as between the constitutionalists and the federals. The situation in the north, it is conceded, is practically dominated by the rebels, although the Government still expresses the hope of being able to recapture Juarez.

Huerta Not Yet Bankrupt.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 1.—The possible treatment of the Mexican question by President Wilson's coming message has aroused considerable interest among the Mexican Government officials, but there is a notable absence of alarm because of the deep rooted conviction that neither intervention nor the supplying of arms and ammunition to the rebels will be recommended.

The continuation of the financial blockade, President Huerta will not regard as a vital blow to his administration, however enfeebling it may be. Anything short of these measures will be regarded with comparative complacency by Gen. Huerta, who is prepared to pursue a dogged course of resistance against his enemies, although he realizes it means indefinite warfare.

But his friends point out that although the Government may be bankrupt, the Provisional President is far from being without funds, and is not likely to be entirely without money so long as private institutions and corporations possess funds. They are of the opinion that the President will not fail, for the sake of what he considers right, to resort to forced loans. Indeed, persuasive methods have already been used, and in several cases have borne marked similarity to the forced loan system.

In the Mexican Republic there are many men rated as millionaires, and several large corporations whose properties might be available for prospective taxation. There are millions to be had for the taking, and Gen. Huerta's admirers declare that he would be acting in accordance with justice and his duty to his country if he utilized this money for defence.

Tuberculosis Day Observed.

TORONTO, Dec. 1.—Yesterday was the date selected by the National Sanitarium Association for the appeal in the churches of Ontario for cooperation in the battle with the white plague. In Toronto the date was not favorable, as a number of special events had been arranged for celebration in leading churches; the most notable was that of the dedication of St. Paul's Anglican Church.

The statistics of the registrar-general's office, announced from the pulpits yesterday show that steady headway is being made against the tuberculosis scourge. The death rate has fallen over a third in twelve years despite the increase in population.

Big Show Opens.

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—Valued at $2,000,000, approximately 11,000 animals were placed on exhibition yesterday at the opening of the annual Internation Live Stock Exposition at the stock yards. Students from state agricultural colleges in Ohio, Iowa, Mississippi, Nebraska, Indiana, Arkansas, Texas, Kansas and Minnesota, will enter a cattle judging contest. Canadian agricultural students also are entered. A horse fair, at which prize animals will be exhibited, will be held every night during the exposition.

No Hope For Leafield.

OTTAWA, Dec. 1.—All hope of the Leafield and her crew of twenty men is gone. It is certain that she foundered in the recent terrible storm, which swept the Great Lakes. A telegram received Saturday by the Marine Department from Captain O. Larin of the Government tug Arbitus, which was ordered out from Port Arthur to look for the missing vessel, reports that the Arbitus was out ten days. Drifting floes of these days the weather was so bad that the tug had to seek shelter at Eagle Harbor. All that was discovered was a black topmast nine feet four belonging probably to the Leafield.

HE SMASHED THE WINDOW.

But Hollander Got Nothing For Pains But Stage Bills.

TORONTO, Dec. 1.—In the belief that about fifty "stage money" 100 dollar bills hanging in the window of Liggett's drug store, on Yonge street, were the real thing, Mike Stamaske, Hollander, just in from Amsterdam, and of no address, smashed the window with a huge wrench, seized as many as he could reach, and sped down Yonge street at four o'clock Saturday morning with his pockets crammed full of what he thought were real hundred dollar bills. He was later arrested at the corner of King and Bay.

The prisoner is nearly six feet in height, and weighs in the neighborhood of 200 pounds. William Foster, an hotel proprietor, whose weight is estimated at 90 pounds, saw the theft and started out in pursuit of the flying Dutchman. Down Yonge to King street, along King to Church and south on Church to Colborne, along Colborne and Melinda and up Bay to the corner of King street, the chase continued.

According to a police officer, the little fellow outran the Hollander, and at every hundred yards or so sprang to the shoulders of the fleeing man, only to be shaken off. Undaunted he would pick himself up, catch him again and the same performance took place. Foster must have been thrown a dozen times before at the corner of King and Bay he took an extra big leap at the panting man, lighted on his shoulders, and the two went to the pavement together. Foster wound his legs round Stamaske, pinned his arms behind his back and commenced to yell.

Constable Perry, away over at the corner of York and King, heard the rumpus and came over on the run to find ninety-pound William Foster of London, England, seated on the broad back of Michael Stamaske of Amsterdam, Holland. The constable arrested Stemaske on a charge of shop breaking.

Eight-Year-Old by Mail.

NEW LEXINGTON, Ohio, Dec. 1.—When the mail arrived here yesterday morning postoffice employes were surprised to find in it an eight-year-old girl bearing a tag which had been placed on her by New York immigration officials, reading as follows: "This child, Julia Kohan, is going to her father, John Kohan, box 117, R.F.D., No. 4, New Lexington, Ohio."

After a breakfast supplied by the postmaster, the child was taken in care of a rural delivery carrier to the home of her father, who lives six miles south of here. The trip of 7,000 miles from Bavaria was made by her alone.

MUST TELL THE TRUTH

Dean Fernow Urges Frankness Concerning Belt

LET THE SETTLER KNOW

COBALT, Dec. 1.—Speaking at the Canadian Club of Timiskaming at its dinner at New Liskeard Saturday night, Dr. B. E. Fernow, dean of the Faculty of Forestry of the University of Toronto, put forth a strong plea for better classification of soils before settlers were allowed to go on them. Speaking of the clay belt and his own report on it, he said: "I do not believe that any country, or any part of any country, can be permanently benefited by having it misrepresented for good or bad. There is so much favorable truth that can be told about the clay belt that it is not necessary to invite the pessimism which comes from disappointed settlers. Surely it is difficult to judge aright new conditions and presage the future of a newly-developed country. A certain optimism is always in place when opening up such a country, but there are some adverse truths in any proposition that can be safely ascertained and must not be hid.

Dr. Fernow's conclusion was: "It is desirable to furnish the settler a land classification which will allow him to select the more easily manageable land, or, at least, to know what he may expect when he undertakes to farm the more difficult soils. With this variety of conditions is it wise to let a poor, somewhat ignorant farmer try his luck in locating? Could not disappointment and failure be reduced, and success, happiness and desirable development be increased giving him at least pointers as to what is involved in his location?"

"Dr. Fernow contended that it could easily be done by an expert instructing students who would be attached to survey parties going out to lay out townships.

MAY FINISH THURSDAY.

Western Rates Enquiry Will Last Most of This Week.

OTTAWA, Dec. 1.—It has practically been decided that the western freight rates enquiry will end probably about next Thursday after being before the Railway Commission at irregular periods since February, 1912.

J. P. Muller, of Washington, D.C., the rate expert engaged by the Dominion Government in the case, may not be called again. He was cross-examined Saturday by F. H. Phippen, K.C., chief counsel for the C.N.R.

To-day, M. K. Cowan, K.C., counsel for the Province of Saskatchewan, will put Alex. Macdonald, of Winnipeg, on the stand to give evidence as to how a schedule of rates he (Macdonald) had compiled were drafted. Mr. Macdonald was a railroad man for several years, and his schedule is awaited with interest by both sides.

When the enquiry is concluded it will likely be a few months before judgment on the case is handed down, as there is a pile of documentary evidence to be gone through.

Free After Seven Years.

KINGSTON, Dec. 1.—Deportation Officer Peter Devlin took from Portsmouth Penitentiary the Mitchell brothers, who served seven years of a 12-year sentence for robbery and attempted murder on the high seas. The men were escorted to Brockville and then across the river to Morristown, where they took the train for Chicago.

The Mitchells, who are colored, were on an excursion steamer running out of Windsor, Ont., when they robbed a passenger and then tried to throw the victim overboard. Because of good conduct the prisoners were liberated after serving little more than half of their time.

Evan Roberts, the Welsh Revivalist, Explains Seclusion.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—Evan Roberts, the young Welshman, who seven years ago led one of the greatest religious revivals known in the principality, and who mysteriously disappeared from public view at the height of his fame and has since lived in absolute seclusion with Mr. and Mrs. Penlewis at Leicester, has at last broken silence about himself. Writing in a religious paper, he says that, like Paul, he is a bond servant of God, and can do nothing except as the spirit moves him. Throughout his seclusion Mr. Roberts has refused to see his aged father, his brothers or his nephew, or to hold any intercourse with them. On Saturday all of them traveled from Wales to Leicester to seek an interview with the recluse, but their pleadings were in vain.

For weeks past public interest in the revivalist's strange conduct has been keen, and in view of the possibility of trouble on the occasion of his relatives' visit on Saturday Mr. Penlewis' house was guarded by half a dozen police. A crowd watched the arrival of the visitors, and sympathized with the old father as he was led away in tears after his son's refusal to see him, but there was no disturbance. Evan spends his life as a mystic. He writes a good deal in collaboration with Mrs. Penlewis, who is a well-known religious worker, and in the article in which he describes himself as a bond servant of God he deprecates the attacks made upon her, declaring that she is a veteran in heavenly things.

OUR EYES WASTE LIGHT.

Not all the radiant energy which enters the eye is active in the process of producing the sensation of light. No doubt it is fair to assume that at least this "inactive" energy is absorbed by the eye media and transformed into heat. This should cause an increase in temperature in the eye, which has led some to hold that this is the cause of irritation and fatigue. There is a general feeling that artificial light is more fatiguing than daylight, which contains far less energy a lumen second than the light under the same conditions of diffusion, intensity, surroundings, retinal adaptation, etc., is really more irritating and fatiguing than daylight, it is wise to look to the spectral character of the radiation as a probable cause. However, there are no actual data which prove that artificial light is more discomforting than daylight when all conditions excepting the spectral character of the radiation are the same.

"That Affair Next Door"

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

I thought to myself, "I would know whether I left pins on my pin-cushion or not," but every one is not as methodical as I am, more's the pity.

"Have you anywhere about you a pin like those you keep on that cushion?" I inquired of Caroline.

She felt at her belt and neck and shook her head.

"I may have upstairs," she replied "Then get me one." But before she could start, I pulled her back. "Did either of you sleep in that room last night?"

"No, we were going to," answered Isabella, "but afterwards Caroline took a freak to sleep in one of the rooms on the third floor. She said she wanted to get away from the parlours as far as possible."

"Then I should like a peep at the one overhead."

The wrenching of the pin-cushion from its place had given me an idea.

They looked at me wistfully as they turned to mount the stairs, but I did not enlighten them further. What would an idea be worth shared by them!

Their father undoubtedly lay in the back room, for they moved very softly around the head of the stairs, but once in front they let their tongues run loose again. I, who cared nothing for their babble when it contained no information, walked slowly about the room and finally stopped before the bed.

It had a fresh look, and I at once asked them if it had been lately made up. They assured me that it had not saying that they always kept their beds spread during their absence, as they did so hate to enter a room disfigured by bare mattresses.

I could have read them a lecture on the niceties of housekeeping, but I refrained; instead of that I pointed to a little dent in the smooth surface of the bed nearest the door.

"Did either of you two make that?" I asked.

They shook their heads in amazement.

"What is there in that?" began Caroline; but I motioned her to bring me the little cushion, which she no sooner did than I laid it in the little dent, which it fitted to a nicety.

"You wonderful old thing!" exclaimed Caroline. "How ever did you think—"

But I stopped her enthusiasm with a look. I may be wonderful, but I am not old, and it is time they knew it.

"Mr. Gryce is old," said I; and lifting the cushion, I placed it on a perfectly smooth portion of the bed. "Now take it up," said I, when lo! a second dent similar to the first.

"You see where that cushion has lain before being placed on the table, I remarked, and reminding Caroline of the pin I wanted, I took my leave and returned to my own house, leaving behind me two girls as much filled with astonishment as the giddiness of their pates would allow.

XIX.

A Decided Step Forward.

I felt that I had made an advance. It was a small one, no doubt, but it was an advance. It would not do to rest there, however, or, to draw definite conclusions from what I had seen without further facts to guide me. Mrs. Boppert could supply these facts, or so I believed. Accordingly I decided to visit Mrs. Boppert.

Not knowing whether Mr. Gryce had thought it best to put a watch over my movements, but taking it for granted that it would be like him to do so, I made a couple of formal calls on the avenue before I started eastward. I had learned Mrs. Boppert's address before leaving home, but I did not ride directly to the tenement where she lived. I chose, instead to get out at a little fancy store I saw in the neighbourhood.

It was a curious place. I never saw so many or such variety of things in one small spot in my life, but I did not waste any time upon this quaint interior, but stepped immediately up to the good woman I saw leaning over the counter.

The woman's look was too quick and suspicious for denial; but she was about to attempt it, when I cut her short by saying:

"I wish to see Mrs. Boppert very much, but not in her own rooms. I will pay any one well who will assist me to five minutes' conversation with her in such a place, say, as that I see behind the glass door at the end of this very shop."

The woman, startled by so unexpected a proposition, drew back a step, and was about to shake her head, when I laid on the counter before her (shall I say how much? Yes, for it was not thrown away) a five-dollar bill, which she no sooner saw than she gave a gasp of delight.

"Will you give me that?" she cried.

For answer I pushed it towards her, but before her fingers could clutch it, I resolutely said:

"Mrs. Boppert must not know there is anybody waiting here to see her, or she will not come. I have no ill-will towards her and mean her only good, but she's a timid sort of person, and—"

"I know she's timid,' broke in the good woman, eagerly. "And she's had enough to make her so! What with policemen drumming her up at night and innocent-looking girls and boys luring her into corners to tell them what she saw in that grand house where the murder took place, she's grown that feared of her shadow you can hardly get her here; and if you mean her no harm, why, ma'am—" Her fingers were on the bill, and charmed with the feel of it, she forgot to finish hr sentence.

"Is there any one in the room back there?" I asked, anxious to recall her to herself.

"No, ma'am, no one at all. I am a poor widder, and not used to such company as you; but if you will sit down, I will make myself look more fit and have Mrs. Boppert over here in a minute." And calling to some one of the name of Susie to look after the shop, she led the way towards the glass door I have mentioned.

Relieved to find everything working so smoothly and determined to get the worth of my money out of Mrs. Boppert when I saw her, I followed the woman into the most crowded room I ever entered. The shop was nothing to it; there you could move without hitting anything; here you could not. There were tables against every wall. Opposite me was a window-ledge filled with flowering plants, and at my right a grate and mantelpiece covered, that is the latter, with innumerable small articles which had evidently passed a long and forlorn probation on the shop shelves before being brought in here. While I was looking at them and marvelling at the small quantity of dust I found, the woman herself disappeared behind a stack of boxes, for which there was undoubtedly no room in the shop (could she have gone for Mrs. Boppert already, or had she slipped into another room to hide the money which had come so unexpectedly into her hands?

I was not long left in doubt, for in another moment she returned with a flower-bedecked cap on her smooth grey head, that transformed her into a figure at once so complacent and so ridiculous that, had my nerves not been made of iron, I should certainly have betrayed my amusement. With it she had also put on her company manner, and what with the smiles she bestowed upon me and her perfect satisfaction with her own appearance, I had all I could do to hold my own and keep her to the matter in hand. Finally she managed to take in my anxiety and her own duty, and saying that Mrs. Boppert could never refuse a cup of tea, offered to send her an invitation to supper. As this struck me favourably, I nodded, at which she cocked her head on one side and insinuatingly whispered:

"And would you pay for the tea, ma'am?"

I uttered an indignant "No!" which seemed to surprise her. Immediately becoming humble again, she replied it was no matter, that she had tea enough and that the shop would supply cakes and crackers; to all of which I responded with a look which awed her so completely that she almost dropped the dishes with which she was endeavouring to set one of the tables.

"She does so hate to talk about the murder that it will be a perfect godsend to her to drop into goo deompany like this with no prying neighbours about. Shall I set a chair for you, ma'am?"

I declined the honour, saying that I would remain seated where I was, adding, as I saw her about to go:

"Let her walk straight in, and she will be in the middle of the room before she sees me. That will suit her and me too; for after she has once seen me, she won't be frightened. But you are not to listen at the door."

This I said with great severity, for I saw the woman was becoming very curious, and having said it, I waved her peremptorily away.

She didn't like it, but a thought of the five dollars comforted her. Casting one final look at the table, which was far from invitingly set, she slipped out and I was left to contemplate the dozen or so of photographs that covered the walls. I found them so atrocious and their arrangement so distracting to my bump of order, which is of a pronounced character, that I finally shut my eyes on the whole scene, and in this attitude began to piece my thoughts togeher. But before I had proceeded far, steps were heard in the shop, and the next moment the door flew open and in popped Mrs. Boppert, with a face like a peony in full blossom. She stopped when she saw me and stared.

"Why, if it isn't the lady—"

"Hush! Shut the door. I have something very particular to say to you."

"O," she began, looking as if she wanted to back out. But I was too quick for her. I shut the door myself and, taking her by the arm, seated her in the corner.

"You dont show much gratitude," I remarked.

I did not know what she had to be grateful to me for, but she had so plainly intimated at our first interview that she regarded me as having done her some favour, that I was disposed to make what use of it I could, to gain her confidence.

"I know, ma'am, but if you could see how I've been harried, ma'am. It's the murder, and nothing but the murder all the time; and it was to get away from the talk about it that I came here, ma'am, and now it's you I see, and you'll be talking about it too, or why be in such a place as this, ma'am?"

"And what if I do talk about it? You know I'm your friend, or I never would have done you that good turn the morning we came upon the poor girl's body."

"I know, ma'am, and grateful I am for it, too; but I've never understood if, ma'am. Was it to save me from being blamed by the wicked police, or was it a dream you had, and the gentleman had, for I've heard what he said at the inquest, and it's muddled my head till I don't know where I'm standing."

What I said and what the gentleman had said! What did the poor thing mean? As I did not dare to show my ignorance, I merely shook my head.

"Never mind what caused us to speak as we did, as long as I helped you. And we did help you? The police never found out what you had to do with this woman's death, did they?"

No, ma'am, O no, ma'am. When such a respectable lady as you said that you saw the young lady come into the house in the middle of the night, how was they to disbelieve it. They never asked me if I knew any different."

"No," said I, almost struck dumb by my success, but letting no hint of my complacency escape me. "And I did not mean they should. You are a decent woman, Mrs. Boppert, and should not be troubled."

"Thank you, ma'am. But how did you know she had come to the house before I left. Did you see her?"

I hate a lie as I do poison, but I had to exercise all my Christian principles not to tell one then.

"No," said I, " didn't see her, but I don't always have to use my eyes to know what is going on in my neighbour's houses." Which is true enough, if it is somewhat humiliating to confess it.

HEADACHES ALMOST DROVE HER WILD

Until A Friend Advised Her To Use "Fruit-a-tives"

NEWBURY, ONT., May 29th. 1913.

"About four years ago, I was in a dreadful run-down condition, weak and hardly able to walk up stairs. Weakness peculiar to women was the chief trouble. I had Headaches that almost drove me wild, and most distressing constipation. I took many dollars' worth of medicine from the doctors without any good results.

A neighbor advised me to take "Fruit-a-tives" and they proved to be the best medicine I ever got and the only medicine to do me any good. Today, I feel as a young girl, and am able to go about my household duties as usual. My health is splendid and "Fruit-a-tives" is the cause of it". MRS. WM. CRIM.

TO KEEP THEMSELVES.

Ontario's Feeble-Minded Will Go Into the Produce Industry.

The feeble folk of Ontario, who reside in asylums and institutes, maintained by the Provincial Government, are rapidly approaching a condition of self-support. For some time progress in this direction has been materialized, but it is now understood that a new movement, broad enough in scope to include all the institutions in all parts of the province is being worked up by Hon. W. J. Hanna, and some of his lieutenants. One of the predominant features is the speedy organizing of a canning system, adequate to produce enough products to serve all the needs of the 8,000 odd persons who are confined in these places. All the necessary supplies will be drawn from the fields and orchards now being cultivated on Government land.

This idea of erecting canning factories and preserving fruits and vegetables is not altogether a new venture for the Ontario Government. In connection with the London Asylum for the Insane, a small plant has been in operation for years and has solved the question of winter supplies with marked success, though on a much larger scale, and to distribute the benefits to all.

The far-reaching nature of the proposal has involved a tremendous amount of detailed planning and the accurate rating of the crops of the institutions from year to year in order to understand the demands of the plants and the yielding power of the sources of supply. A careful analysis of the crop returns from farms under operation this year, is believed to have convinced S. E. Todd, provincial farm director, that the idea is highly feasible, and that the resources in soil fertility, in beef and fruits and vegetables, will permit of the launching of the system at an early date.

Another important question, which naturally faces the government in approaching the matter, is the actual amount of food consumed by each institution. The department has had to get in touch with the more housewifely duties of the matrons of each home and a detailed report of the number of cans of each edible which would be used under ordinary circumstances, has been obtained. The list and variety of fruits and vegetables now grown in connection with the institutions for defectives, and the prison farm is somewhat amazing in its scope, and the excellence of the product has been attested by exhibition at fall fairs, where their presence has called forth admiration.

In addition to the venture in the field of preserving, it is probable that a more serious attempt will be made to render the institutions completely independent as regards dairy and beef supplies. The actual figures of the number of pounds of milk, butter and cheese are already in the hands of the department together with the amount of meat annually consumed and the rate of consumption.

The success of the Government crops for the season, bespeaks the success of the enterprise planned. From every quarter the reports have been most encouraging and in many cases record crops have been gathered. Next season the agricultural end of the work will be pushed with great vigor. Extensive tile operations are already under way.

The plan of the Government as shown merely displays another phase of the work now being done in brick-making and building at the various farms. The supplies are at hand, and by organizations are turned to good account of the inmates who enjoy a double profit from the industry.

HOLY! HOLY! HOLY! LORD OF HOSTS

Knowledge of God's Character Shall Yet Fill the Earth.

A CLEARER LIGHT IS SHINING

The Pastor's Special Thanksgiving—Character Is Known by Plans and Works—Holiness Not an Empty Title—He That Doeth Righteousness Is Righteous—He That Plans and Does Holy Things Is Holy—God Has Been Slandered—In Bible Language Blasphemed—Evil Plans Attributed to Him—Satan, the Deceiver, to Blame—Doctrines of Devils Were Worked Into Our Creeds In the Dark Ages to Turn Us From God and the Bible—Clearer Light Shining.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its insertion.]

New York, Nov. 30.—Pastor Russell spoke here twice to-day. We report one of his themes from the text, "Holy, holy, holy is the Lord of Hosts: the whole earth shall be full of His glory." (Isaiah 6:3.) He spoke without notes as usual, saying in part:

Since shortly after the Second Century the Christian Church has been gradually led into a total misconception of the Divine character as manifested in the Divine attitude toward humanity. Little by little heathenish doctrines respecting an eternity of torture for all except the saintly, favored few, were preached. Gradually men with fervent spirit enlarged upon the errors until today the most horrible descriptions of the Almighty God are printed in Christian publications, creeds, commentaries, etc. No heathen people have ever pictured their god in so devilish a light. Ugly, fierce, devilish, though their idols be, they cannot compare with the Satanic descriptions which Christians in the creeds of the Dark Ages have given of the God of all Grace and Father of Mercies.—1 Corinthians 1:3.

The noblest and best people in Christendom have abandoned the horrible teachings of their fathers, and are more and more worshiping the God of Love, the Fountain of blessings. But the world still judges our God by our printed misrepresentations of Him. In heathen lands, the missionaries are more blinded, perhaps, than ministers in the home land. The rein of orthodoxy is more tightly drawn on them. No wonder they can make little impression on the heathen, who openly declare that they could not worship so unjust and vicious a God as the missionaries present—a God who has already sentenced their forefathers to everlasting torture, because of their ignorance of Jesus, in whose name alone is salvation!

It appears to me, therefore, that to whatever extent any intelligent Christian to-day gives open or secret support to these slanderous, blasphemous statements, of the creeds he is responsible. Nor does it seem to be sufficient that either a Christian or a congregation here and there should privately disown these doctrines. Denominational names stand as representative of the doctrines which led to the formation of these denominations. Would not the only honorable way of rectifying matters now be either as denominations, publicly, openly and in round terms, to repudiate the slanders of the Deity; or, since this would be tedious work, should not each individual set himself straight by as public a withdrawal from such creeds as was his endorsement in joining? The latter surely is the surest and quickest method of rectifying the difficulty. Moreover, it is the right method; for the Bible never authorized any one to organize various sects and parties.

The Bible recognizes only the one Church of Christ—"The Church of the First-borns, written in Heaven." Every one who has accepted Christ as his Saviour and consecrated his life to be a footstep follower of Jesus—all such, begotten of the Holy Spirit, are members of the one true Church. Their names are written in the Lamb's Book of Life, and they have the promise that they will be granted abundant entrance into His Kingdom in the First Resurrection—if they abide faithful. "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life."

Let me not be misunderstood. I am not charging that these blasphemous doctrines were intentionally brought in to misrepresent God or to deceive the Church of the world. I prefer to take the Apostle Paul's explanation. He wrote prophetically, "I fear, lest by any means, as the serpent beguiled Eve through his subtlety, so your minds should be corrupted from the simplicity that is in Christ." (2 Corinthians 11:3.) This is exactly what has happened. The Church of Christ has been beguiled by earthly favors, not only into a wrong attitude toward the kingdoms of this world, but, as St. Paul declares, from the simplicity of the Truth into a mass of confusing and blasphemous errors.

First came the beguiling of the bishops into thinking that they were successors to The Twelve Apostles and equally inspired authorities and mouthpieces of Christ. Thus the doctrine of Apostolic Succession was gradually established. Jesus prophesied of these, describing them as false apostles, "which say they are apostles and are not," but do lie. (Revelation 2:2.) As the bishops received credit as being living Apostles, the inspired words of Jesus and The Twelve Apostles whom He appointed took second place, and with the masses Bible study ceased as wholly unnecessary.

Upon this foundation, the great Adversary built, item by item, the terrible doctrines of purgatory and of eternal torture.. When finally, in the Sixteenth Century, the Bible again began to be consulted, Satan so worked matters that some of our forefathers retained the Hell of indescribable torture for all except the elect few—repudiating because not Scriptural the only ameliorating feature—the purgatory theory.

Their eyes blinded with the errors of fourteen centuries of no Bible study—the errors of human theories and doctrines of demons—can we wonder that the enlightenment of the past three centuries has come very slowly? Even when we were getting free from the errors, Satan, our wily foe, entrapped our forefathers into the making of creeds, and thus hindered further progress out of the darkness into the light, for which we all cry.

The seducing spirits mentioned by St. Paul are surely none others than the fallen angels, of whom Satan is the chief, or "prince of devils." As St. Paul suggests, there is a similarity between the deception of the Church and the original deception of Mother Eve. Eve was beguiled into believing that God's threat, "Dying, thou shalt die," could not be true. The serpent declared, "Ye shall not surely die." Thus deceived by the serpent's lie, Mother Eve was ensnared and led her husband and our race into death.

And now note the parallel. The seducing spirits, the fallen angels, have sought to perpetuate in the Church the very same falsehood which misled Mother Eve. And they have succeeded. By visions, dreams, tipping tables, trance mediums, clairaudient powers, mesmeric powers, hypnotic powers, they have deceived the Christian Church, even as they had previously deceived the heathen, into thinking that the dead are really alive. Upon that foundation they have built the doctrine of the tortures of Hell and Purgatory, and subsequently, doctrines of masses and prayers for the deliverance of the dead from Purgatory, and doctrines respecting God's having foreordained and predestinated all except the Elect to eternal anguish.

On Thursday last, when my heart went out to God in special thanksgiving for all the mercies of life, I gave Him special thanks that gradually the eyes of my understanding are opening, enabling me to see Him in the glorious light of His great, loving Plan of Salvation for the church and for the world. My thanks for all temporal mercies and blessings were dwarfed as the anthem of my soul went up, and I repeated the text of to-day, "Holy, holy, holy, Lord of Hosts!"

Ah! It is a blessed thought that God has already made provision that Messiah's Kingdom shall be established; that Satan shall be bound and shall deceive men no more; and that, instead of the darkness of ignorance and superstition, the glorious light of God's goodness shall arise forth, causing the earth to be filled with His praises!

With great patience God has permitted His plans and His character to be misrepresented and traduced. Yet we can see a wisdom in this; for eventually, when all the blind eyes shall be opened and all the deaf ears shall be unstopped, when all the delusions of the past—the hobgoblins of seducing spirits and the doctrines of devils—shall have gone, the Lord's precious character and loving provision for our fallen race will stand forth in glorious radiance.

The Saviour declares, "This is life eternal, that they might know Thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom Thou hast sent." (John 17:3.) Evidently He meant by this that whoever would have an intimate acquaintance with God must be received again into God's family; that those who do not come back into God's family will never know Him in the true sense of the word—be able to appreciate the glories of His grand character—His Justice, His Wisdom, His Power and His Love. Such knowledge is imparted only to those brought into the family and made partakers of God's Spirit.

In the present time only a very few of our fallen race are able to take the steps which lead to this intense, deep knowledge of Jehovah. The great mass of mankind are blinded by ignorance, superstition and the weaknesses of their fallen nature. But God is not content that merely the elect Church shall have this knowledge of Him and this opportunity for everlasting life. His glorious purposes encompass the world of mankind. His Divine arrangement is two-fold: first, that "all the blind eyes shall be opened and all the deaf ears shall be unstopped"; second, that "the glory of the Lord shall be revealed and all flesh shall see it together," and that "the knowledge of God's glory shall fill the whole earth, as the waters cover the great deep."

We may be sure that when the true enlightenment shall reach humanity the real character of the Heavenly Father will be manifested, and there will be a hallelujah chorus on earth which will rival the Heavenly acclaim of "Glory to God in the Highest." It is not for us to say that all, or even the majority of the human family, enlightened and set free from the bondage to Sin and Death, will become the willing servants of God, righteousness and Truth. We cannot judge from our own experiences. We must remember that God recognizes human free agency, the will; and that He seeketh only such to worship Him as worship Him in spirit and in truth.

The Scriptures make clear that only those who shall learn to love righteousness and to hate iniquity, evil—in the present time as members of the elect Church, or in the future Age as restored humanity—only such will be judged worthy of life by the Great Judge. Any sympathy with sin, after having known of its bitter fruits, and after having been recovered from the curse, will be a crime—an evidence of failure to learn the great lessons of seven thousand years—lessons of the exceeding sinfulness of sin—lessons of God's Justice in punishing sin—lessons in God's Mercy in providing forgiveness for our sins and release from them and from their penalty—lessons in the humility of our Redeemer—lessons in the cost of recovery from Sin and Death.

Whoever, after all these lessons, would still be sympathetic with sin, would, according to the Bible, be unworthy of everlasting life. For the Scriptures assure us that death is the penalty for sin, that the soul that sinneth must die, and that the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord, which will be given only to those wise enough and loyal enough to use it in accord with the great Creator's regulations and laws, framed for the benefit of His creatures and for the glory of His name.

Those whose eyes of understanding are gradually opening to see the real glory of Jehovah's character as reflected in His great Plan of the Ages may well have patience with others who see not as yet. The fact that our own eyes were so long in opening, the fact that we were as honest and sincere before as we are now, should lead us to assume that the same conditions apply to our brethren, professed people of God, everywhere. Moreover, we are not to be judges one of another. Proclaiming the Truth in as nearly as possible the Bible words, we are to be content to deliver our Message and to leave to the Lord the results.

It is ours to point out the horrible confusion into which the Lord's people got during the Dark Ages, and which justified the Lord in calling the nominal church Babylon. It is ours to point out the Message of the Lord, saying, "Babylon is fallen, is fallen (from Divine favor)! Come out of her, My people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues." Whoever sees that the entire nominal church system of all denominations is the Babylon referred to by the Lord has the responsibility of the Lord's Message without any urging on our part.

Whoever sees the blasphemy of the Holy Name sees that misrepresentation of the Divine Plan, making the world drunk with the wine of false doctrine, has been amongst the crimes of Babylon, and should wish forthwith to come out of her, to share no longer in her misrepresentation, however much blended with forms of holiness.

Whoever, after seeing the real character of Babylon and the horrible work which Satan has deluded her into doing, still has sympathy with her and with her work and with her blasphemies and distortions of the Truth—such persons deserve to share in the confusion that is shortly to come to Babylon when she shall fall as a great millstone into the sea.

"Light is sown for the righteous; Truth for the upright in heart." Those who do not receive the Truth as meat in due season have reason to fear that they do not belong to the class described by the Prophet as the righteous and as the upright in heart. Honesty seems to be a quality which the Lord holds in very high esteem. The dishonest in word or conduct or in their thoughts are an abomination to Him, and should not expect to receive special favor or light or knowledge.

We may well imagine that the entire Millennial Age will be one grand Thanksgiving Day, in which the numbers who will praise God will be continually increasing as more and more they awaken from the tomb. As their eyes shall see and their ears shall hear of the grace and love of God, every tongue will confess, while every knee shall bow, not only to Jesus the Redeemer, but to the gracious Creator, who formed the Plan which the Millennium will execute.

The Master gives assurance that ultimately there will be no place where curses and blasphemies will be heard—no place where rebels against God and His goodness will remain. All such wilful, intelligent sinners will finally be destroyed in the Second Death. Then will come the grand anthem of the Universe: "Every creature in Heaven, and in earth, heard I saying, Praise, glory, honor, dominion and might be unto Him that sitteth upon the Throne, and unto the Lamb, forever."

That will be the glorious Day, mentioned by our Master in His prayer, "Thy Kingdom come; Thy will be done on earth, as it is done in Heaven." And because God's will shall be as completely done on earth as in Heaven, therefore sin, sorrow, sickness, pain and death will no longer be conditions on earth, even as they are not conditions in Heaven. Thus will be fulfilled the Master's words, that there shall be no more dying, crying, sighing, for all the former things shall have passed away. He that sits upon the Throne shall have made all things new, and thus in His Messianic Kingdom God will have wiped away all tears from off all faces.

BAD BLOOD IS THE DIRECT CAUSE OF Pimples.

Pimples break out on the face and body, and it is impossible to get rid of them, unless you cleanse the blood of all of its impurities.

Burdock Blood Bitters is without a doubt, the very best medicine for this purpose.

This old, and reliable medicine has been in use for nearly forty years, and has a reputation unequalled by any other preparation for removing all the impurities from the blood and banishing the pimples.

Mr. Edward Paquette, Navan Centre, Ont., writes:—"One month ago my face was covered with pimples and a rash. I had tried a number of these so called blood purifiers with no avail. Seeing an almanac of yours in which you strongly recommend Burdock Blood Bitters, I decided to try a bottle, and after I had taken it I could see a decided change, and after using three bottles more all the pimples had completely disappeared."

[illegible] Causes Hardening of the Arteries and Other Grave Troubles.

Physicians have always studied the pulse, because it gives valuable information concerning the body's condition of health or disease. But it is only recently that they have begun to use the term "blood pressure" frequently and to regard the amount of that pressure as of great importance. That is because they now have instruments for accurately measuring the pressure, which previously they could only estimate by feeling the pulse.

Blood pressure or the degree of tension of the blood current within the arteries is chiefly significant because a permanent increase in it is quite sure to be followed in time by hardening of the arteries and by the degeneration or disease of important organs, especially the kidneys.

The blood pressure is increased by a number of causes that increase the force of the heart beat or that contract the smaller blood vessels. Any excitement—anger, joy, fear, "nervousness"—raises it temporarily. But that is of little importance unless the emotion is frequently repeated or unless the person already has diseased arteries. The blood pressure that is permanently high is more serious. That comes from long continued mental excitement, such as worry, business anxiety or political strife or from the action of certain poisons that are formed in the system and not properly excreted.

These poisons come from the waste products of digestion, especially in large meat eaters. They raise the blood pressure by causing the smaller arteries to contract.

In small amounts these poisons are excreted at once, but in persons who eat large quantities of meat, especially of beef and mutton—poultry and fish are less harmful—they are sometimes formed in amounts so large that the kidneys cannot dispose of them promptly. When this happens, especially if it occurs in a person who is under a constant mental strain, like the politician, the financier or the chronic worrier, there is grave danger of a permanently high blood pressure and, following that, of hardening of the arteries and of kidney disease, mental disturbance or apoplexy.

If you must worry be a vegetarian; if you must eat meat do so only once a day or, better still, every other day. —Youth's Companion.

King of Flowers.

On the score of age alone the peony should command the interest of all flower lovers. It has a history which began many hundreds of years ago. The tree peony, Paonia moutan, is a native of China. This peony, more than any other flower, has been the glory and pride of the Chinese for nearly 1,500 years and has been a subject for their painters and a theme for their poets. In China for more than 1,000 years a record has been kept of the percentage of seedlings of this peony and their characteristics. Its great beauty and fragrance made it centuries ago the favorite flower of China's emperors, and it was called Hwa Wang—king of flowers.—Suburban Life.

LOCOMOTOR ATAXIA

"My nerves were very bad, and I could not sleep at night, nor could I control my steps or hold writing. Mrs. Robert Maxwell, Maxwell, N.B., "Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cured me of what I believe was the early stage of locomotor ataxia or paralysis. I cannot describe what I suffered, but now I am completely cured."

The Art Critic.

The artist's woman friend was being shown around the studio.

"Oh, perfect!" she exclaimed, looking at a picture. "Those ostriches are simply superb. You should never paint anything but birds."

The artist winced under the blow.

"Those are not ostriches," he said; "they are angels."—St. Paul Dispatch.

The Bright Side.

An optimist lay in the ditch;
His auto was a wreck;
Beside him was a thorn bush which
Had badly scratched his neck.

His left ear hung by but a thread;
His ankles had been sprained;
From many wounds he bled;
His clothes were torn and stained.

He looked upon the wreck with glee
And, gazing, felt serene.
"I'm making money now," said he,
"By saving gasoline."

The Portrait.

"Paint me a picture of one I hold dear."
"Yes," said the artist, "I'll paint it right here."
Then he drew angles and oblongs and all
Squares without number and lines short and tall,
Rhomboids for eyeballs and cubes for the cheeks.
"There," said the artist, "the face fairly speaks."
I looked at the portrait—don't mind what I said—
I seized it and fractured its cubical head.

The Unknown Quantity.

"I'll bet she will," began the rash youth.

"Don't," interrupted his older and wiser companion. "Don't bet that she will ever do anything. You can never tell what a woman will do."

"But," protested the young man, "I was going to bet that she would do the unexpected."

"Don't," repeated the older earnestly. "Even that is no safe bet."—Judge.

The Original New Zealanders.

The original New Zealanders were known as the most ferocious cannibals and the most warlike savages. They were big, gaunt fellows, of immense muscular force and great sagacity. These savage New Zealanders, though they ate their enemies, interred their own dead, and they believed that the third day after burial the heart separated itself from the corpse and was carried to the clouds by an attendant spirit.

Unfreezable.

Mario, the singer, who died in 1868, appeared in London, his favorite city, for thirty-two years, during which time he appeared in forty-six parts, a record which has never been approached by any other artist.

Sage And Sulphur Darkens Gray Hair

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Restore Colour, Gloss and Thickness

Hair that loses its colour and lustre or when it fades, turns grey, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value that even colour, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive, use only this old-time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture by asking at any drug store for a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. Besides, it takes off dandruff, stops scalp itching and falling hair. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the glow and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.

"I'll give you five minutes to write that description," he sternly said: "if it is not done by that time, I shall punish you."

If we charge ten per cent. off for depreciation it will come to five hundred dollars more. A good chauffeur can be had for the hundred and twenty-five dollars a month, or fifteen hundred dollars a year. I have allowed ten dollars a week for gasoline and five dollars for repairs. The chauffeur's uniform and furs will come to about two hundred dollars. Now, let's see what it comes to: Three hundred plus five hundred—"

Somebody in town with a plausible claim to plutocracy persists in frying bacon, the forty-cent kind, cut particularly thin, every morning for breakfast, and when the savor is wafted out to mingle with the crisp air of these early autumn morns and it floats in upon the lowly devotee of the print-shop as he extracts the lacteal fluid from the cow with both horns missing, hunger springs eternal within the human stomach, and as we sit down to our morning repast of rye bread and liver, with nostrils still attuned to the odor of sizzling swine, the curb that the high cost of living ought to have on a man's appetite fades away like a ten-cent piece wagered on the Giants in the first game of the world's series.—Oswego (Kan.) "What makes the trains on this line always late?" asked the passenger.

"Probably the fact that the employes have to waste so much time answering needless questions," replied the weary inspector.

He: "Darling, why are you so sad?"

Advice.

"Good gracious!" exclaimed a listener. "How could they talk?"

"They couldn't," was the reply. "That was what made them wild."

The Single Coward.

A witty judge declared recently that "a patriot was a man who refused to button his wife's blouse. A martyr," he went on, "is one who attempts and fails, while a hero tries and succeeds."

"Then what is a coward?" asked a curious bystander.

"Oh, a coward," replied the judge, "is a man who remains single so that he won't have to try."

Ready for Another.

A clever lawyer succeeded in winning his client's case and getting the better of a rather bumptious barrister. The latter couldn't conceal his chagrin, and, meeting his victorious opponent in the smoke-room of the hotel at which they were staying, he remarked in a loud and spiteful tone:

"Sir, is there any case too dirty for you, or any criminal so much dyed in crime that you won't defend?"

"No," said the other in a quiet tone. "What have you been doing now?"

A Strong Recommendation.

Simeon Ford, apropos of a pretty girl's mercenary marriage, said:

"She was led into this by her mother. You know what some mothers are! Like Mrs. Avarus.

"Mrs. Avarus was urging her daughter to marry Naybob. But the girl cried:

"'Naybob! Why, he's old and he's ugly—he's mean and he's cruel. He's illiterate and he's vulgar. Naybob! Naybob has nothing in the world to recommend him except his wealth.'

"'You forget his heart disease, my dear,' said the mother gently."

"Can you direct me to the best hotel in this town?" asked the stranger who, after sadly watching the train depart, had set his satchel upon the station platform.

"I can," replied the man who was waiting for a train going the other way; "but I hate to do it."

"Why?"

"Because you will think after you've seen it that I'm a liar."

"Speaking of hens," said an American traveler, "reminds me of an old hen my dad had on a farm in Dakota. She would hatch out anything from a tennis ball to a lemon. Why, one day she sat on a piece of ice and hatched out two quarts of hot water."

"That doesn't come up to a club-footed hen my old mother once had," said one of his hearers. "They had been feeding her by mistake on sawdust instead of oatmeal. Well, she laid 12 eggs and sat on them, and when they were hatched 11 of the chickens had wooden legs and the twelfth was a woodpecker."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A SINGULAR MARRIAGE

It Was to Serve a Legal Purpose

By EDNA C. TRASK

My father died when I was nineteen, leaving me a fortune. He had made it by building up a business in which he was much interested and always regretted that I had not been born a boy that I might succeed him in its management. Since that could not be he made arrangements before his death for the succession, but left the greater part of the stock of the company to me. At the time of his death his lawyer, Mr. Crocker, who was also his most intimate friend, was abroad, but was expected home within a few weeks. Nevertheless my father had named Mr. Crocker to be my guardian.

Mr. Crocker was taken ill abroad and was a long while regaining his health. Not considering himself fitted for business, he remained away nearly a year longer than had been expected. One morning immediately after his arrival I received a telephone message from him to come to his office at once It was then 11 o'clock, and I promised him that I would be there within a quarter of an hour.

The moment I arrived he took me into his private office and shut the door.

"Are you engaged to be married?" he asked quickly.

"No."

"Is there any young man whom you would like to marry?"

"No. Why do you ask these questions?"

"The extension of my trip abroad has turned awry your father's intentions for you. He had no faith in a woman's ability to manage property and appointed me your guardian till you reach the age of twenty-one years, or the 21st day of November, which is today. He also willed that if you married with my approval of your husband your fortune was to be turned over to you. If you were not so married by noon today the estate was to be kept in the business, you to receive $100 a month from it, the principal to be ultimately used to found an institution to bear the testator's name."

Great heavens—a hundred dollars a month! I had been used to spending more than that for pin money.

"What shall I do?" I cried. "I know no one I wish to marry or who wishes to marry me."

"I think I can save your property to you by formally complying with the provisions laid down. You can marry, but need not live with your husband and in time get a divorce. These persons who try to tie up property after their death usually make a mess of it. I have had only an hour in which to act, for I did not read the will till I came to the office an hour ago, but I have already made an arrangement by which you may be married at once. There is now waiting in another room a man who will marry you, with the understanding that the marriage is merely to conform to the law. If you don't care to live with him"—

"Care to live with him! Of course I won't care to live with him!" I exclaimed.

"In that case, in due time I will see that you secure a divorce."

"Why does the man consent to marry me?"

"I will see that he doesn't suffer by the transaction—that is," he added, "in case he does not fall in love with his wife."

"Let me see him," I moaned. "No. I don't wish to see him. I am to marry him to evade the law. I don't care who or what he is."

"Your decision?" queried Mr. Crocker.

"On the terms," was my reply, "I'll marry Old Nick."

A tap on a bell brought an attendant, and Mr. Crocker directed him to summon the two gentlemen in the outer room.

"Oh, heavens!" I exclaimed. "Are there two of them?"

"One is a clergyman," Mr. Crocker explained, with a faint smile.

The moment they entered I stared at the groom to be. I gave a sigh of relief, for in case anything should go wrong I felt that I might have every confidence in him. He did not show the same eager curiosity in me that I had for him, looking at me with a reassuring smile. Mr. Crocker introduced him, but I did not hear his name or the complimentary things that were said about him. All the young man said was that he would be happy to help me out of a difficulty and that I need not fear for a moment that he would take advantage of the legal knot that was to be tied between us. As for me, I didn't open my mouth, but submitted to be led like a lamb to the slaughter.

In order to keep up appearances—that is, to avoid a swoon or a breakdown of some kind during the ceremony—I exercised my will power to fancy that I was a happy bride, marrying the man of my choice. I got on tolerably well till I heard the words "man and wife;" then things began to grow confused about me, and I knew nothing more till I found myself lying on an office lounge, looking up into the most sympathetic, kindly, loving—yes, it was loving—face I ever saw.

Then I heard persons leaving the room, and presently all was still. I judged that I was alone with my—legal—husband.

"Poor child!"

"I hope," I said, "that you don't consider my breaking down in this way any want of compliment to you. It was the suddenness of it, the—the"—I was stalled.

"It would be very foolish in me," he said, "to consider my individuality of any importance whatever in the matter. I am simply that legal party, Mr. John Doe, who is constantly disputing with Richard Roe. You, being a woman, can't be Richard Roe. I suppose, however, you might be Richarda Roe. But we need never have any of the legal squabbles of these two ancient and honorable parties, for we are not to be together, and you can rely on Mr. Crocker to get you out of it without any trouble whatever. I see no necessity of your giving up your maiden name except in signing documents. This legal condition need not last a year, I am sure, and will be scarcely a ripple on the surface of your life."

"You are very nice about it, and I have every confidence in you. How did Mr. Crocker come to select you for the purpose?"

"I am under great obligations to your late father."

"You! Under obligations to papa!"

"Yes. Fifteen years ago, when I was a boy, he took me into his business and advanced me till at the time of his death I was his principal manager."

"You are not Edward Keane?"

"I am."

How singular! I was married to Edward Keane. Ten years before a young man of twenty had come one day to the house from my father's office with a message for him. I was then a girl of ten and saw him but a few moments. Since then I had heard of Edward Keane, whom my father was intending to place at the head of his business when he should leave it. The young man had been to the house a number of times since, but I had always been away, either at school or visiting, at the time of his coming. I was lost in wonder at this happening and was tongue tied. Presently I asked him if the marriage was the carrying out of a plan laid by my father before his death.

"I only know," he replied, "that not two hours ago Mr. Crocker summoned me here in great haste and told me that my benefactor's daughter must be married before noon or lose her inheritance. He asked me if I would consent to be a legal husband till the property could be turned over to you and would pledge myself to leave you free and consent to a divorce at any time you desired. I told him that I would do anything in my power for your father's daughter. Besides, I have seen you once or twice when you have not seen, or perhaps have not noticed, me."

"And you did not marry me for a—for a consideration?"

"Yes; the consideration of being of service to you."

We chatted some time longer, when my husband prepared to call in Mr. Crocker and ask him for a full statement of the case. He came and told us that it was my father's wish that I should marry Edward Keane. My father had stipulated that I was to do so or the provision already stated was to be enforced. Mr. Crocker was relied on to make this match, if possible. His failure to return as soon as expected came very near costing me a fortune. When he found that he must act at once he did so with his accustomed rapidity and talent for management. He had married me as my father desired, and it remained with me and my husband whether we should make the marriage real as well as legal. After giving us this explanation he retired, leaving us again alone together.

"What shall we do?" I remarked, as much to myself as to him.

"You can do nothing unless I ask you to be my wife till death do us part, as your father desired. Will you?"

We remained together where we were for an hour longer. At first I was disposed to put off a decision, but before we left I had consented. There was nothing more to do but make an announcement of our marriage and go on our wedding journey.

Wild Duck Caught In Nets.

The fishery inspector's launch was very busy in Neiler's Bay, Ont., near the Bay of Quinte, recently, and more than one fisherman is regretting the seizure of nets which he had the temerity to set out in violation of the statute.

At other times of the year the men who earn a living by taking the herring, pike, pickerel and whitefish, which frequent the bay in shoals, have a right to set their snares. But during October, netting within the confines of the bay is illegal.

Thousands of wild duck throng the waters during that month and diving to feed on the wild celery which grows far beneath the surface, numbers of the birds get their heads tangled in the meshes and drown.

It was no secret that certain market hunters deliberately employed this device for taking wild-fowl, selecting favorite feeding spots for their pretended fishing.

Fruit In Glass.

A housewife who was puzzled to know how she could put fruit in the refrigerator and not have it scent the butter and milk by the side of it caught the idea of emptying out the basket into glass jars and putting on the tops.

Woman and Politics.

A woman in politics will never be able to throw mud straight.—Baltimore American.

Possibly one solution of the suffrage matter might be to let women vote in place of the men who won't.—Philadelphia Ledger.

If women voted could the husband influence his wife's ballot with the promise of a new hat? Perhaps and perhaps not. But what has that to do with the question of women's right to vote?—Baltimore American.

Preaching In Kilts.

Rev. L. Branford, of Islay, Scotland, is a cleric who habitually wears the kilt. In doing so he merely revives a custom which was once universal among the Highland clergy.

Up to about a hundred years ago the Highland priests not only wore the kilt on all occasions, but they had their own tartan, the main color of which was dark blue. Further, the Highland cleric of the old days usually went about armed to the teeth. Even on the Sabbath he would be preceded on his way to church by his servant bearing his broadsword and pistols. When the minister ascended the pulpit he took his weapons with him, placing them in a conspicuous position on the pulpit ledge.

"SOME HA'E MEAT, AND CANNA EAT"

So Bobby Burns tersely describes the rich, but still poor, dyspeptics. But their case is not now so desperate as when Burns wrote. For the man who has the food now can eat without suffering for it, if he just follows the meal with a Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablet.

These remarkable tablets banish the troubles of the chronic dyspeptic—the man who is bilious—the sufferer from heartburn, gas on the stomach or occasional indigestion. You can eat hearty meals of wholesome food—and digest them, too—if you take Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets.

Compounded by expert chemists, after probably the best formula known to medical science, they are quick and certain in their action, giving prompt relief from all forms of stomach trouble, toning up and strengthening the digestive organs and bringing about permanent cures.

A man is no stronger than his stomach. Fit yourself for your best work by taking Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets. 50c. at your druggist's. National Drug and Chemical Co. of Canada, Limited, Montreal. 144

VETERAN TO RETIRE.

Dr. S. B. Robins Is Canada's Oldest Active Educationist.

After nearly two-thirds of a century devoted to the cause of education in Ontario and Quebec, one of Canada's oldest educationists—in all probability the very oldest both in age and years of active service—has announced his retirement from public life in the person of Dr. S. B. Robins, who has passed the four-score mark, and first taught near Cobourg, Ont., in 1848. For about half a century Dr. Robins had been associated with the development of Normal schools in Montreal, until the Normal school of which he was head ceased to have a separate existence in 1907. For more than a third of a century the venerable doyen of his profession was a member of the Protestant Committee of Public Instruction, a position from which he publicly announced his resignation a few days ago, giving for his reason "advanced age."

In a conversation with Dr. Robins a few days ago, he talked for nearly two hours most interestingly of educational development in Ontario and Quebec, including reminiscences of pre-Confederation days in Toronto. His first teaching position was in a rural school, on the fourth line of Dummer, in what was then called Western Canada. He was then still in his teens, and soon moved to a country school house near Cobourg. It was while teaching near there that he became acquainted with the famous Canadian educationist, Dr. Egerton Ryerson, with whom thereafter his life was to be more or less intimately associated.

Dr. Robins has many keen recollections of events and incidents which have passed into history, including the fights of pre-Confederation days, the riots during the Barney Devlin-D'Arcy McGee election, the burning of the Douglas planing mill in 1858, because of hatred for the head of the company, who had converted his servant girl from Catholicism to Protestantism, and other exciting occurrences.

Though drawing on apace towards the century mark, Dr. Robins is still strong and vigorous, walks upright, and can read small print easily. His conversation is almost that of a purist and his memory really wonderful in its wealth of detail.

He made, early in life, two resolutions, which he has kept. These are:

"Never to seek wealth."

"Never to seek political preferment."

He attributes his enjoyment of a life replete with action to his adherence to these two principles.

He has just broken one life-long principle—never to seek newspaper publicity. But now, on his retirement, he agreed to break this. He says he thinks he's old enough now to do this without anyone saying that he has any ulterior end in view.

At his home, 94 St. Matthew street, Montreal, with an unmarried daughter, Dr. Robins lives quietly, in peace and seclusion. He spends his leisure reading and solving abstruse mathematical problems, as, when he specialized in this department of knowledge a few decades ago, he had a reputation as a mathematician which was international. The study of prime numbers is his latest hobby.

Few men continue their studies as octagenarians, but Dr. Robins' thousands of friends in Montreal, Toronto, and other parts of Canada, including all who have passed under his tutelage, wish him many more years of happiness and usefulness.

BACKACHE IS A DANGER-SIGNAL

Kidney Troubles, Bladder Disorders, Rheumatism, and Serious Diseases Follow - | «|5

There are other symptoms, such as pains in the region of the kidneys, nervousness, dizziness, tired and worn-out feeling, weak bladder, or urinary troubles, which are just as dangerous, for the slightest kidney derangement if neglected may develop into the deadly Bright's disease, dropsy or diabetes.

It is not only dangerous, but needless, for you to suffer and endure the tortures of these troubles, for Croxone promptly ends all such misery.

There is no more effective remedy for kidney, bladder trouble and rheumatism, than Croxone, because it reaches the cause. It soaks right into the kidneys, through the walls and linings, cleans out the clogged up pores, neutralizes and dissolves the poisonous uric acid and waste matter, that lodge in the joints and muscles and cause those terrible rheumatic pains, and makes the kidneys filter the poison from the blood and drives it out of the system.

Three doses of Croxone a day for a few days is often all that is ever needed to relieve the worst backache or overcome disagreeable urinary disorders.

You will find Croxone different from other remedies. It is so prepared that it is practically impossible to take it without results. An original package of Croxone costs but a trifle, and all druggists are authorized to return the purchase price if it should fail in a single case.

ANOTHER BOAT LOST.

Steamer I. W. Nicholls Goes Ashore In Lake Huron.

ALPENA, Mich., Dec. 1. — The steamer I. W. Nicholls, of Cleveland which grounded off North Point in Lake Huron last Wednesday night, broke in two during the fierce storm which swept that section of the lake Saturday night. She will probably be a total loss. The crew remained aboard until hope of saving the steamer was abandoned and life-savers rescued them shortly before midnight.

The boat was bound from Port Arthur to Buffalo with 175,000 bushels of flax.

An attempt probably will be made to save part of the cargo.

The steamer Gogebic, coal laden, which grounded here Saturday, was released yesterday. She was not damaged.

The storm on Lake Huron moderated considerably yesterday.

Premier Borden Home Again.

OTTAWA, Dec. 1.—The Premier and Mrs. Borden returned yesterday from the south. They were met by Col. Hughes and Hon. W. T. White. Mr. Borden was looking in the best of health, although he felt tired after spending three nights on the train.

He stated that his visit to Washington had no political significance whatever, but was simply social. He had been invited by Secretary Lane, who is a Nova Scotian, and he met Mr. Bryan and President Wilson. The Premier will be back at his office to-day.

Starting the Day Right

Do you begin the day with a "grouch"? Are you tired in the mornings? Do you fail to benefit by the restorative influence of sleep, which should make good the energy and vitality consumed by the day's work?

Then you are rapidly becoming bankrupt so far as health is concerned. You should look to your habits of eating, make sure that you get lots of fresh air in your sleeping apartments, and restore wasted vitality by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

This great food cure does not induce sleep by any drugging effect, but when you have been using it for a few days and get the nervous system into condition you find yourself resting and sleeping naturally and healthfully. By keeping up this restorative treatment you will be able to make good the waste and fill the exhausted nervous system with new vigour and energy. This means thorough cure of such symptoms as headache, sleeplessness, indigestion and tired, listless feelings.

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 1. — After deliberating for nearly 24 hours a jury in the district court Saturday declared Mrs. Hilda Rowland guilty of having attempted to entice a young woman to go from Minneapolis to Winnipeg to lead an immoral life. Mrs. Rowland has not been sentenced.

The crime for which she was convicted is punishable by a prison sentence, the maximum of which is five years. Mrs. Rowland was arrested during the session of the International Purity Congress here early this month, and the case attracted considerable attention from the delegates.

Governor Escapes Assassin.

HONG KONG, Dec. 1.—Gen. Chi Kuang Lung, Governor of Canton, on Saturday, for the second time within a fortnight, was attacked by an assassin, who endeavored to plunge a knife into his heart. Gen. Lung, however, escaped with only a wound in the hand. Gen. Lung personally killed four of his guards, fearing treachery at their hands.

Serious trouble in Canton is anticipated shortly. The Chinese are apprehensive and business is becoming stagnant. The police have been reinforced. Stores of bombs are frequently found in the city.

FIGHT ON STREET CAR.

Widely Known Winnipeg Man Dies After Receiving Blows.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 1.—A street car squabble Saturday afternoon eventually cost the life of William Haliburton, an old-time resident of Winnipeg, Henry R. Howard, manager of the Pitner Lighting Co. of Minneapolis, is under arrest in that city awaiting instructions from the Winnipeg police. Howard attempted to get off a car near the C.P.R. station. He had some trouble getting through the crowd, and as Haliburton was directly in his way he attempted to give him a shove out of the way. In the mix-up Haliburton received a couple of blows on the jaw. Later he collapsed, and died at nine o'clock.

Extradition papers are being made out, and it is understood Howard will be charged with manslaughter.

Duke Lost Jewels.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—It has just become known that the Duke of Connaught lost a quantity of valuable jewelry, including the Garter jewels. Scotland Yard is conducting a search of great secrecy into the mystery. It is not stated whether the property is supposed to have been lost or stolen or when it was first missed. The duke sailed for Canada on Oct. 17. The jewelry includes five cravat pins, three pairs of sleeve links, a gold wrist watch, an enamel garter and crown. Some articles bear the duke's initials "A. W." (Arthur William).

MOTHER TELLS

How Her Little Girl Was Restored to Health.

Mrs. Chas. Schriefer of 139 Himrod St., Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "My little girl was frail, sickly and all run down after having had the grippe. I was advised to give her Vinol and after the first bottle noticed an improvement. She has taken four bottles and has picked up rapidly, having gained six pounds in three weeks."

The reason Vinol builds up weak, ailing children so quickly is because it contains in a delicious combination the two most world famed tonics —i. e., the strength creating, body building elements of cod liver oil, with all the useless grease eliminated, and tonic iron for the blood added. If you have a weak, puny, ailing child, try Vinol on our offer to return your money if it fails to benefit your little one.

Shot Friend and Self.

LEWISTON, Maine, Dec. 1.—Joseph Sanchons of Bangor, last night shot at his friend, John Roy, from an alley, then turned the revolver upon himself, dying almost instantly. Roy probably will die. Miss Marion Boisvert, niece of Roy, said last night that Sanchons told her yesterday he had a revolver with which he was going to kill someone. No reason for his act is known.

Freight Trains In Collision.

BROCKVILLE, Dec. 1.—While a freight train was pulling out of the G.T.R. yards for Belleville another train headed in the same direction caught her before she reached the crossover switch, wrecking two cars and slightly damaging the pilot of the engine. The engineer claimed that escaping steam blocked his view of the first train.

Murdered With Hatchet.

MUSKOGEE, Okla., Dec. 1.—A mysterious murderer, who chops victims to death with a hatchet, has made his appearance in this city and already has slain two aged business men, leaving no clue leading to the establishment of his identity.

B. F. Richardson, an elderly furniture dealer, was murdered in his place of business about dusk Thursday, and early Friday night C. S. Everett, a grocery man, was killed in his store, about five blocks from the scene of the former crime.

Sink-Hole Delays Traffic.

BROCKVILLE, Dec. 1.—Another sink-hole, presumably caused by quicksand, has been discovered on the new line of the Canadian Northern Railway near Chaffey's Locks. The hole is about twelve feet deep and will delay the running of trains which it was proposed to start this week between Toronto and Ottawa.

MONTAGUE ELECTED.

All But Three Polls Gave Ex-Minister a Lead of 370 Votes.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 1.—With three polls to hear from Hon. Mr. Montague, the new Provincial Minister of Public Works, has a lead of 370 in Kildonan and St. Andrew's bye-election, held Saturday. The figures: Montague 1,123; Bredin 753; majority, 370.

At the 1910 general elections the figures were as follows: Grain (Conservative), 1,121; Bredin (Liberal) 1,043; majority, 88.

At the last election the three missing polls of Port Alexander, Bad Throat and Rabbit Point, cast a total vote of 64, and gave a Conservative majority of 18. This indicates that final figures, possible not available for several days, will add slightly to the Government majority.

The size of the majority is probably a surprise to both parties. Four polls — East Kildonan, Seven Oaks, Garson and Poplar Park—gave a Liberal majorities, and twelve gave Conservative majorities, there being nine-teen altogether. Liberal headquarters attribute their showing to short notice and consequent difficulty in getting out the vote.

A statistical feature was the vote in St. Andrews, which in 1910 gave Grain 130, Bredin 81, and yesterday gave Montague 133 and Bredin 81.

SHOULD BUY RADIUM.

Professor Urges Nation to Invest In Curative Metal.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—Prof. Frederick Soddy, whose researches in radium specially qualify him to speak on the subject, voices the opinion of a large number of scientists in an article in the current issue of Nature, in which he recommends the British Government to lift the question of a national supply of radium out of the domain of private speculative enterprise and make it a matter of public concern.

Sir Alfred Pearce Gould, the famous specialist on cancer, sounded a similar note at the hospital board meeting, in urging the purchase of radium as a gilt-edged investment for hospital funds, he remarked that there was no more permanent way of investing money than in radium, as radium purchased now would be valuable to the end of time as far as they could now foretell.

Booker's Appeal This Week.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—Twenty-five reasons why former Police Lieut. Charles Becker should not be executed for the murder of Herman Rosenthal, the gambler, will be presented this week to the State Court of Appeals. Becker is now in Sing Sing Prison, under sentence of electrocution.

Becker, says the appellant's brief, is "a victim of the greatest conspiracy of the age. He was not given a chance for his life. The effect of the ruling of the court made the trial a mockery."

LAST FLEET CLEARS.

Twenty-Five Freighters Left Fort William Yesterday.

FORT WILLIAM, On., Dec. 1.—In the final rush to get on their way down the lakes before midnight and thus avoid the necessity of having their insurance extended, twenty-five freighters, carrying about eight million bushels of grain, cleared for the east Saturday. All week ships have been lying two, three and even four abreast at the docks awaiting their turn to slip under the spouts at the elevators, and the elevator men have been working anywhere from 14 to 20 hours a day to keep the streams of grain running into the holds of the vessels.

November had been a record month for grain shipment and more than 250 vessels have cleared from this harbor during the last week. More than 80 vessels with something like sixty million bushels of grain have gone east. It is estimated that about half of these vessels were bound for American ports.

His Pretty Compliment.

When the Dowager Queen Margherita of Italy was the lovely young bride of the crown prince this anecdote of her reception in one of the hill towns was widely told in the press.

The little boy who was to present the usual bouquet was the son of a distinguished literary man, and he had been taught a pretty poem of a few lines in graceful praise of the princess. But when the moment came to recite it he stood mutely gazing at her, too overcome to speak. After a moment, in order to relieve the situation, the princess smiled and held out her hand for the flowers. The little fellow held back for a moment, then, to the delight of the assembly, explained confidentially as he gave the flowers to her:

"There were verses, but you are so beautiful I can't remember them."

Schumann, the Composer.

Robert Schumann, the great composer, tried to become a lawyer to please his mother and failed after two years of wearisome study. At Heidelberg university he made the acquaintance of Willibald Alexis, who had already trodden the path Schumann was destined to follow—that through the law to music. And the eminent jurist whose classes he attended, A. F. J. Thibaut, was an amateur musician of high attainments and the author of a work on precisely that aspect of music to which Schumann was peculiarly sensitive—namely, purity in musical art.

With a Single Oar.

A revival meeting was being held in a Nova Scotian fishing port, and the orator was endeavoring hard to mould his exhortations in a manner which would appeal to his hearers—the majority of whom were fishermen.

"Friends!" he cried, passionately. "Without Faith we can do nothing. Without Hope we can do nothing. Without Charity we can do nothing. All three must go together, for the lack of one affects the whole. Take a fisherman, for instance. He is out on the stormy waters in his dory, and while he has his two oars he knows he is safe and can reach the haven. His boat represents Charity. His oars stands for Faith and Hope. The boat alone would avail him but little without the oars of Faith and Hope. Now, suppose he loses one of his oars—one of the oars of Faith and Hope? Ah, friends, what could he do to stem the Tide of Wickedness with only one oar? Alas! he would be irretrievably lost, and all for want of an oar——"

There was a slight commotion in the audience and a raucous voice broke the stillness:

"Wh,'n blazes couldn't he 'scull' 'hat there dory, mister?"

THE SCHOOL FAIR.

New Activity For Children Promises Well For Ontario.

One of the most promising features of school life in Canada is the school fair which has recently achieved such popularity.

More than 800 people were in attendance at one fair recently held in Middlesex county. Five schools combined for the success of this undertaking and the entries numbered more than 600. From early spring, when the children receive material from the Department of Agriculture for planting, until the product is exhibited at the school fair in the fall and the competition for prizes is over, the race is on. Desire for a prize stimulates active interest. The boy watches his plot. He reads all he can about his particular crop. He compares his potatoes, or whatever it may be, with the main crop on the farm. He questions dad. Everybody on the farm becomes more or less enthused and when the time for awarding the prizes arrives all come to see what the young people have been doing.

School fairs are managed by the pupils. Boys and girls, 10 or 12 years of age do this in a business-like way and besides getting much valuable practical experience they get a lot of fun out of it. Each school appoints two directors. The directors elect officers and form committees to arrange the prize list, look after the entries on fair day, handle the exhibits, devise and manage the program of sports.

The school fair is a credit to the Ontario Department of Agriculture. The successful working out of the idea in Middlesex county is especially creditable to L. H. Whale, B.S.A., who has been the Government representative here for the past year. Mr. Whale has rendered invaluable assistance to the farmers of Middlesex county, helping them to solve their problems along the line of making levels for drainage, identifying weed and insects and giving means of combating these pests, holding orchard pruning and spraying demonstrations, forming organizations and getting the farmers to co-operate.

The farmers are usually willing to make use of the help afforded them by the district representative, as the Government expert in charge is known, but sometimes it is hard to reach the old folks and the department now put emphasis on education in the schools as the main factor in the campaign to keep the boys and girls on Ontario farms. For years the agricultural college has been educating young men who desired to know more about farming, bulletins have been sent out through the college, giving valuable information, the farmers' institutes have held meetings which were good, still the rural population has been decreasing. Now efforts are being made to educate the boys and girls in the public schools to observe what goes on on the farm, to strive to know why, to get them doing things themselves and let them see where money can be made from the soil. Pupils of the schools taking part in a school fair, besides growing such crops as potatoes, corn, mangels, grain and plants of various kinds to exhibit, they also compete at fair with essays, collections of weed, weed seeds, insects, etc., and specimens of their cooking and serving. They become interested in all things pertaining to the farm.

Deaf, Dumb and Blind at Wedding.

A wedding took place the other day at St. George's Church, Gravesend (Eng.), when Mr. Herbert Thorndike was married to Miss Stiles. Both bride and bridegroom were deaf and dumb, and Canon Hedge, who is totally blind, performed the ceremony.

How McCurdy Started.

An intimate friend of F. B. McCurdy, M.P., the Halifax financier, recalls a day some twelve or thirteen years ago when McCurdy came to his room in the boarding-house where they both resided and invited him to walk to town with him. The future M.P. was then a bank clerk in the employ of the Halifax Banking Co., earning about $900 a year. His friend worked in a wholesale warehouse.

After the pair had got started on their walk, McCurdy announced that he wished to ask his friend's advice. He said that he was seriously considering leaving the bank and going into the brokerage business on his own account. He calculated that he could make his start by buying and selling exchange among the local banks. At this work he felt confident that he could earn at least two dollars a day. This, with what he could acquire from other sources, would give him as large, if not a larger, income than he was getting from the bank.

The friend encouraged him in his proposal, and shortly after the young man actually left the bank and started in to deal in exchange. It did not take him long, however, to develop those other lines of operation, which soon made it unnecessary for him to continue this kind of work. He prospered amazingly, and to-day is said to be worth over a million dollars.—Saturday Night.

CONSTITUTIONALISTS GAINING GROUND TWO MEXICAN CITIES ARE BESIEGED

Huerta Faces the Crisis of His Career and Many Independents Will Leave Him if the Tide Does Not Turn Soon

NO MARINES LANDED

Special Wire to The Examiner.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 1.—It is stated here that Tampico on the East Coast is tottering before the rebel assaults and its fall is hourly expected. There is also a strong rebel force in the neighbourhood of Manzlap, on the west coast. It was the belief of independent diplomats here that Huerta this week faces the crisis of his career. Unless the tide is turned this week, before next Sunday, in his favour a vast horde of alleged Independents will turn to the Constitutionalists for their own safety, leaving Huerta with his own personal following. There is little change in the international situation. The United States and British warships are still cooperating in the defence of the Anglo-Saxon interests but no marines have been landed yet.

NEW YORK, N.Y., Dec. 1.—Some of the evening papers here are publishing a report that President Huerta has left Mexico City and is on his way to Vera Cruz, presumably with the idea of asking for personal protection of the British or United States' warships. John Lind has also quit Mexico City.

Dr. Struthers To Speak Here

Will Give Illustrated Lecture in the Collegiate Hall on Wednesday Night

Dr. Struthers, Chief Medical School Inspector of the City of Toronto will give a lecture, illustrated with slides in the Collegiate Hall on Wednesday evening next, under the auspices of the Public Health Committee of the Local Council of Women. His subject will be "Medical Inspection in Schools."

Dr. Struthers is an authority on this subject. He has inspected the systems used in this work in England and other countries, so approaches his subject with a fund of personal knowledge and experience. Any one at all interested in the consideration of this matter should not fail to attend.

Medical school inspection is being considered in cities like Guelph, Berlin and Galt, and towns like Pembroke, Shelton, a town adjoining Sault Ste. Marie, already has it. The larger cities, Toronto, Hamilton, London, Stratford, Kingston, Ottawa, Brantford, Niagara Falls, etc., have it. It has been tried in small places like Parkhill, Alias Craig, and Chandeboye. The North Middlesex experiments in the rural schools, while of a transitory nature, showed from 68 to 90 p.c. of children defective — about the same proportion as in the cities.

TO DAY'S POLICE COURT

If Santa Claus visits the County Gaol on Christmas Day, he will find a Tweed citizen confined therein, who claims Tweed as his home, was charged with having removed a neck scarf and sweater coat from the store of Mark Fine. The alleged offence was said to have been committed on Saturday evening in the presence of Constable Phimester and Meagher, and also Detective Newhall. The trio were concealed behind a billboard which is situated directly opposite Mr. Fine's George street store. The stolen goods which were valued at $3.50, were recovered. He was sentenced to one month in the County Gaol at hard labour.

A Sunday Drin.

William Hampton was apprehended on Sunday evening by Constables Reid and Haywood. According to the evidence of the officers, accused when arrested was under the impression that it was Saturday instead of Sunday.

Hampton when put into the box denied that he was under the influence of liquor when arrested.

"What makes you so shaky this morning — the effects of drink?" inquired Chief Thompson.

"I suppose it is in the days gone by," replied Hampton.

The accused was fined five dollars for the privilege of a "Sunday drink."

A local butcher was charged with unlawfully feeding raw blood and offall to hogs. Mr. G. W. Hatton, who appeared for the defendant, said that his client was willing to comply with the wishes of the Health Department. The case was enlarged for one week. The information was laid by Sanitary Inspector Spence.

Smashed the Furniture.

A local man's house-wrecking propensities received a rude jolt in Police Court this mornin gwhen he was assessed five dollars for creating a disturbance in his house on Saturday evening. P. C. Patterson, who made the arrest, said that the disturbance was audible two blocks away and that when he arrived on the scene, accused was in the act of smashing the furniture ando therwise disturbing the harmony of the home.

A Supposition.

William Wright "supposed" that he was drunk. Magistrate Dumble lent conviction to Wright's supposition by imposing a fine of two dollars and costs amounting in all to five dollars and seventy-five cents.

Fire and Vengeance."

SEVERAL CARS LEFT THE TRACK

Eastbound G. T. R. Freight Met With Accident Early This Morning Near Hoard's Station

TIED UP TRAFFIC

An eastbound G.T.R freight train met with an accident at four o'clock this morning near Hoard's Station, which is this side of Sterling. Several cars left the track, rendering the road impassable for the balance of the day. The auxiliary train, in charge of Trainmaster McMillan, passed through here from Lindsay on its way to the wreck at six o'clock this morning. The cars contain grain and it will be necessary to unload them before they are put on the track again.

As a result of the accident, the Belleville train did not arrive this morning. The passengers from it, transferred to the train which left here for Belleville at 8.20, arriving here near the noon hour. Passengers for points east of the wreck also had to change, taking the train that is due to arrive here at 8.10.

St. George's Bazaar Over

Big Event in the Armouries Was a Financial Success

The St. George's Bazaar, held at the Armouries, was brought to a successful close on Saturday evening. There was a good attendance and the different booths were well patronised.

While the exact figures are not available to-day the bazaar has been a success financially and a comfortable sum will be available as a result of the efforts of those who assisted in the work.

Mr. D. W. Dumble occupied the chair on Saturday evening and in an opening address, paid a tribute to Rev. Mr. Price, Rector of St. George's Church, and the work that was being done by that institution.

His Honour Judge Huycke declared the Bazaar "re-opened" for the third and last time. His Honour referred with regret to the unavoidable absence of Premier Whitney and Sir Wm. Meredith, who were to have spoken on Saturday.

A vote of thanks to the speaker proposed by Rev. Jas. Price, and seconded by Mr. Smith, was unanimously carried.

The 57th Band rendered a choice programme during the evening.

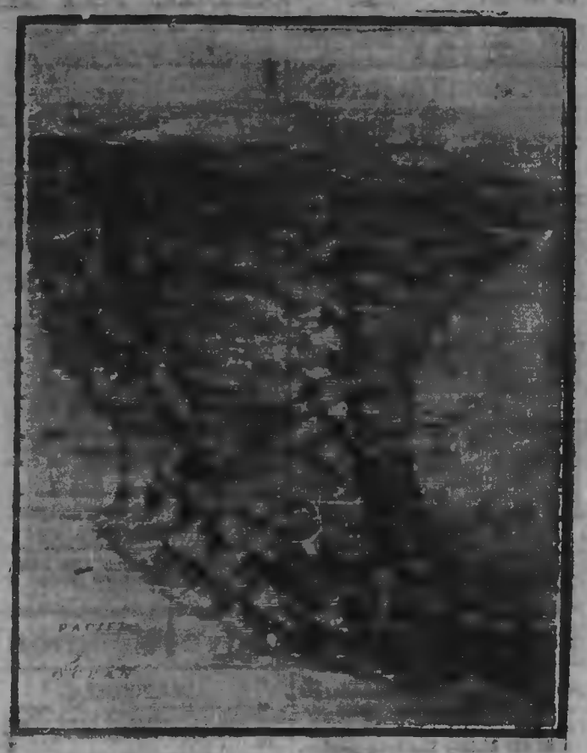
T. A. S. NOTES

Yesterday at all three masses in St. Peter's Cathedral His Lordship Bishop O'Brien preached on the subject of 'Total Abstinence,' and in the course of his remarks deplored the fact that in almost all liquor cases in the police court men do not hesitate to commit perjury, and in doing so call upon God Almighy to witness a lie. His Lordship asked the men in the name of God to help stamp out this evil in our midst by joining St. Peter's T.A.S.. As a consequence of this appeal about forty new names were added to the membership of the society at their meeting in the afternoon. Stirring addresses were made by His Lordship the Bishop, Ald. Duffus, Dr. Galvin, Joseph Begley, J. Shevlin, Joseph Meagher, Mr. McKilderry and others, and judging by the enthusiasm, St. Peter's T. A. S. will have one of the most prosperous years beginning with the new year in its history. Preparations are on the way for the celebration of the fourteenth anniversary, which takes place early in January.

The library in connection with the society is in a flourishing condition, new books being constantly added, all of which are of a high order, making it one of the best libraries in the Dominion. The use of the library is included with membership at a cost of ten cents a month; it also entitles the members to all the privileges in connection with the rooms, making it an ideal place to spend an evening.

A QUICK SETTLEMENT.

Mr. James Akey, proprietor of the Chambers Street Livery Barns, acknowledges with thanks the quick settlement of the fire insurance on his property by Mr W. H. Hill of the Sun Life. The fire only took place Tuesday night and Mr. Akey received his cheque this morning.



SOME MILITARY PROBLEMS OF MEXICO WHICH THE UNITED STATES MAY TACKLE—It will be noticed that two great ranges, each bearing the name of Sierra Madre, run in a southerly direction from Chiliforma, one near each coast, which after a certain distance come together again to the south of Puebia. The area between these ranges is known as the plateau of Mexico, which is divided into a number of basins in the north with a rising elevation to the south. The rivers are in consequence quite short and would be of little use for navigation purposes to troops which had effected a landing on either coast line. The northern plateau consists of a broad plain covered by swamps, meadows, and small lakes. This marshy country has been recently drained, but the roads are unmetaled and extremely bad. The transport and commissariat services of an invading force would, however, be forced to rely on the rai-lways as a means of supply. The frontier measures 1,300 miles. The railway line near the frontier between Nuevo Laredo and Monterey has been interrupted in quite half a dozen places.

COMMERCIAL TRAVELLERS' ASSOCIATION

Was Formed in Peterborough on Saturday Evening—Wanted a "Live Board of Trade"

OFFICERS ELECTED

That this meeting being of the opinion that in view of the large number of commercial travellers now representing Peterborough firms, or residing here, it is in the interest of these men to form an Association to be known as the Peterborough Commercial Travellers' Association, in which any member of any Commercial Travellers' Association shall be eligible for membership, and the same shall be governed by such rules and by-laws as may be adopted, and such officers as may be elected from time to time.

The adoption of the foregoing resolution marks the inception, in Peterborough of a brand new organization, known as the Peterborough Commercial Travellers' Association. About thirty-five or forty commercial travellers attended the meeting in the Bank of Montreal Chambers on Saturday vening, at which the above resolution was presented and unanimously adopted. Mr. Adam Hall was elected chairman pro tem and Mr. Frank Whitehouse, secretary.

The Objects of the Society.

Mr. W. J. Hopwood, in outlining the purpose of the meeting, said that Peterborough was the headquarters for apparently three hundred commercial travellers. This number was sufficient to justify the organisation of a Commercial Travellers' Association. The object of the Association was to promote the welfare of its members and create community of fellowship. Hotel accommodation and matters pertaining to transportation would also receive the consideration of the Association.

"We have a city here with a future and no body of men can do more to promote its interest than the commercial travellers," said Mr. Hopwood, in conclusion.

Mr. J. A. Cameron, in supporting the resolution, said that the establishment of an Association in Peterborough would be in the best interests of the travellers and the public in general.

Ald. J. J. Duffus suggested the pos-

CITY COUNCIL WILL MEET THIS EVENING

Prospective Aldermanic Candidates Will Have a Chance to Introduce Eleventh Hour Legislation for Obvious Purposes

BRIDGE BY-LAWS

The regular meeting of the City Council will be held this evening. This will be the last regular meeting of the current year. It is altogether probable that one or wo special special meetings will be called, when prospective aldermanic candidates for re-election will possibly have some form of eleventh-hour special legislation to introduce.

It is understood that a by-law calling for the construction of the proposed Dalhousie Street bridge will be submitted to the people at the coming municipal elections. The Council will also confirm their approval of the proposed C.P.R. swing bridge.

BECKER APPEAL OPENED

Special Wire to The Examiner.

ALBANY, Dec. 1.— The appeal in the case of Charles Becker, the former officer of the New York police, who is under sentence of death in connection with the murder of Herman Rosenthal, was opened here this afternoon. It will likely take weeks before a decision is reached.

A DIFFICULT ASSIGNMENT.

Not long ago, a cub reporter of one of the Chicago dailies was assigned by the city editor to cover a meeting of the board of trustees of a public library. "Bring a story of about 400 words," said the editor.

At a late hour that night, this story not being forthcoming, the youngster was sent for.

"How about that storyof the board meeting?" asked the editor.

"It isn't finished yet. You told me to make 400 words. So far I have managed to get only 300."

"What did the board do?"

"They met, called the roll and adjourned until Tuesday evening."

GOVERNMENT DIVIDED ON QUESTION OF POLICY

BONE BROKEN IN JR. RUGBY GAME

Lloyd Williamson Sustained Fracture of Small Bone in His Left Leg—A Central School Player

A SECOND ACCIDENT

Lloyd Williamson, a student of the Central school, had a small bone broken in his left leg in a Rugby game with the Junior Collegiates at the Oval on Saturday afternoon. The accident occurred in a simple manner. Williamson tacked Art Frost of the Collegiate team, lifting him off his feet, and both went down together. The former was underneath, and in some manner fractured his leg. The accident happened about three minutes before the end of the game. Williamson was removed to Mr. Creswell's residence and Dr. McPherson was called.

This is the second accident resulting in junior games during the week. A week ago Saturday the two teams met and Alex. Thompson, son of Mr. Gilbert Thompson, had a leg muscle torn. The boys were kicking the ball around preparatory to the first whistle, and in some simple manner Thompson suffered his injury. It can scarcely be said that the youngsters play the game too hard. Both accidents happened in a simple manner, and the boys fear that parents will object to them playing, as they will blame the game. Collegiates won both games, Saturday's score being 23—0.

Mr. and Mrs. Newly Wed To Visit London

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, ENG., Dec. 1.— It was announced at the United States' Embassy to-day that Frank D. Sayre and his bride, the President's daughter, would come direct to London and be guests at the United States' Embassy. Many social functions are being arranged for by the United States' and Canadian colonies in connection with their visit.

Novel Defence In Murder Case

Special Wire to The Examiner.

SHELBYVILLE, Ind., Dec. 1.— Dr. Wm. B. Craig, a former Canadian, who is charged with the murder of Dr. Helene Knabe, in Indianapolis, on Oct. 23, 1911, is likely to use a novel plea in his defence. He will advance the theory of Edgar Allin Poe's tale, "Murderers in the Rue Morgue," in order to show that the murder was done by an ape kept by the woman doctor. It is pointed out that Dr. Knabe, in her pathological work, kept several monkeys and apes for vivisection. The contention is that one of the monkeys with the born mimicry of Simian, may have drawn a sharp surgical blade against his mistress' throat, and later escaping with the weapon by way of the fire escape or dumb waiter and the roof. Still another plea will be that Dr. Knabe was murdered as the result of an Austrian political plot. She came to the United States from Austria fifteen years ago.

To-morrow Night

No one in Peterborough should miss the opportunity that is being offered to-morrow night at the Conservatory Hall, of hearing the world-famous artists, Arthur Friendheim, Master Pianist, and Agostino Caruso, Italian tenor, cousin of the world's most famous singer. These artists have been meeting with crowded houses everywhere, and is considered by the critics to be the greatest musical offering of the season. You cannot afford to miss hearing these artists to-morrow night. A programme of exceptional merit is being offered. All seats reserved.

Serious Difference of Opinion Has Caused Premier Borden to Return to the Capital Two Weeks Sooner Than He Intended

ROGERS CRITICIZED

Special Wire to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, Dec. 1.— The estimates will total two hundred and fifty millions unless the government changes its programme. Premier Borden got back to Ottawa two weeks sooner than he had anticipated when he left in November to hunt good health and golf balls in Virginia. It is understood that the cause of his early return is a serious difference of policy which has developed among his advisers, both within and outside the Cabinet. Some of the leading bankers, railroad men and manufacturers of Canada have taken alarm at the programme of of expenditure which Hon. Robert Rogers has forced the government to adopt. They declare it is time for economy, and that for Finance Minister White to borrow at the rate of almost five per cent. is bad for the credit of Canadian securities generally. Premier Borden has been told that Finance Minister White should not be allowed to glut the London money market with government bonds bearing high interests. They say that owing to Hon. Mr. White's extravagant borrowing in London, no one else, whether banker, railroad man or manufacturer can sell his securities. A number of the ministers feel that with the revenue dropping rapidly and the borrowing rate going up, the estimates should be cut down this session, no matter what Hon. Mr. Rogers may say. The question of economy or full steam ahead on borrowed money will be decided at the council meetings this week.

New Tactics Advised For The Unionists

Special Cable to The Examiner.

LONDON, DEC. 1.—While the movement for conciliating Ulster gains ground daily among the Liberals, one section of the Unionists is moving towards uncompromising resistance. Editor Garvin, whose influence in dictating the Unionist tactics is undeniable, has followed his recent declaration that the truce is at an end, by outlining in his paper, "The Observer," a revolutionary policy for Ultra-Tories. He says all opposed to Home Rule for Ireland should resign from the territorial volunteers, and use influence to prevent others from joining. He also advocates that every attempt be made to stop the business of the House of Commons by volleying one word and drowning the debate. This method, says The Observer, is irresistible if pursued with sufficient unanimity, coolness, and determination. It would bring the Commons to a standstill.

THE MARKET SENATE DISCUSSES WEATHER.

Not Disposed to Trust the Weather Man and His Present Smiles.

"We fear the Weather Man even when bearing gifts," was the attitude of the Market Senate in conclave assembled this morning. The gifts referred to is the continued mild weather. Keep your eyes wide open is the way the habitues expressed their lack of confidence in the weather. They compared notes on what was doing three, five, thirteen, twenty-two, yes all the way up to forty years ago, and the conclusion arrived at was that the people should not be deluded by the spring-like mildness of the present. Ploughing is still in progress, and the tail end of the building season has been very favourable, but the senators had stories of other years that would make an interesting chronicle for those who like to examine into the past. The market clerk was drawn into an arrument as to whether the Rice Lake boats would be up next Saturday, and the result was a wager with Mr. John Green, of Rubidge Street, who believes he has the number of the weather as minutely as the next man. Mr. Green, after duly considering the matter, considers that the boats will make the trip on the last day of his week.

Mr. Fisher is doubtful, as if there the matter starts. In the meantime the Senate sends out warning, trust no snow shovels, ice creepers and all the other paraphernalia that the snow king makes necessary.

GOOD FISHING.

Mr. A. Kelly Evans of Toronto, our provincial fish and game expert is to marry an Atlanta widow with a yearly income of $200,000. Not bad fishing that.

HOT WATER.

Free food and broken promises are likely to keep the government in hot water next session. With Mr. R. B. Bennett camping on their trail ministers will be in for a lively time.—Ottawa Free Press.

NO JOKE, HOWEVER.

The Borden government must regard the situation that clamours for cheap food—the high cost of living—as a laughing matter. It proposes to issue a commission to inquire into the high cost of living, with a professional jokesmith as the head of it. But it's no laughing matter.

A NEW WAY.

Our Conservative friends, have a new way of helping win elections. The voters' lists, under the control or manipulation of the government will not be ready till election day, Dec. 13th. By the way if "thirteen" is an unlucky number, who is to get the blow?

HON. DR. PYNE.

We all regret the illness of Sir James Whitney and hope that his rest cure will be a real cure. He takes Hon. Dr. Pyne with him as medical adviser. One may not question Dr. Pyne's professional skill, but if it is on a par with his administrative skill we can't say very much of it. If he should make as bad a mess of his patients as he has done of the Education Department the necessity of calling in new medical advisers will be urgent.

GOING THE PACE.

Hon. Mr. White, Mr. Borden's Minister of Finance, has hit upon the device of spending our money to make us rich and help relieve the pinch of high prices. He proposes to spend public money with both hands on public works whether they are necessary or not. This is a good deal like putting Canadian citizens into the pauper class, treating them as municipalities treat their poor by paying them wages for work invented for the occasion.

One can't see how Hon. Mr. White can spend much more money than he is doing. Under the Borden Government we have been certainly going the pace. The Conservative press, inspired no doubt, give out the statement that the total estimates for 1913-14 were over 200 million dollars. Of this enormous sum, probably 175 millions will be actually spent by the end of the year. Of course the estimates do not include the statutory expenditures, agricultural aid, railway subsidies, provincial subsidies, etc., etc. If these items be added as must be done, we shall have a total expenditure for the present year of 250 millions.

Now to make a little contrast. In the last year of Liberal administration the expenditure for the full year was only 87¾ millions. Thus we see that in two short years the Borden Government has doubled the national expenditure; that is, the controllable expenditure is twice more than the total expenditure, controllable and statutory, under the last year of Liberal rule. Or, including statutory expenditure, three times more than the expenditure under the Liberals which Mr. Borden denounced as prima facie evidence of corrupt and extravagant administration.

If Mr. Borden's Finance Minister seriously proposes to increase the Conservative scale of expenditure we shall have something awful to contemplate. Here is another evidence that Mr. Borden's promises made in Opposition are not applied to his practice in office—either in finances or other ways. We have always contended that the public revenue is made to be spent. That is a correct position: but it is not made to be wasted,

"INTERESTED" "IN DEFENCE"

An Esteemed Correspondent Writes "In Defence" of the Borden Government

To the Editor, The Examiner:

In your issue of Nov. 27, you published an article headed "An Awful Threat." Kindly allow me to express my views as regards some of the statements made in that article.

In the first place, you quoted Mr. Bennett's "threat" about the non-fulfilment of Mr. Borden's pledges. I have noted, at times, the speeches made by Mr. Bennett in the House and I may say here that they are usually of the "hot-air" variety. Hence, we should not swallow all that he expects us to do. That threat may (?) be carried out if the alleged pledges are not carried out, but I venture so far as to say that it will not be under any circumstances.

So much for that part. May I now ask, What does Mr. Bennett expect of a government two years old? Does he or any other sane person think that it would be possible or even probable that a government so new could fulfill all its promises? It would be bad policy to do so even if it were possible, and I think that it is far from the desire of any government to attempt such a foolish feat. I think there are a great many people who never feel contended unless they are raising a disturbance about something. When that "something" is actually worth quarreling about the case is different, but such unreasonable expectations are highly unjustifiable, especially in a case like the one in question.

Every government aims to satisfy its supporters by doing as it promised it would if returned to power. The Borden government is doing and has done a great deal since assuming the leadership and good work is being done in all the departments. Have patience, Liberal friends, and you will behold the sights yourselves. Had it not been for the obstinacy of the Liberal Senate some of those pledges might now have been fulfilled. But no! Our good workers, the Liberals, who complain so much, have themselves blocked the path in more than one instance. Why then do they persist in saying that Borden has proven false when they know that he has done his part to the fullest extent.

"The path of the government is thickly strewn with broken promises." So says the article to which I referred in the beginning. A staunch Liberal tried to tell me not long ago that the government had not spent a single dollar for the farmers and he even went so far as to state that they had not tried to aid the agricultural interests of the country. The same gentleman was greatly surprised when I informed him that the Highways Bill and the Agricultural Aid Bill had both been rejected and shelved by his own party. He did not appear to believe it all but I tried to explain, as best I could, that it was true. That instance simply goes to show that some of the opposite party are never willing to admit an atom of good in their opponents' efforts. Give the government a slight chance and less hostile Senate and then judge whether they are carrying out their promises or not. If not, you have the cure and should apply it to meet the needs of the patient.

I do not expect to see the government's supporters fade away into oblivion as you stated in that article, but still hope a few will stand by the Premier in his thankless efforts. There really is no particular cause for alarm as yet and until there is such cause, take it calm my friends. Woe is the great Conservative party if R. B. Bennett should bolt from it. Greater men have done that trick before, and still the party existed a short time, as witness the Liberal party after the resignation of the Hon. Clifford Sifton not so long ago.

Now, in conclusion, I would say, be fair and give just men their dues. Consider carefully before plunging into such rash statements about the breaking of pledges and don't let it worry your minds too much about the threats of some of our great men in the political world. The government of to-day is strongly entrenched in power and is very liable to remain there, so give it a chance to do its duty. If it doesn't, cheer up; a time will come when those who are dissatisfied will have a chance to elect thise who are capable. Then friends, be very careful what you do and how you do it.

"Interested."

"Interested" would be a nice man to do business with. If he held our promissory note he would be willing to give plenty of time and to accept very small instalments. He may, with the party blindness obscuring his vision, see in the administration of the Borden Government great fulfilment of its promises; and when he conceres a slight failure he generously saddles the responsibility upon the Senate, in the matter of the Highways Bill and the Agricultural Aid Bill. He is mistaken in this. Both these bills would have now been law if they had not been designed to be used as bribes to the provinces, doled out by order-in-council in a way to do the most party good. The Senate only demanded that the grants made under those bills should be paid over to the provinces as are the subsidies of the provinces, to be expended by the provinces for whose benefits they were intended. The Borden Government refused to do this and the bills stand. It was the Borden Government, not the Liberal Senate that killed these bills—representing about the only pre-power promises the Borden Government has ever attempted to carry out. Mr. Borden promised to reform the civil service—he has used the axe at the rate of the French Revolutionary guillotine, in its merriest days. He promised to provide economy instead of the "corrupt and extravagant" expenditure of the "Grit" government—promised clean electoral methods. He has stood by consenting while the worst and wickedest political corruption in our history has been employed to elect his supporters. And—but the encroachment of advertising upon space, forbids even a partial enumeration of the broken promises of Mr. Borden. He, however, can break them with impunity so long as he has such supporters as "Interested," who will apparently swallow everything. "Interested" may have been one of the flag-wavers, the imperial enthusiasts, who helped Mr. Borden to power on the all-British, no popery, anti-French cry, and yet are willing to see the disloyal Nationalists holding the chief seats in the Borden cabinet synogogue and dictating policy and practice to Loyal Britishers and Canadians.

GREAT IN PEACE AS IN WAR.

Lord Kitchener is a rare combination. He is one of the first militarists in the history of British arms and has proved himself as capable and great in the activities of peace. Kitchener has shown himself as successful a civil administrator as warrior. His remarkable ability as administrator in Egypt has elected universal approval. He has worked unceasingly and successfully at bettering the lot of the peasantry, land reclamation, popularizing savings banks and road-making.

DROP IN CUSTOMS.

The customs returns of Canada are an index of the purchasing power and purchasing practice of the people. Importers bring in fewer goods and pay less customs duties when popular buying of goods falls off. The customs returns of Toronto for the month of November show a falling of of $150,000 as compared with the corresponding month of last year. This shows that the purchasing power of the public has diminished. The high cost of living, due largely to food taxes, lowers the purchasing power of the dollar.

Is It Possible to Evangelize the World in This Generation?

This Message Is Intended Specially for Professing Christians

What Is Meant by Evangelizing the World?

THE GLORIOUS POINT ABOUT THE MISSIONARY SITUATION IS THE FACT THAT IT IS NOW DEEMED POSSIBLE TO EVANGELIZE THE WORLD IN THIS GENERATION.

People sometimes ask what this means. They desire to know if it is expected that all the heathen will be led to become professing christians within the lifetime of people now living?

Unfortunately no. That is not expected. Here at home we have thousands of people who have heard the Gospel Message but who have refused to accept it. They prefer lives of sin. Having once heard the message in its fullness the responsibility for the final decision rests withe individual.

WHAT WE DESIRE TO ACCOMPLISH IS TO SO MULTIPLY OUR FORCES, AT HOME AND ABROAD, THAT WITHIN THE LIFETIME OF PEOPLE NOW LIVING EVERY PERSON IN THE WORLD SHALL HAVE HEARD THE GOSPEL MESSAGE OF SALVATION UNTO ETERNAL LIFE AND BE GIVEN AN OPPORTUNITY TO MAKE A DECISION FOR JESUS CHRIST.

A PRACTICAL IDEAL

About 15 years ago men, in large numbers first began to realize their responsibility to mission. In 1906 Laymen's Missioneary Movement was launched. Even before these keen, shrewd business men had become interested. They demanded that the whole missionary movement should be placed on a business basis. It was.

One of the first moves made was to consult leading authorities in all the great missionary fields. They were asked to estimate how many missionaries in addition to native assistants, would be required so so lead the missionary enterprise as to accomplish the evangelization of the world in this generation.

THE REPLIES OF THESE AUTHORITIES WERE COMPILED. THE AVERAGE OF THEIR ESTIMATES WAS FOUND. IT WAS THAT THE ONE MISSIONARY TO EVEY 50,000 HEATHEN WOULD BE SUFFICIENT. TO PROTIDE THIS NUMBER OF MISSIONARIES THEN BECAME THE GOAL OF THE MISSIONARY MOVEMENT. IT IS OUR GOAL TO-DAY.

WHAT THE TASK INVOLVES

In 1900 it was estimated that there were approximately 1,200,000,000 people in non-christian lands. Fully three fourths of them had not had an opportunits to learn of Jesus Christ. This represents one half of the human race.

There are about 18,000 male and female missionaries in the foreign field. Allowing one missionary to every 50 heathen it will require 18,000 more missionaries to evangelize the world in this generation. Allowing two missionaries to every 50,000 heathen it will require 36,000 additional missionaries.

On the latter basis the Protestant Christians of Canada should send out about 1,600 missionaries.

This is possible. It calls all Christians to service and to prayer.

The Difficulties Can Be Overcome

THERE ARE TREMENDOUS DIFFICULTIES IN THE WAY OF EVANGELIZING THE HEATHEN. IT IS BELIEVED THAT THE DIFFICULTIES CAN BE SURMOUNTED.

NEVER BEFORE IN THE HISTORY OF THE WORLD WAS THE TIME SO RIPE FOR A GREAT ADVANCE OF MISSIONARY MOVEMENT IN THE FOREIGN FIELDS AS AT PRESENT. WHAT IS REQUIRED IS THAT CHRISTIANS AT HOME SHALL DO THEIR PART.

DIFFICULTIES REMOVED

DURING THE RECENT PAST MANY OF THE GREATEST OBSTACLES TO THE SPREAD OF CHRISTIANITY HAVE BEEN REMOVED.

Until within the past few years it used to take the missionaries weeks and months to reach the out-lying mission fields. NOW MOST OF THESE FIELDS CAN BE REACHED IN HOURS WHERE IT USED TO TAKE DAYS AND WEEKS.

The greatest railway enterprises of the time are those now building or projected in non-Christian lands. The Siberian railway has brought hundreds of millions of people in the far east, a month nearer to the christian nations of western Europe. The Cape to Cairo Railway, and the lines being stretched from the east coast of Africa are opening up the "dark continent" from end to end. China now has 6,000 miles of railway lines. Similar transformations have been or are being effected in other fields.

AT ONE TIME JAPAN, CHINA, KOREA AND OTHER LARGE SECTIONS OF COUNTRY WERE CLOSED TO MISSIONARIES. NOW THEIR DOORS ARE WIDE OPEN AND THEY INVITE THE MISSIONARIES TO ENTER. FOR THE FIRST TIME IN THE HISTORY OF CHRISTIANITY PRACTICALLY THE WHOLE WORLD IS OPEN TO MISSIONARIES.

For many years it was thought that owing to their dense igoorance it would take several generations of education to fit the heathen to understand and accept the gospel message. It is now known that less than one generation is sufficient to bring heathens to Christ in any of the non-christian countries of the world.

TRANSLATING THE BIBLE

One of the greatest difficulties missionaries have had to contend with has been the translation of the Bible into the almost innumerable heathen dialects. To-day alphabets have been established for and translations of the Bible made into all the chief or conquering languages and into a great many of the second class languages. Translations have been made into the languages which are spoken by 1,200,000,000 people. Translations have been made still for only 300,000,000. Thus the Bible can now be read in their own language by four-fifths of the heathen people of the world.

"Mountains" of difficulties have thus been removed by faith.

The Resources of the Christian Church

THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH IS ABUNDANTLY ABLE TO PROVIDE BOTH THE MEANS AND THE WORKERS THAT ARE REQUIRED TO EVANGELIZE THE WORLD IN THIS GENERATION.

The little Moravian Church in 1900 had sent out 2,000 of its members as foreign missionaries. If the members of Protestant Churches in the British Isles, the United States and Canada (not to mention those parts of reformed Christendom) were to be equally as well they would have a force of nearly 400,000 foreign workers. This vast number would be required to achieve the evangelization of the world in this generation.

Missionaries estimate that if only one out of every 50 Christian young men and young women who will go through the universities and colleges of Canada and the United States in this generation were to offer themselves for foreign service, the required number of missionaries would be provided. WHEN THE STUDENTS OF EUROPE ARE TAKEN INTO CONSIDERATION IT WILL BE SEEN THAT CHRISTIAN COUNTRIES CAN WELL AFFORD TO SPARE THE NUMBER OF WORKERS MENTIONED. THEIR GOING FORTH WOULD QUICKEN AND BRING RENEWED SPIRITUAL VIGOR TO THE HOME CHURCHES.

AMPLE FUNDS AVAILABLE

There are some 25,000,000 children in the Sunday Schools of Protestant lands. Were they trained to give even only two cents a week per member, it would yield an amount equal to the present total missionary gifts of Christendom.

Mr. G. T. Manley, of Cambridge University, taking 100,000 as an outside limit of the number of foreign missionaries required, and assuming that Britain's share would be one-third, estimated that the $50,000,000 required to support them would be far more than supplied if each communicant in Great Britain were to contribute four cents a day.

The world would have been evangelized long ago if Christians had perceived the relation of money to the Kingdom, and had accepted their stewardship.

WHAT LEADING MISSIONARIES SAY

Missionaries who have had years of experience in the various non-Christian countries of the world, believe that it is entirely practical to evangelize the world in this generation.

This is what some of them have said:

"If the Church of Christ were what she ought to be, twenty years would not pass till the story of the Cross will be uttered in the ears of every living man."—Simeon Calhoun.

"It is the fault of the Church if from amongst the present rising generation any advance to old age without hearing of Christ and His salvation."—Dr. J. C. R. Ewing, Principal of the Forman Christian College, Lahore, India.

"The professed people of Christ now living have it in their power to give every responsible human being the chance of intelligently accepting Christ as His Saviour from sin."—Rev. J. F. Campbell, Canadian Presbyterian Church, India.

"Let each Christian so resolve and so act that if a sufficient number of others will do likewise, all men before this generation passes away may have an adequate opportunity to know of Christ."—Dr. John R. Mott.

HOME CIRCLE COLUMN

Gossip. By gossip we do not mean friendly words with a neighbour about our friends, but unkind remarks, innuendoes, the telling of some cruel thing that Mrs. E. said to Mrs. A. If you have nothing kind to say about a neighbour acquaintance say nothing at all. A story grows with each repetition until at last "behold how great a matter a little fire kindleth." Let not our tongues defile our souls by distilling deadly poison, but let the words of our mouth be worthy, kindly, helpful, noble.

Scolding is mostly a habit. It is often the result of nervousness and an irritable condition of the mind and body. A person is tired or annoyed at some trivial cause and forthwith commences to find fault with everything and everybody within reach. Scolding is a habit very easily formed. It is astonishing how soon one becomes addicted to it and confirmed in it. It is an unreasoning and unreasonable habit. Persons who once get in the habit of scolding always find something to scold about If there is nothing else, they begin scolding about the mere absence of anything to scold about. It is an extremely disagreeable habit. It is contagious. Once introduced into a family it is pretty certain in a short time to affect all members.

We all owe to others as many cheerful smiles and kind words as we can bestow, for life is what we make it, and small favours, little kindnesses, a word fitly spoken, often heals a much bruised heart, and tender remembrance is cherished for the giver Never show to an unexpected guest their coming worries or upsets you, but give them a smile and a word of welcome and you will be surprised how quickly worries will roll away and how easily the noonday meal will be done, and how much pleasure there is in that afternoon chat, then there is nothing to think about but to enjoy the present. Never indulge in the habit of maliciously speaking of others, for it is easy to say nice things and it is all a habit. Look on life as a doer not as a dreamer.

Is it not highly amusing, if not provocative of wrath to hear a man complain of his home being cheerless when he adds nothing to its happiness? A man is greatly responsible for the ozone of his home. The day, to his wife, may have been one of unusual care and hard work, but if the husband comes in cheerful from the field or his work outside, the heartiness and care-worn look will disappear from his wife's face. A few, sharp words we can always excuse, for we always attribute them to the overtaxed nerves, but we can find no plausible excuse for sullenness on the part of the husband.

A touch of kindness in this busy rush,
A proffered hand to help us fight the crush,
A cheerful word that smooths a heavy heart—
Have you the's small things assumed your part?

Remember husbands than it has made model wives.

Everyone feels at home in the presence of a joyous, cheerful, genial spirited person.

Usually if we postpone a worry for a day or two it will fail to keep it's appointment.

The thief who steals your peace of mind is meaner than the one who steals your property.

Teach your girl how to cook and if she does not thank you somebody's son will thank you for her.

In choosing our homes the first consideration must be to see that there is abundance of light, air and sunlight. A dark room is only fit for a storeroom. Where the sun comes, according to the old adage, the doctor stays away; or as the Venetian says: "where there is light there is joy."

It is as easy to say kindly things as it is to make unpleasant remarks. Watch yourself a bit as you move about your home—is it a hard word and a frown? If the latter, pull yourself up short and make up your mind the world shall be bright with your kindness rather than darkened by your ill-humour. Kill the unkind words before they pass your lips. Stifle bitter thoughts in your heart. Be considerate, tender, loving to your own.

In our garden are many roses,
Some of them are white and some are red.
Really, I am very fond of roses,
But I want them now, not when I am dead.
Don't wait to show me your affection

When the earth is piled above my head;
In your garden there are many roses,
But I want them now, not when I'm dead.

PRAISE FOR THE G. T. P.

I have just returned from a business trip to the West including Winnipeg, Regina, Saskatoon and Edmonton, and at the latter point, having a day or two at the week-end to spare, took the opportunity of running down over the Grand Trunk Pacific Line to Tete Jaune, B.C. The sight of Mount Robson alone repaid me for the trip, but the scenery generally was magnificent. The track was as smooth as some much older roads in other parts of the Continent, and it is marvellous how the Grand Trunk Pacific route was discovered, which gave almost a level grade for the entire distance through the mountains, thereby avoiding the steep grades, long tunnels, and snow sheds which are necessary owing to routes of some of the other railroads crossing the Rockies. The service the Grand Trunk Pacific is offering to the travelling public between Winnipeg(Saskatoon and Edmonton far exceeded by expectations. The standard Sleeping Cars and also tourist Cars are the most modern type and the service of the Dining Cars is beyond criticism. The courtesy and attention shown to passengers by all your employees on the train is of a nature that commended itself very highly to me. The time of the Grand Trunk Pacific trains between Winnipeg and Edmonton is several hours shorter than by other routes, but although I travelled on two or three different trains, found them always on time, and in view of the excellent track could not but be impressed by the fact that running time between Winnipeg and Edmonton could be reduced very much if necessary and the shorter time schedule maintained. "The McDonald," the new Grand Trunk Pacific Hotel at Edmonton is beautifully located on the heights overlooking the Saskatchewan river, and its opening next year is being looked forward to by many.

GAVE HER AWAY.

"You have had that parrot a long time now, Miss Laura, haven't you?" observed Percy Nicefellow to the young lady on whom he was making a call.

"Oh, yes, several years," was the response.

"Very intelligent, is he not?' went on Percy.

"Quite; he can imitate almost everything."

"Ah," continued Percy, "they have a remarkable clever bird at the Browns. It can imitate the sound of a kiss to perfection. Is that among the accomplishments of our feathered friend in the corner?"

"No, it is not, sir!" exclaimed the young lady, indignantly. "Whatever a parrot does is by imitation, simply, and it is not likely that our bird would repeat a sound he is certainly not accustomed to hear."

Then the parrot chimed in:

"No, George, dear! Wait till I have taken this wretched bird out of the room."

Stock Markets

A. H. Stratton & Co., Brokers, report the following:

The stock market continues to fluctuate in a trading area and may remain restricted as to range for some time so that the daily operator will still find the best policy to buy on reactions for turns favouring the standard rails. The Industrial list according to our information has not yet completed its readjustment to the trade reaction and tariff changes, so that it will perhaps be profitable at times to sell industrials on good rallies for turns. The railroad stocks seem to us to have been thoroughly liquidated as a whole, and on weakness sympathetic with the remainder of the market when the latter is attacked by the bear crowd now heavily short it will be the part of wisdom to make conservative commitments of a discriminating character on the long or constructive side. Highest opinion favour U.P., S.P., G.O., N.P., St. Paul, B. and O., and Erie, as purchases on recessions. U.S., A.R. A.C.P., and most of the industrials are regarded in an unsettled position. Specialties may be bought for turn when active.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

IN MEMORIAM

ROBERT PENNIEL BOUCHER

A Brass Memorial Tablet Was Unveiled in St. John's Anglican Church Yesterday

On March 16th, 1912, there entered into rest, Robert Penniel Boucher, M.D. of this City.

The departed physician whose memory will live probably as long as St. John's Church remains, was of English descent, although born in Canada, for his grandfather was born in the County of Kent, England. Dr. Boucher was born in Cobourg, where his father was Judge of the united counties of Peterborough and Victoria.

His Career.

At the age of ten years his father's family removed to this City, where the son in question received his preliminary education, followed by study at Victoria College, Toronto, graduating at New York in 1870. He practiced in the States before returning to Peterborough, where, for some thirty-two years he carried on practice with great success.

In his profession career he earned not only the respect and admiration of all his brother practitioners, but also the affection and esteem of all those who benefitted by his skill. A good citizen, he exercised his utmost abilities for the welfare of his fellow-citizens. In sport he took a great interest while his genial qualities and sterling worth made him a citizen for any City to be proud of.

The Ceremonial.

At the conclusion of the Mattins service at St. John's Church yesterday, the ceremony of unveiling a brass memorial tablet—to perpetuate in the Mother Church of Peterborough the memory of the subject of this memoir—was performed by the Rector, the Reverend Canon Davidson.

A Eulogium.

The ceremony was prefaced by a few appropriate remarks by the Canon who in effect said as follows:

This is a comparatively small incident, yet it largely concerns this congregation. Many of us have our thoughts going out towards him whose memory we are now perpetuating today. We commemorated him at the service of the Eucharist this morning, we think of him at our week-day Lenten services, which he so frequently attended; we have him always in our thoughts—a man of robust character and marvellous strength, which he inspired in all, as well as respect for himself. Those privileged to be close to him remember his friendship and steadfastness of character.

And What More Suitable

Than a memorial of him in the Church in which he constantly worshipped. The tablet about to be unveiled is that which perpetuates the memory of a splendid, true, robust many-sided man.

The Unveiling.

The Canon then drew off the covering, hitherto veiling the memorial brass, with the words:—

"In loving memory of Robert Penniel Boucher we unveil this tablet in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost, Amen."

A short service then followed, consisting of appropriate prayers, sentences and the prayer for 'The Church Militant' as used in the Eucharistic service of the Anglican Liturgy.

The Brass Tablet

bears the following inscription:—

IN MEMORIAM

Robert Peniel Boucher, M.D.

3A. Devoted and Life-long Member of this Congregation.

WHO DEPARTED THIS LIFE MARCH 16, 1912.

This tablet is placed here by his Wife and Family.

"If the Travellers' Association can in any way stimulate or get a live Board of Trade for the City, it would work a lasting benefit to the community. The Board of Trade is practically an unknown quantity at the present time," said Ald. Duffus.

THE "CRIMSON RAMBLER"

By RUTH CAMERON

I have just received a letter on the borderland between the pathetic and the amusing. The evidently sincere distress of the writer emboldens me to write upon a subject that does not often appear in print. By the by, let me mention that I do not see any reason for the bated breath with which you speak of this subject. "A bed bug," says Elbert Hubbard, "is all right except in its official capacity." Of course, no one likes to meet the "crimson rambler" (as some delicate person has named him) in his official capacity, but that is no reason why we should not openly discuss the ways to exterminate him.

My reader friend says that her little boy has been sleeping in the living room this summer, that in some way "crimson ramblers" were brought into the house and have infested the living room. She has tried very hard to get rid of them. She says: "It is quite a serious matter at any time but in one's parlour—you may imagine. I have prayed about the matter, so believe it is best to write to you. Have used gasoline."

Let me tell you my experience. You notice I am not ashamed to say that. Almost every housekeeper, no matter how good, has "crimson ramblers" brought into her house once or twice in her lifetime. Now, it is no reflection whatever on her housekeeping if some member of the family gets one of these creatures on his clothes in a trolley, or if the unwelcome guests smuggle themselves in in the washing (that was my experience.) And yet whenever the thing happens the unfortunate housewives act as if they were disgraced, and refuse to speak of the fatal subject above a whisper.

To return to my experience: my reader friend says she used gasoline. So did I and it did no good, but that was because I used it spasmodically. One day I sprayed the bed and left the closet untouched, the next day vice versa. Then one day I started on a thorough campaign. I bought an atomizer, such as one uses to spray ones throat (forty cents) and a gallon of gasoline. With these I went to work and sprayed every nook and corner in the room, including the picture moulding, the cracks between the baseboard and the floor, etc., etc. Then I sprayed every piece of furniture, inside and out, including the bureau drawers; then the closet, taking every garment out and looking it over thoroughly. The bed and mattress, of course, received special attention.

The campaign took one helper and myself the whole of one day, but it was time saved in the end, for I never found a live "crimson rambler" after that day.

The atomizer is important as it throws a strong stream which penetrates into the cracks. Remember to air out thoroughly before lighting a match in the room. I suppose I should admit that the plague had not progressed far before I made this stand. This treatment might not avail if the "crimson ramblers" had got a good start. I have since been told that an excellent treatment for a serious case is to burn sulphur or some powerful disinfectant in the room. Several people have told me that this is most efficacious and does not hurt the paint, but at present I am not able to recommend it from personal experience. And I must say I hope I never shall be.

Less than Four Weeks Till Christmas.

Uncle Sam's Big Expenses

Special Wire to The Examiner.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1. — It will cost one billoin, one hundred and eight million and a few odd thousands of dollars to run Uncle Sam through nineteen fourteen, according to the estmates given out by Secretary of Treasury McAdoo this morning. This will be thirty-four millions more than last year.

A COMPLAINT FROM A USER OF MILK

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Pure milk, that sounds good. Just a few lines in regard to the above. Now, Sir, do we get pure milk? I think not, for the reason the milk men ask their patrons to wash out the milk bottles they deliver the milk in. Well some of them are partly washed, but not sufficiently clean to be refilled, which is done, if I am not mistaken, and I don't think I am, as I have seen the milk men filling bottles on the street out of their cans. And we have had bottles left at our place that had streaks in them of old milk. So it looked as if they had been refilled before being properly washed. Now, Sir, I think that it is time that the men that are looking after the good health of the city got busy and look after those milk men and see to it and not have the health of the city impaired by such carelessness, or in other words, laziness.

Yours truly,
"A User of Milk."

In regard to this complaint The Examiner understands that the request of milk vendors to patrons to wash their bottles is only an additional precaution and that all bottles are thoroughly cleaned by the milkmen before they are refilled.

HOW TO GET RID OF DYSPEPSIA

Don't Rely on Medicine; Don't Go on Fruit Diet; Common Sense and an Antacid Usually All That Are Needed.

PHYSICIAN GIVES GOOD ADVICE.

"If you have dyspepsia, indigestion, sour stomach, belching, distress after eating, heartburn or any other stomach trouble due to hyperacidity (the usual cause of stomach troubles), you should take no medicine to act upon the stomach itself. That is positively not the way to cure the trouble. Again, you should not half starve yourself by going without the nutritious food that you need to rebuild waste tissues. Some foods are not good for people even when in perfect health—very rich, sweet, highly seasoned dishes. Avoid these, but eat fairly substantial meals of plain foods. Eat slowly. Even if you drink nothing but water, you should not drink with meals. Drink before and after eating. Do not take pepsin or other artificial digestants. If you follow the foregoing simple instructions it is probable that you will not need any medicine at all except, if you want to call it medicine, a little antacid after meals. The best antacid is ordinary bisurated magnesia, which you can be purchased at any drug store. This is not to act upon the stomach but on the contents of the stomach. The antacid, as you can learn by consulting your dictionary or encyclopedia, is merely to neutralize or counteract the excess acid so the stomach can digest the food normally. Take a teaspoonful of bisurated magnesia in a little cold or hot water after each meal. You should get immediate relief, even if your case is severe. Careful, moderate eating and the use of bisurated magnesia, should put your stomach in normal condition in a short time; if you have not allowed dyspepsia to advance to the extreme stage of developing stomach ulcers or cancer."

Coated Cranberries.

Add water to one cupful confectioners' sugar until the resulting syrup will run slowly when dropped from a spoon. Place one of the baked cranberries in a tiny wire spoon and dip in this syrup until the berry is well coated. When dry they may be piled in a glass dish. These are especially nice for children's parties.

INCINERATOR IS ALMOST FINISHED

Should be Performing Regular Work in a Short Time—Looks Like a Good Job.

COSY FEATURES SHOULD PROVE ATTRACTIVE.

The incinerator is practically completed and tight fires have been under way for some time. The upper storey of the structure is being enclosed in sheet iron, and little remains to be done. There is a wide, wooden approach from the Townsend Street side and a driveway out of the building at the rear. The former appears to be rather steep, but men around the incinerator state that it is not a difficult one.

On the ground floor in the vicinity of the furnaces there is a glowing heat from the coals which hint that the stoker will not freeze to death on that job. There were only a few coals on the grates, and yet the heat radiated with great warmth. Throw a few cart loads of garbage into it and it is very likely that the fire will be as intense as Mr. Reid predicted before the construction work was begun.

As far as the work of attending to the furnaces is concerned, the Property Committee should have no difficulty in securing a man. The cold of January will have no effect inside that building, and it looks like a cosy little job for some one. It would be a great place for a game of checkers during inactive moments. Just imagine howling winds outside and steps crunching along the sidewalks, and the stoker with his chair tilted back against the wall, warmed with the pleasant heat that is bound to fill that lower room, a pipe well filled and a convenient box of sawdust within range. It's a wonder the Property Committee has not been deluged with letters for the position. You might expect that the City would ask the favoured man to pay for the privilege. But there are other duties than those outlined and possibly they lack the enticing features of stoking

Rumour Of C. G. E. Bonus

Talk of a bonus on Canadian General Electric stock was current last week. General Electric stock moved up a little in consequence. The company paid one per cent. extra dividend last year, and as they are understood to have had a very busy year there is some expectation of them repeating the bonus performance. General Manager Nicholls during the week confirmed the report that the company had had a very successful season, but he, of course, did not commit himself on the bonus question. The action of the directors in the matter will very likely be influenced by general conditions when the time comes for the declaration. If any very marked slowing down is in sight, it is hardly likely they will pay any bonus.

TWENTIETH CENTURY PLOWING

It is out on the prairies that the gasoline and oil engine is coming into its own as the successor of the horse. A Topeka man recently counted sixty-one traction engines at work plowing the fields of Kansas along the railway line between Syracuse and Topeka, and within view of the train. One wholesale dealer in Kansas sold twenty tractors before the first of August of this year. The Kansas Historical Society recorded newspaper accounts of 19 sales of tractors in central Kansas in one week this year, and gleaned from country newspapers items showing twenty farmers starting their traction plows at the same time. It is estimated that there are from 250 to 300 machines pulling plows in Kansas. And Kansas is only one good-sized quadrangular block of the engine country.

ABLAZE WITH NEW LIGHTS

Lindsay's Magnetites Turned on For First Time Saturday Night and Result Was Very Satisfactory

SAME AS THOSE HERE

LINDSAY, Dec. 1.—Last night the main street of this Town was ablaze with light from the magnetite system. The Seymour Power Company have had a gang of men at work for some weeks past putting the wires underground and erecting the iron standards. The connections being made showed the whole system to be perfect in detail, and satisfactory in the development of the system which is considered the latest and best thing in municipal lighting. The Bell Telephone Company has also removed its poles and wires off the main street, adding much to the fine appearance o fthe business section of the Town.

LIGHTING APPARATUS FOR RICHMOND STUDIO

Can Be Controlled in the Minutest Detail and is Said to be as Effective as Daylight

The Richmond photographic studio has secured a new lighting apparatus which practicallly acts as rapidly as daylight, thereby permitting excellent work done at night and on dull days. It consists of a frame of 35 Tugsten lamps of 100 watts each, giving a total of 3,500 watts. At the back of it is a mirror that can be adjusted at any angle, and in front is a fine screen, consisting of some white cloth material that has received a special chemical treatment. Dark cloths enfold the whole apparatus except at the front, through which the light passes. The screen can be adjusted at various angles, the lamps are divided into three circuits and the volume of light can be readily controlled.

The adjustment of the entire apparatus is under perfect control, and the material of the screen is of a nature that the light is diffused to such an extent that shadows are almost entirely eliminated. The idea is said to be a new one in local photography, and is invaluable for the taking of groups and the pictures of children The light can be secured at any angle, and in recent photographs it has been impossible to distinguish those taken under the new light and others caught with average daylight. The public are invited to examine the new apparatus and its workings, whether they intend to have photographs taken or not.

Three Years For Forgery

COLUMBUS PROFESSOR IS MISSING

HAMILTON, Nov. 30.—A country-wide search for Cecil F. Lavell, professor of the state university of Columbus, O., who has been missing for several days, when he landed from a row boat on the north shore of the bay, has begun. Relatives offered $500 reward for information that would lead to his whereabouts, and the police kept the wires humming with messages to points where it is possible the man, unconscious of his wanderings, may have gone, if he has not lost his life in the bay.

A Mysterious Note.

Rev. A. E. Lavell, pastor of the Brant Avenue Methodist Church, of Brantford, and Professor George Y. Chown, registrar of Queen's university, Kingston, a brother-in-law, are here directing the search. They patrolled the bay in a motor boat, recovered the rowboat, drawn high up on shore, near Cartell's point, and inquired in vain from farmers in the vicinity for some information about Lavell. In the boat they found the man's coat and hat, and fixed to the seat of the boat with a penknife a note as follows: "I am on the lake. If anyone finds me and I am unable to speak, notify Dr. Mahony at the priests' palace."

Had Lapse of Memory.

Professor Chown explained that Lavell, who was recently appointed to the professorship of the Columbus university, was on his way to Toronto to visit his wife, who was called there on account of her mother's illness. No explanation could be volunteered as to why he stopped off at Hamilton, other than that he suffered a very severe lapse of memory, similar to which he was seized with about two years ago. On that occasion he was connected with the University of Columbia, New York state. He suddenly appeared in Kingston, where his mother was, and called on Professor Chown. He told his mother that he was going to take a short rest before lecturing at Syracuse. In three or four days he recovered his memory and informed Professor Chown that he had no idea of how he got to Kingston and that he had no engagement to lecture at Syracuse at that time. Professor Chown said he noticed nothing out of the ordinary about the man until he made the admission to him that he had lost his memory temporarily.

Feared He Would Be Ill.

When Lavell arrived here he went to the International hotel. There was nothing about his actions to excite suspicion. About 4 o'clock in the afternoon he called at the priest's palace on Mulberry Street, and asked for Dr. Mahony, Rector of St. Mary's Cathedral. He was not acquainted with Dr. Mahony previously, and stated that the object of his visit was to have someone he could rely on to notify relatives in case of his illness. He said it was possible he might be taken ill and not be able to explain his condition. In this event he desired Dr. Mahony to 'phone to Professor Chown, his brother-in-law, at Kingston. His intention, however, he said, was to leave for New York on an evening train. The arrangement he mad with Dr. Mahony was to telephone to the International hotel in the evening and inquire as to whether he had left.

When Dr. Mahony called the hotel he ascertained that Lavell had been inquiring there about a boat house. Dr. Mahony then made inquiries among the boat houses and found that Lavell had been to Bastien's boat house and later to Askews, where he secured a boat and started across the bay.

Mr. Askew saw that Lavell could handle a boat all right and did not worry about him. He saw the man pull over towards the north shore and land in the vicinity of Carroll's point. When he did not return by night, Mr Askew himself became somewhat alarmed, but he had no way of finding out who the man was until Dr. Mahony called.

While Lavell's relatives are hoping against hope that he got on a train and went to some other point where he is safe yet, grave fears are entertained. When the man appeared at Bastien's boat house he had what appeared to be a parcel, that might have contained wearing apparel, but this is now thought to have been his overcoat. He also had a magazine with him. It is not thought that he could wander around he country without a hat or coat and no excite someone's suspicion.

His Description.

Lavell is forty years of age, and 5 feet 10 inches in height, and weighs 150 pounds. He has brown hair, which is beginning to turn grey, and is slightly bald in front. He has a brown mustache and a mole behind one of his ears. His eeys are blue. He wore a grey cheviot suit which was made at Benjamin's in New York.

Mrs. Lavell, who is in Toronto, told the Spectator over the long-distance telephone this morning that her husband was not subject to fits, as one paper said, but at times he had severe headaches. According to her story, he was injured in Columbus last Saturday by something falling on his head, but as yet Mrs. Lavell has not heard just how the accident happened. She believes that he was on his way to Toronto, where she had been called to visit her mother, who was sick.

Lavell was formerly connected with Queens university, Kingston, and his father was warden of the penitentiary there for a number of years. From Queen's he went to Columbia university, where he stayed three years, and then went to the Ohio State university at Columbus, Ohio. He was also head of he department of education at Columbus.

Lavell's grip is still at the International hotel, where he registered on Monday afternoon at two o'clock. After putting his grip in his room he went out and never came back.

BEWARE OF JEALOUSY

A woman who suffers from jealousy eats her own heart day by day. She is forever hunting up ground for complaint and walking toward the wrong end for herself; she becomes discontented with her friends, they never do anything that pleases her, and if they go elsewhere for pleasure she feels slighted, and is heartbroken.

She even goes so far as to exact from her friends the wiping-out of their lives every other interest but herself; if they call twice on another she is furious, because she believes them preferred to herself. Her feelings are always being hurt; your most casual remark has some hidden meaning which she twists into an insult, until you are made to appear unkind and selfish.

Deliver us from "touchy" women in the first place, for they are most uncomfortable to get along with; and in the second place there is no call for "getting along" with them.

Before very long the jealous woman is shunned as though she were a plague, as indeed she is. She kills any love that was hers, until even her bravest friend ends by deserting her.

You can find the cause of all this in jealousy and mean, miserable doubt of every thing and everybody. When we see such rsults we are tempted to believe jealousy is the worst possible fault one can have, for it destroys all human kindness in the breast.

If you wish to keep your friendship and your lover keep away from jealousy, fight it off with all your strength, or you are bound to be unhappy. Don't claim too much, don't grudge what another gets, and especially, don't make the gift of your regard a burden to your friends, claiming interest that would shame a money lender.

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER

STEAD SENDS MESSAGES FROM SPIRIT LAND

BOSTON, Mass., Dec. 1. — "If a man die, shall he live again?"

It was the question of Job, old as human thought and hope, the biggest question in all human experience.

I asked it of Estelle Wilson Stead, daughter of the famous English editor and scientist, William T. Stead, whose brilliant life went out when the Titanic sank. Stead, himself, had believed in a spirit world. This wholesome, fair-haired, fresh-faced girl gave me a startling definite answer.

"Yes," she said, "I have proof of immortality.

"Thinkers admit that evidence of only one soul surviving bodily death will prove the case. And I have that evidence!

"My father, drowned with the 1,600 victims of the Titanic, still lives. He sends me personal messages that are absolutely convincing. I have even seen him, in a form more ethereal and beautiful than his earthly body. And I have talked with him face to face!

"Three weeks after he passed over," she continued, "the first message came. I was resting in the twilight, with my mind at ease. And suddenly I was conscious of father's voice.

"'All that I told you is true,' he said. 'I have entered into the fuller life.

"'We are what we will be. We have what we have faith in. And all things are possible.'

"He left me with a sense of infinite comfort and trust.

"He came again, often, and told me many things about his last hours and his present existence, some of which are hard to repeat."

And then Miss Stead described the Titanic disaster, as related by a victim from beyond his watery grave.

"Father said that he was in his stateroom, when he was startled by a sudden shock and an outcry and a scurrying of feet. He rushed out to the deck and found a scene of confusion, which turned to terror as the vessel started to sink and the lifeboats were launched.

"I asked him whether he was frightened, and he said: 'No. Fear is for unbelievers. My faith kept me calm.'

"Finally he started down into the cabin. Then came a sudden blow on the head, and he passed at once to the spirit land."

"Why, of all the victims, has your father alone come back?"

"I do not grant that!" she answered quickly. "Many of those souls may have sent back messages. Many more may have tried to reach the consciousness of relatives and friends, and failed.

"Father and I were always very close. The bond between our minds made telepathic communication between us common during his life. What is more natural than that his thought should reach me afterward—if his personality survives?"

"And are you sure that there is no self-delusion about all this?"

Miss Stead smiled. "They call me a normal, sensible girl," she answered. "And I have studied psychic matters. Now, consider the two facts:

"First, I never get such a message except when I am in sound health. Recently I was ill, as a result of overwork on my book, 'Personal and Spiritual Reminiscences of My Father.' During that illness I got no messages. There is nothing morbid or pathological about my experiences.

"Second, the messages are their own proof. Father, speaks of things that nobody knows except us two. You say that might possibly be self-suggestion—my sub-conscious mind at work—but the new facts that father adds to the old, things that I could not possibly have known until he told me, clinch the proof.

"And to me the strongest proof of all is just this—that at such times I feel and know the actual presence of my father.

"Just before I left England I received a note from a gentleman of irreproachable honour, who knew nothing of my plans. He explained that he had 'heard from father,' who had difficulty in reaching me just then, and that father wanted me to visit a certain medium, whom I had never seen.

"The moment this medium entered the trance state he delivered a long message from father. It was too intimate for me to repeat.

"Suffice it to say that father told me he was glad I was coming to America.

"My message to America is that there is a future life."

TURNBULL'S

English Scientists Puzzled By Tiny Bushmen From Australia

LONDON, Nov. 29.—Cambridge University has an unusual visitor at the close of last week in the person of "Franz," the mysterious cafe-au-lait coloured Bushman, whose dancing caused quite a sensation in Paris recently, and who is now touring the halls in the West of England.

"Franz" lunched at Jesus College with Dr. Duckworth, the distinguished professor of anthropology, and later drank afternoon tea with the ladies.

"He behaved with the utmost decorum," Dr. Duckworth testified Saturday, "but at lunch he refused all solid food, and I had to feed him on soup. At tea time we managed to get him to eat a piece of cake, which he seemed to enjoy. He has a most winning smile, and during the four hours he was with us I saw no sign of 'tantrums,' or any sort of savagery."

It was in view of the fascinating problem in ethnology which he presents that the tiny gentleman (he only stands four feet three in his English socks) was brought to Cambridge. Last September he was "discovered," so far as science goes, by Professor Duckworth at Yarmouth, where he was being exhibited by a colonial named Epstein.

In an Ostrich Skin.

Mr. Epstein's story is that he was hunting ostriches one day in the Kalahari Desert when one of the birds was seen to lag behind. On being run down it was found to be no bird at all, but a diminutive "nigger" in an ostrich's skin.

"That may sound a strong yarn, but as a matter of fact it is quite credible, for the Bushmen are known to stalk ostriches in that way," Dr. Duckworth admitted.

So far all efforts to converse with the little fellow have been fruitless. The Cambridge savants tried him with various primitive languages, and he was found to respond volubly to a few remarks in Seehuana, the language of Bechuanaland, "clicking" eagerly in the correct Bushman style. But unfortunately the "clicks" of "Franz"—made sometimes behind the teeth and sometimes at the back of the throat—had no apparent relation to the Sechuana "clicks." He appeared to be in the position of an Englishman who can understand a little simple French, but is quite unable to speak the language.

"If only," said Dr. Duckworth, "we could find someone able to talk to him the results might be most valuable. On that account we are anxious to get Sir Harry Johnston interested in the case. There may still be a few old Boers who can talk some dialect of the Bush language. The man is old enough to remember the time when his people were much more numerous than at present, and ought to be able to give some interesting information about their customs."

Wonderful Dancer.

One of the most astonishing things about "Franz" is that he dances magnificently to rag-time music. He gave a wonderful exhibition before three hundred invited guests in the new examination hall of the university, Professor Duckworth having secured the services of a rag-time orchestra. Undoubtedly, according to this authority, he is a finished step-dancer, with a perfect ear for rhythm, if not for tune, and able to accommodate his movements to the sound.

For the first time the finger and foot prints of a member of the Bush race were taken, and a number of anthropological measurements made, but it is hoped that "Franz" will return to Cambridge in order that the latter may be completed.

He will be shown also some of the very primitive stone implements found in South Africa to see if he recognizes their use and is really a Stone Age man stranded in the twentieth century.

RATEPAYER RAKES OUR CITY FINANCES OVER THE COALS

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Sir,—Is it not about time that the City Council which has developed into a kind of mutual admiration society should be broken up? There is not one member in the City Council who has offered any real criticism against the administration of our civic affairs. There certainly has been ample ground for criticism especially in regard to the increase in the indebtedness of the city and the increase in the city's taxation.

The indebtedness of Peterborough in 1908 was $705,084.00, and the indebtedness of Peterborough at the beginning of this year was $1,518,008, and still the indebtedness is going on merrily rolling up. That is to say since 1908 the Council who have had control of our civic affairs during this last five years have increased the mortgages against this city to the extent of over $600,000.00. What have the ratepayers of Peterborough got to show for this increase on our indebtedness? It certainly has not been spent in street improvements because our streets are in a more wretched condition this year than they were ten years ago. It has not been spent in furnishing increased accommodation to the residents of East City to obtain more convenient access to their work in our factories in the south end of the town. Formerly these residents at great danger to their lives used the C.P.R. track as a footpath, but when the C.P.R. were building their new bridge across the river our City Council did not see fit to provide a foot bridge to accommodate the residents of East City. We have no new City Hall to account for this increased indebtedness of $120,000.00 a year. It has not been spent in improving our water front because that improvement had already been done before 1908. It has not been spent in providing a proper sewage system for the city, notwithstanding the fact that this city must obey the orders of the Provincial Health and spend upwards of $200,000.00 on a sewage system to prevent the spread of diseased germs and the pollution of the Otonabee river. Where has the money gone? Let the retiring councillors who are seeking re-election explain.

In 1909 the ratepayers paid 19½ mills on the dollar. Our annual assessment this year is 25 mills on the dollar. This represents an increased taxation of 5½ mills on the dollar which on a total assessment of $10,000,000.00 shows that the city's annual expenditure has during this last four years increased over $55,000. a year. This increase in our taxes has come to stay because the interest upon the increased mortgage debt of this city will in future have to be paid.

But this increase of $55,000.00 a year in the annual expenditure of the city does not truly represent the whole increase because the total assessment of the city in 1908 was only $6,800,000.00, whereas in this year of Our Lord it is $10,000,000.00. This represents an increase in our assessment of $3,200,000.00, and the ratepayers on that increase are taxed 25 mills on the dollar, which will further increase our annual expenditure above what it was five years ago to the extent of $80,000.00 a year.

The very statement of these figures shows that there has been extravagance, mismanagement and incompetence on the part of our City Council, and every one of them should be voted out of office and more careful and competent men should be put in their place. Is it not time that a public meeting should be called to discuss our city's financial affairs and that the ratepayers should take more interest in seeing that every one of our retiring Council is opposed.

Yours, etc.,

Enquiring Ratepayer.

160 ACRE FARMS FOR $80 IN NEW ONTARIO

Northern Ontario Colonization Car at G. T. R. Station This Evening —A Chance for Man of Moderate Means.

EASY PAYMENT TERMS FOR GOOD HOMESTEADS

The presence of a Northern Ontario Exhibition car at the G.T.R. station to-day for the purpose of interesting prospective colonists in the great clay belt country in the northern part of this province, is a striking demonstration of the foresight and faith of the late Liberal legislature.

The display of grains, fruits, vegetables, timber and minerals, is reminiscent of an agricultural exhibition, and the quality of these natural products refutes the attempted disparagement uttered by Sir James Whitney when he described the country as the land of the stunted poplar. Pamphlet No. 11, stamped with the imprimatur of the Conservative leader describes the clay country as a land of promise and the Government and T. and N. O. Commission have sent out their colonization car to educate the people in regard to the possibilities of the new country.

Mr. G. E. Palmer, of Englehart, and Mr. C. A. Young, of Algoma district, are in charge of the car which will be open until 9 o'clock to-night. The former claims that New Ontario offers better opportunities than the West to the man of limited means. A homestead of 160 acres may be obtained at 50c an acre. The settler or a substitute must spend six months every year on it, erect a habitable house, and clear and cultivate 16 acres in three years. He says $20 down and a similar amount each year, until the total of $80 has been paid in.

There are no stones in the clay belt and some farmers will bet that not one stone can be found on their farms. The land is perfectly level with just enough gradual slope to allow for good drainage.

The exhibits in the car are from Algoma, Rainy River, Kenora, Sudbury and Temiskaming. In the latter district there is more available homestead land and is receiving particular attention on that account. If you would learn a few facts about a new section of your province, if you desire to buy a 160-acre farm for $80, in short, if you have that back to the land feeling, visit the car this evening at the G.T.R. station, near King street. To-morrow it goes to Tweed.

GILLESPIE FOR MAYOR

To the Electors of the City of Peterboro'

Ladies and Gentlemen—At the urgent solicitation of many of my business and personal friends, I have consented to become a candidate for the position of Mayor of your City, and respectfully solicit your votes and influence.

As in the past, I shall not make any rash promises to gain the vote of any elector, but, if elected, my attitude on every question will be to stand firm for the best interests of our Progressive City.

Having been interested in Peterborough all my life, and one of your Aldermen for five years, I may fairly claim to be in close touch with every section and every interest of the Municipality, and familiar with its needs and ambitions.

I believe that in all respects the will of the people should prevail; that a vigorous but economical administration is the best administration, and that if your Chief Magistrate is able to devote a fair proportion of his time to his civic duties, it will not be to your disadvantage if he brings with him the experience and energy he displays in the conduct of a large and successful business of his own.

If my success in the Council during the past five years has in the main met with your approval, I shall esteem it an honour to have your further approval and support in the coming contest.

Yours respectfully

G. A. GILLESPIE.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

AN APPEAL TO THE FANS OF PETERBORO'

Very seldom has the Peterborough Hockey Club had to appeal to the public for assistance. The Club has been self supporting for a good many seasons, but just now the Executive are compelled to ask the loyal fans to help put the game on a good footing for the coming winter.

The reason for this unusual step is the very unsuccessful season last year, when the expenses of handling three teams proved too much for the finances and the Club wound up the year several hundred dollars to the bad. The lack of ice throughout January and the fact that the Senior and Junior teams were knocked out almost at the beginning had their affect on the gate receipts while the expenses with three teams to look after were unusually heavy.

In an effort to raise funds to pay off the debts and start the season with a clean sheet, the Executive a short time ago, arranged a benefit concert. The public failed to support the enterprise, however, and instead of reducing the deficit the experiment added over $40 to the debt. The result was very disappointing to the management of the Club, and the outlook was so discouraging that there was talk of dropping out of the game altogether this season.

The Executive, however, are convinced that the people of Peterborough want to see hockey here this winter, and are confident that they will respond to a call for assistance. It should be understood that the hockey club is purely a local enterprise, an institution for the benefit of the citizens generally, and with no financial returns connected with it for those who manage its affairs. The Executive give their time to looking after the Club, and just what time is required is known only to those who have from year to year done the work. The game is carried on to give the citizens a means of making the long winter a little more interesting and enjoyable, and to provide as many as possible of the boys and young men of the City with healthy recreation. The Executive wants nothing for themselves—they merely ask their fellow citizens to help them start the game right this year.

Arrangements have been made by the Hockey Club for a canvass for subscriptions and it is to be hoped that the fans of the City will respond freely to the cause.

Training Will Begin This Evening

Hockey Players Out at Brock Street Rink

The Peterborough Hockey Club's two teams will commence their training to-night at the Brock Street Rink, when it is expected that a big turnout of both juniors and intermediates will be in line for the first workout. The roller rink floor should prove an excellent place for the purpose and with a few hard drills there the squad should be ready when the ice comes. Every man who wants to get a place on either team is expected to attend the preliminary workouts. To-night's class will commence at 6.45 o'clock.

MERCANTILE HOCKEY LEAGUE

Meeting Will be Shortly Held to Make Arrangements for Forthcoming Season

A meeting will shortly be called with a view of reorganizing for the season of 1914, the Mercantile Hockey League, which put up, amongst its varied units, some capital exhibitions of clean stick play during the hockey season of 1913. The genial Tommy Moffatt is spoken of as again acting as secretary. So far the Tool Room and the Drafting Department of the C. G. E. have entered teams, while the "Examiner" will no doubt put up as good a show as they did in the past season.

DANCE AND SOCIAL

To Be Given by the "Nomads" Football Club

The Nomads Football Club, which Mr. T. Moffatt has so ably managed, purpose giving a dance and social at the Woodmen of the World Hall, on George Street, on Tuesday, December 9th. Some good talent—in fact the best the City can provide—has been engaged for the occasion. The reunion will mark the close of the football season for 1913, and a very enjoyable evening may be anticipated.

The medals and Burnham Shield, won in the competition by the Glaziers will be presented during the course of the evening.

WANDERERS TURN TABLES ON THEIR OLD RIVALS

To-day's Vanquished Were Victims in Game Last Year to Tune of 6-0--Surprise in the First League--Leeds City Were Top Scorers---League Tables.

Saturday was another one of surprises in British soccer circles. The doughty "Rovers" were downed by the "Wanderers" at Bolton, the score being 1 to 0. Manchester City turned the tables on Oldham athletics at Oldham to the tune of 3 to 1. The "City" were the only First Division team to win away from home. Preston North End came out of their shell with a vengeance, even though they still grace the bottom of the league. They entertained Middlesboro at Preston, and scored 4 goals to their opponents' 1. Manchester United lost another valuable point at Old Trafford, Derby keeping them down to a tie of 2 goals each.

Leeds' Cricket Score.

Notts Forest will have reason to remember the "Peacocks'" ground at Elland road, as the City piled up 8 goals against them Saturday afternoon. The score looks as if they had been playing cricket more than soccer. The other two Yorkshire teams in the Second Division, Hull City and Bradford, also proved victorious, the former beating Leicester Fosse at Leicester by 4 to 0—and the latter trimming Bury at Park Avenue to the tune of 3 to 1. Notts County still lead the division, and their victory of 3 to 1 over Barnsley was expected.

Swindon Again Tie.

Only four games were played in the Southern League Saturday, and three of these ended in ties. Swindon tied with Portsmouth on the latter's grounds. Brighton and Hove were the only team to claim the full number of points which they captured off Bristol Rovers.

Small Scores in Scotland.

Hearts and Raith Rovers were the only two teams to make anything like large scores in the Scottish League games, the former scoring 4 against Aberdeen and the latter 3 against Partick Thistle. Celtic just saved their position at the top of the table by a 1 to 0 victory over Airdrieonians at Airdrie. Rangers were also hard-pressed at Clyde, but they got away with the odd goal.

Stockport Lose Cup Tie.

Stockport were put out of the running for the English Cup by Gainsboro, who beat them in the fourth qualifying round. Norwich City whitewashed Walthamstow by 6 to 0.

Tigers Overwhelmed Parkdale And Capture The Dominion Title

HAMILTON, Nov. 29.—Hamilton Tigers landed their third Canadian Senior Rugby title to-day, when they not only defeated Parkdale, but routed them in the most one-sided game since Montreal beat Peterborough in 1907 by the score of 77 to 6. It was no contest from a spectator's point of view, as the Tigers outclassed their opponents at every angle, and when they scored a try in the first three minutes of play, after taking the ball on bucks from midfield over the Parkdale line, all interest ceased, and the only question was how far would the Tigers win by. At quarter-time the score was 7 to 2, and at half-time 21 to 2, and the only consolation Parkdale can take out of the game is that they held the Tigers scoreless in the third period when the latter were playing against the wind. In the closing period, especially near the finish, the Tigers wound up by scoring 23 points, thus making the score 44 to 2 at the finish.

Where Parkdale were supposed to be strongest they were weakest—that being on the line. Tigers simply tore holes at will, and the most surprising of all from a Parkdale standpoint was that the Tigers displayed more speed than the Paddlers. The latter had their plays smoothered throughout and when it came to getting down the field under kicks the Parkdale wings were very slow.

Tigers made the game interesting and spectacular throughout by opening up their play and they never worked smoother than they did on Saturday, although it may have been the lack of opposition that enabled them to carry out their plays with confidence and precision. They never made a mistake in carrying out their signals until the third quarter, when Dixon relieved Chagnon at quarter. The Tigers certainly lived up to their reputation as being the greatest team that ever represented Hamilton.

The showing of the Parkdale team was a big disappointment to their supporters, who fully expected that Tigers would be held to a small score. The Paddlers have played better Rugby than they exhibited Saturday, but it was before a home crowd. Two or three bucks from Ross Craig, and the Parkdale wings were turning their backs on him. This was enough to convince one that several members of the Parkdale team were at their best when playing at home.

Parkdale's two rouges—which they secured in the first quarter—was all the scoring that they did in 60 minutes, although one of these rouges nearly resulted in a try, as the Tiger half muffed the ball but recovered. Outside of these two points, Parkdale had only a couple of chances. One was in the second quarter, when Zimmerman got away and had nobody to beat but Manson, but the latter tripped him, thus saving a sure try. Again in the last quarter, Hughie Gall, who relieved Bernie at quarter, broke through for a 40-yard run, but Tigers blocked an onside kick and secured the ball.

GAVE $100 CHEQUES TO ORCHESTRA

MONTREAL, Nov. 30.— While the restaurant in the Ritz-Carlton Hotel hummed with the music of many voices, the tingle of glasses, and the waves of harmony, a short, slight man, dressed in evening garb, rose from a table which he alone occupied, and gazed about the cafe. He twisted his petit black moustache, moved his small head from side to side in time with the tune of the music, and was for a few moments the cynosure of all eyes.

"Would the gentlemen ask the orchestra to play the grand National Anthem of Austria, my country," he asked of the leader in accents which were Parisian rather Viennese.

The leader would oblige the small stranger, and the anthem was begun. In a flash the small right hand raised to the salute, and the proportionately small figure remained in an upright position until the last strains had died.

"Ah, the gentleman will kindly accept this small token of my appreciation," said the small man, as he passed a cheque on the Bank of Montreal for one hundred dollars to a waiter to pass to the leader.

Of course, his identity was immediately questioned. Was he a millionaire, man of influence? This they never knew, for since he had heard the Natoinal Anthem his heart was glad, and his tongue silenced. Presently he rose from the table, and with the carelessness of a man who handled millions pased the head waiter a cheque for one hundred dollars. The waiter was staggered. What manner of man was this. Waiters marvelled among themselves. His generosity had exceeded the hopes of the wildest dreamer among them.

And straightway the head waiter went to the leader of the orchestra to apprise him of the largeness of heart of one of so small frame.

The 'phone number of the detective bureau is Main 4249. A short time later a detective entered the room of the small gentleman and held talk of considerable duration with him. Of course, the sleuth pointed out, there was absolutely nothing wrong in bestowing these checks of one hundred each upon whomsoever he chose, though it would be so much better if the checks were of value. Would the gentleman kindly explain?

Well, to begin with, the small gentleman was the son of immensely opulent and affluent folk in Austria. He could claim friendship with all the crowned heads of Europe, and, indeed, relationship with several. With the late King Edward VII. he had corresponded on many occasions, and with King Manuel of Portugal, why—

"Yes, but how about making good these checks you have distributed?" interrupted the harsh detective.

"Ah, a minor matter, my friend, very simple. You see, I have so many friends, both here and in Europe, but I shall cable Europe for one thousand dollars. I know I shall get it.'

"Would the manager of the establishment kindly retire while I speak in private with the detective?" The maanger retired.

"You see, my friend, I have many friends in this city, but I am very proud, and would not borrow from them. Yet I have not enough to pay the charges on this cable. Would the gentleman oblige me by a loan—a very small loan. Let me see, it would not cost more than $41."

The interview ended. The detective did not prove himself the equal of the interviewed in lavishing contributions at will. Later the term of residence of the small man at the hotel terminated, and as he persisted walking up and down in front of the door after being put out, a policeman was asked to conduct him to No. 10 station, where he will await the arrival of $1,000, or succour from some of his many Montreal friends.

PREPARING FOR THE SACRED HEART RINK

The work of laying out the ground for the rink on the Sacred Heart Church property is under way, and the committee will be prepared for the first frost. Mr. A. A NEW TYPE.

Lewis Cass Ledyard was talking in New York about a muckraker of a new type.

"I've never heard any good of him," he said. "Even when I've thought I heard a word in his favour it has always proved the opposite when traced to its source.

"It's like the case of the office boy whose master said:

"Willie is slow, but sure."

"Slow and sure, eh?"

"Yes; slow to learn, sure to forget."

Strange Increase.

The large number of painting that unscrupulous dealers declare to be the work of the old masters is aptly satirized by Robert Henri, the artist.

"Take for instance," said Mr. Henri, "the work of the illustrious English artist, George Morland, who lived 100 years ago. The indefatigable Morland painted, in the course of his life, about 4,000 pictures, and of these——"

Mr. Henri smiled his quiet and intelligent smile.

"Of these," he continued, "no less than 8,000 are still extant."

ARRESTED ON CHARGE OF MAKING OPIUM

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—The Federal authorities took possession recently of the apartment of Dr. Herman Seidler, a specialist in gynecology, on the first floor of 153 East Twentysecond Street, and late in the afternoon placed the physician under arrest on the charge of manufacturing opium without a Federal license. Before this was accomplished, however, the tenants of the apartment house witnessed some exciting scenes.

For some little time Inspector Elmer J. Lewis, the representative of the Federal Government in the crusade which is being carried on against the opium trade, has been looking into the affairs of Dr. Seidler. An inspection of his expensively furnished apartments yesterday, so the Inspector said, showed that the physician kept on hand a supply of opium sufficient to keep in good humour a small army of persons addicted to the drug. Moreover, he had forty pipes and they all seem to have been used.

Then the Inspector and an assistant decided it was time to interfere, and got down to await the return of the physician, who was out when they made their call.

One of the first of their visitors was the piano tuner. He rang the bell of the apartment before the elevator man could tip him off to what was going on. As the door was opened, he found himself staring down the barrel of a revolver, held firmly in the right hand of a uniformed official.

"Hold up your hands," came the order, and he obeyed.

While he was wondering if the police actually did such things in broad daylight, the piano tuner was searched. A big wrench he carried in his trousers pocket was tossed on the floor. When it was discovered that he did not carry a gun, he was ordered to sit down and tell his story. Dazed by all that had happened to him he gasped out a brief recital of his occupation and the reason for his visit. He had come to collect a payment on a piano, he said. The Federal officers told him to get out and say nothing about his experience, and he obeyed.

Two or three patients who dropped in were handled with a little more consideration and were permitted to depart on their promise to keep their own counsel. It was about 4 o'clock when Dr. Seidler appeared. He seemed to be in the highest spirits and not at all worried by the presence of the Federal authorities. Later he admitted that he had himself been an opium smoker. He readily agreed to accompany the officers wherever they wanted him to go and the apartment was closed. There was nobody there early last evening.

Inspector Lewis said that he had gathered his first information about Dr. Seidler from a conversation with persons whose names he did not want to disclose. When the doctor was arraigned before Commissioner Shields half an hour after his arrest he was ready to plead guilty to the charge, according to the Federal Assistant District Attorneys.

Hence Its Origin.

Every superstition, or nearly every superstition, can be traced back to something sensible and rational. Take the Friday one, for example.

The speaker was Mayor Reutter, of Lansing, Ill.

"Take the Friday superstition," he resumed. "One lansing cclerk said to another:

"'Would you start of on your vacation on Friday, Bob?'

"'You bet your life I wouldn't,' Bob replied.

"'What a superstitious ass you are, Bob!'

"'Superstition, be hanged!'" said Bib. 'I wouldn't start off on Friday, because Saturday's pay day.'"

BUREAU LACKED FACILITIES STORM INQUEST IS RESUMED

Expert From Meteorological Office Says Closing of Telegraph Offices Prevents the Issue of the Saturday Night Forecast to Ports—Says Freighters Should Have Shifting Boards—No Bulletin Sent.

GODERICH, Dec. 2.—Another session of the coroner's inquest in connection with the recent disaster on Lake Huron, was held here yesterday afternoon and a further adjournment was made to Saturday, Dec. 13, when it is hoped a conclusion will be reached. Coroner Hunter presided and Crown Attorney Seager conducted the investigation, which has developed into a general enquiry as to the conditions affecting lake navigation.

Capt. Alex. Lawson, who navigated the lakes for many years in sailing craft, said that vessels should be compelled to use shifting boards. He thought, too, if some of the wooden lifeboats carried on some of the freighters were put into the water they would not float; the metallic boats were better. There appeared to be no boat drill, and the men who sail the freighters nowadays would not be able to handle the boats if they got them launched. Goderich harbor, he said, should be widened and deepened and with the completion of the breakwater it would be a good harbor.

William Allan of the Toronto office of the Dominion meteorological service gave some very interesting testimony. He said the heavy gale signal was up at all ports on the lakes from Nov. 7 to Nov. 10, and the forecasts sent out predicted strong winds and snow. Only five times this season, once in July, once in September, twice in October, and then on Nov. 7, were the heavy gale signals ordered up on the lakes, and on each occasion it was justified by the weather that followed. It was the practice to make out the weather charts twice each day, at 9.30 a.m. and 10.30 p.m., and immediately afterwards to wire the forecasts to all the stations. On Saturday night the forecasts were not sent out, as the telegraph offices closed early and were not open regularly on Sunday. Accordingly, when the storm abated on Saturday, Nov. 8 (this storm was felt chiefly on Lake Superior), there was no way of giving mariners a warning of the great storm that came on Sunday. The witness maintained, however, that as the heavy gale signal was still up this should have served as a warning. Since the storm the meteorological office has been sending the Saturday night forecast to the wireless station at Midland, where it could be communicated to vessels having wireless equipment.

That there were not enough inspectors and that the inspectors did not have sufficient time to do their work thoroughly was the opinion of John W. Taylor, for many years an engineer on lake steamers. As a consequence, not much dependence could be placed on lifeboats and lifebelts for the saving of life. He, too, thought every vessel should have a shifting board.

Capt. Stephen, of the steamer Kaministiquia, who has the proud distinction of having brought his vessel safely through the storm on Lake Huron, told of his experience on the fateful day. Capt. Stephens made several suggestions for he improvement of Goderich harbor, but said no matter how good a harbor it might be no vessel could have made it in that storm.

R. A. Harrison of Cleveland, agent of the Lake Carriers' Association, told of the system by which that association kept close track of all the sailors shipping in their boats. By means of this system all but one of the bodies from the lake carriers' boats had been identified.

Rescue Stations Needed.

OTTAWA, Dec. 2.—Col. John A. Currie, M.P. for North Simcoe, is in Ottawa to-day to urge upon the Government the appointment of a commission to enquire into the recent great lakes catastrophe, and to report upon the feasibility and desirability of establishing life-saving stations on the Canadian shores of the lakes.

Col. Currie points out that all along the shores of the United States side of the great lakes, life-saving stations exist, and he is of the opinion that had there been life-saving stations at some of the points where vessels drifted ashore during the recent storm many lives would have been saved.

The probabilities are that joint action will be taken with the United States Government in this connection.

GILLESPIE FOR MAYOR

To the Electors of the City of Peterboro'

Ladies and Gentlemen—At the urgent solicitation of many of my business and personal friends, I have consented to become a candidate for the position of Mayor of your City, and respectfully solicit your votes and influence.

As in the past, I shall not make any rash promises to gain the vote of any elector, but, if elected, my attitude on every question will be to stand firm for the best interests of our Progressive City.

Having been interested in Peterborough all my life, and one of your Aldermen for five years, I may fairly claim to be in close touch with every section and every interest of the Municipality, and familiar with its needs and ambitions.

I believe that in all respects the will of the people should prevail; that a vigorous but economical administration is the best administration, and that if your Chief Magistrate is able to devote a fair proportion of his time to his civic duties, it will not be to your disadvantage if he brings with him the experience and energy he displays in the conduct of a large and successful business of his own.

If my success in the Council during the past five years has in the main met with your approval, I shall esteem it an honour to have your further approval and support in the coming contest.

Yours respectfully

G. A. GILLESPIE.

ARMS SMUGGLED IN

U. S. Sympathizers Pouring Rifles Into Mexico

BRIG.-GEN. BLISS REPORTS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—How the American border patrol has found it well nigh impossible to enforce the embargo against the shipment of arms and ammunition into Mexico, was described in a report from Brig. General Bliss, commanding the forces on the border, made public yesterday at the War Department. Practically the entire population along the international line, the report said, is in sympathy with the Mexican rebels, and as the result, large quantities of war munitions have been smuggled across in spite of the unceasing vigilance of the troopers.

Gen. Bliss complained of the vagueness of the law declaring instructions to the army are so general that too much of a task was imposed upon the troopers and junior officers. He recommended that two of the best equipped officers of the Government's legal force be sent down to travel along the line and decide question of doubtful rights and powers.

In this connection the general referred to instructions sent to him last June to hold troops in readiness to go to the aid of the threatened American consular representative at Piedras Negras. For several days the general pointed out the question of possible peace or war rested entirely upon the discretion of this consul, as it was a foregone conclusion that the American soldiers would have had to fight their way into Mexico if the necessity of protecting the consulate had arisen.

The necessity of keeping a considerable proportion of the U. S. army on the border for an indefinite period was forecast in the report. Gen. Bliss, who has been on the line ever since the beginning of the Madero revolution, called attention to the fulfilment of his prediction that the breaking up of Orozco's army last year into small bands would not restore peace, because the large lawless element among the troops would not consent to return to ordinary vocations.

Mayor Handles Policemen.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Dec. 2.—Mayor Walker established headquarters at the police station early yesterday and said he would take personal charge of the police department until the strike of the union teamsters and chauffeurs, which began at midnight Sunday night, is settled. He said he had 100 mounted policemen and 400 patrolmen and expected to be able to handle the situation without assistance from the state.

LAVELL STILL MISSING.

Professor's Disappearance More a Mystery Than Ever.

HAMILTON, Dec. 2.—In spite of the country-wide search that is now in progress, no tidings have been received of the missing man, Professor Lavell. His wife received word yesterday that he had passed through Ingersoll on Nov. 15, but she says he was in Columbus, Ohio, then. Her belief is that he is still living, and that he boarded a train near the spot where he left his coat and a note in a rowboat. She thinks that he went to Niagara Falls or Buffalo. The fact that he left a note, she thinks, indicates that he felt he was about to be overcome by some mental weakness.

This city is placarded everywhere with offers of $500 reward for his discovery alive or dead.

Professor C. F. Lavell is a son of the late Dr. Lavell, for many years warden of Kingston Penitentiary. The missing man was professor of history and education in the State University of Ohio, at Columbus. He was five feet 10 1-2 inches in height, weighed 153 pounds, with blue eyes, brown hair, with a touch of gray at the temples and a moustache. He was 41 years of age.

BRANDON MAN WINS

J. D. McGregor Takes Prize After Prize at Chicago

CATTLE CONTESTS ARE KEEN

CHICAGO, Dec. 2.—Yesterday at the International Live Stock Show in the cattle classes, the time was taken up with the judging of fat steers. Entries in these classes were very much in excess of any previous exhibition and competition was keen, twenty and even twenty-five in a class was not uncommon.

J. D. McGregor, Brandon, took one first, one fourth and two championships. The first-class in which he showed was that of steers, calved between Jan. 1 and Sept. 1, 1911. There were 22 in the class and he got fourth with Glencarnock Advance. The next class was that of calves dropped between Sept. 1, 1911, and Jan. 1, 1912. In this class he got first, with Glencarnock Victor II., against 19 competitors.

The next struggle was for the championship of all grades and cross breeds by ages. It was a fateful moment, as it is always felt that the grand champion of grades and cross breeds has an excellent chance for the championship of the show. Finally the award was made to the Manitoba steer Glencarnock Victor II.

Next came the classes of three, made up of one two-year-old, one yearling and one calf. The McGregor herd was made up of Glencarnock Advance, Glencarnock Victor II. and Glencarnock Boy, the last named a June calf. With this herd J. D. McGregor pulled off another prize of $75. This win meant that he had the three best cross bred or grade steers in the show. There was four prizes in the class and every one of them was taken by a Black herd.

"Clay Belt" Survey Now Being Made Says Minister of Lands.

TORONTO, Dec. 2.—In reply to the demand made by Prof. B. E. Fernow of Toronto University Forestry Faculty for an expert analysis of soils in the "clay belt" of Northern Ontario.

Hon. Mr. Hearst stated yesterday that every surveyor sent out by the Department was given instructions to prepare exact reports of the soil qualifications he discovered. No district was open unless it was known that it would produce good crops.

It was declared also that the average settler was more inclined to look at the actual results of the land, and to judge the soil quality from the growth upon it than to depend entirely on a scientific analysis. To carry out a scheme similar to that proposed by the dean would be almost impracticable.

Some of the references of Dean Fernow to the class of people living on poor farms are said by the Department to be out of accord with actual conditions.

WILL END SATURDAY.

Counsel In Rates Case Will Now Present Argument.

OTTAWA, Dec. 2.—All the evidence in the western freight rates case has been put in. At four o'clock yesterday afternoon Chief Commissioner H. L. Drayton, K.C., declared the case formally closed and called on the respective counsel to proceed with the argument, but on the plea of James Bicknell, counsel for the Dominion Government, and of F. H. Chrysler, K.C., counsel for the C.P.R., the board agreed to an adjournment until Thursday morning. From the time the arguments begin until they are definitely closed the board will hold evening sessions if necessary as it is planned to call a halt on the arguments not later than Saturday.

Mr. Bicknell will be the first to address the board. He will be followed by counsel for the western provinces in the case and Isaac Pitblado, K.C., for the Winnipeg Board of Trade. The legal representatives for the railways will follow.

Canadian Nominee Opposed

LONDON, Dec. 2.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Charles N. Armstrong, Canadian railway promoter and contractor, who is the official Conservative candidate for Colne Valley, is threatened with opposition from Capt. Bagnall, the previous Conservative candidate, who alleges that he has been slighted by the party. Armstrong, although a Conservative, supports the policy of home rule all round, but it is not understood that this attitude has caused the present difficulty. The situation is additionally interesting as Charles Leach, the present Liberal member, has decided to retire.

West Lorne May Vote Again.

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 2.—To allow the issue of liquor licenses a bylaw to repeal local option may be submitted in West Lorne at the municipal elections. Local option does not so far as the courts have decided, prevail in the village, but on account of the narrow margin which determined the ruling of the courts, the Ontario License Department refused to allow the commissioners to grant a license. A petition has received the village council to submit the measure again.

ANOTHER REVOLT BEGINS.

South Chinese Rebels Are Intriguing With Outlaws.

PEKIN, Dec. 2.—Official telegrams received at the capital yesterday from various provinces in South China, report that the Chinese rebels are intriguing with numerous outlaw bands to form the nucleus of another rebellion against the Government of President Yuan Shi Kai. Pekin officials believe that the rebel party will not be able to organize or finance another revolution, but in other quarters fear is expressed that it may succeed in perpetuating the lawless conditions which now prevail in almost every province of the republic.

The Chinese Government is developing an extensive secret service and summary executions without a semblance of a court trial frequently occur.

"That Affair Next Door"

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

"O ma'am, how smart you are, ma'am! I wish I had some smartness in me. But my husband had all that. He was a man—O what's that?"

"Nothing but the tea-caddy; I knocked it over with my elbow."

"How I do jump at everything! I'm afraid of my own shadow ever since I saw that poor thing lying under that heap of crockery."

"I don't wonder.'

"She must have pulled those things over herself, dont you think so, ma'am? For one went in there to murder her. But how came she to have those clothes on. She was dressed quite different when I lit her in. I say it's all a muddle ma'am, and it will be a smart man as can explain it."

"Or a smart woman,' I thought.

"Did I do wrong, ma'am? That's what plagues me. She begged so hard to come in, I didn't know how to shut the door on her. Besides her name was Van Burnam or she told me so."

Here was a coil. Subduing my surprise, I remarked:

"If she asked you to let her in, I do not see how you could refuse her. Was it in the morning or late in the afternoon she came?"

"Don't you know, ma'am? I thought you knew all about it from the way you talked.'

"Had I been indiscreet?. Could she not bear questioning? Eyeing her with some severity, I declared in a less familiar tone than any I had yet used:

"Nobody knows more about it than I do, but I do not know just the hour at which this lady came to the house. But I do not ask you to tell me if you do not want to."

"O ma'am, she humbly remonstrated, "I am sure I am willing to tell you everything. It was in the afternoon while I was doing the front basement floor."

"And she came to the basement door?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"And asked to be let in?'

"Yes, ma'am."

"Young Mrs. Van Burnam?'

"Yes, ma'am."

"Dressed in a black and white plaid silk, and wearing a hat covered with flowers?"

"Yes, ma'am, or something like that. I know it was very bright and becoming."

"And why did she come to the basement door—a lady dressed like that?"

"Because she knew I couldn't open the front door; that I hadn't the key. O she talked beautiful ma'am, and wasn't proud with me a bit. She made me let her stay in the house, and when I said it would be dark after a while and that I hadn't done nothing to the rooms upstairs, she laughed and said she didn't care, that she wasn't afraid of the dark, and had just as lieve as not stay in the big house alone all night, for she had a book—Did you say anything, ma'am?"

"No, no, go on, she had a book.'

"Which she could read till she got sleepy. I never thought anything would happen to her.'

"Of course not, why should you? And so you let her into the house, and left her there when you went out of it? Well, I don't wonder you were shocked to see her lying dead on the floor next morning."

"Awful, ma'am. I was afraid they would blame me for what had happened. But I didn't do nothing to make her die. I only let her stay in the house. Do you think they will do anything to me if they know it?"

"No." said I, trying to understand this womans ignorant fears, "they dont punish such things. More's the pity!"—this in confidence to myself. "How could you know that a piece of furniture would fall on her before morning. Did you lock her in when you left the house?"

"Yes, ma'am. She told me to."

Then she was a prisoner.

Confounded by the mystery of the whole affair, I sat so still the woman looked up in wonder, and I saw I had better continue my question.

"What reason did she give for wanting to stay in the house all night?"

"What reason, ma'am? I don't know. Something about her having to be there when Mr. Van Burnam came home. I didnt make it out, and I didn't try to. I was too busy wondering what she would have to eat."

"And what did she have?"

"I don't know, ma'am. She said she had something, but I didn't see it.'

"Perhaps you were blinded by the money she gave you. She gave you some, of course?"

"O, not much, ma'am, not much. And I wouldn't have taken a cent if it had not seemed to make her so happy to give it. The pretty, pretty thing! A real lady, whatever they say about her!"

"And happy? You said she was happy, cheerful-looking and pretty."

"O yes, ma'am; she didn't know what was going to happen. I even heard her sing after she went upstairs."

I wished that my ears had been attending to their duty that day, and I might have heard her sing, too. But the walls between my house and that of the Van Burnams are very thick, as I have had occasion to observe more than once.

"Then she went upstairs before you left?"

"To be sure, ma'am; what would she do in the kitchen?"

"And you didn't see her again?'

"No, ma'am; but I heard her walking around."

"In the parlours, you mean?"

"Yes, ma'am, in the parlours.'

"You did not go up yourself?'

"No, ma'am, I had enough to do below."

"Didnt you go up when you went away?"

"No, ma'am; I didn't like to."

"When did you go?"

"At five, ma'am; I always go at five."

"How did you know it was five?"

"The kitchen clock told me; I wound it, ma'am and set it when the whistles blew at twelve."

"Was that the only clock you wound?"

"Only clock? Do you think I'd be going around the house winding any others?"

Her face showed such surprise, and her eyes met mine so frankly, that I was convinced she spoke the truth. Gratified—I don't know why,—I bestowed upon her my first smile, which seemed to affect her, for her face softened, and she looked at me quite eagrly for a minute before she said:

"You don't think so very bad of me, do you, ma'am?"

But I had been struck by a thought which made me for the moment oblivious to her question. She had wound the clock in the kitchen for her own uses, and why may not the lady above have wound the one in the parlour for her's? Filled with this startling idea, I remarked:

"The young lady wore a watch, of course?"

But the suggestion passed unheeded. Mrs. Boppert was as much absorbed in her own thoughts as I was.

"Did young Mrs. Van Burnam wear a watch?" I persisted.

Mrs. Boppert's face remained a blank.

Provoked at her impassibility, I shook her with an angry hand, imperatively demanding:

"What are you thinking of? Why don't you answer my questions?"

She was herself again in an instant.

"O ma'am, I beg your pardon. I was wondering if you meant the parlour clock."

I calmed myself, looked severe to hide my more than eager interest, and sharply cried:

"Of course I meant the parlour clock. Did you wind it?"

"O no, no, no, I would as soon think of touching gold or silver. But the young lady did, I'm sure, ma'am, for I heard it strike when she was setting of it."

Ah! If my nature had not been an undemonstrative one, and if I had not been bred to a strong sense of social distinctions, I might have betrayed my satisfaction at this announcement in a way that would have made this homely German woman start. As it was I sat stock-still and even made her think I had not heard her. Venturing to rouse me a bit, she spoke again after a minute's silence.

"She might have been lonely, you know, ma'am; and the ticking of a clock is such company."

"Yes," I answered with more than my accustomed vivacity, for she jumped as if I had struck her. "You have hit the nail on the head, Mrs. Boppert, and are a much smarter woman than I thought. But when did she wind the clock?"

"At five o'clock, ma'am; just before I left the house."

"O, and did she know you were going?"

"I think so, ma'am, for I called up, just before I put on my bonnet, that it was five o'clock and that I was going."

"O, you did. And did she answer back?"

"Yes, ma'am. I heard her step in the hall and then her voice. She asked if I was sure it was five, and I told her yes, because I had set the kitchen clock at twelve. She didn't say any more, but just after that I heard the parlour clock begin to strike."

O, thought I, what cannot be got out of the most stupid and unwilling witness by patience and a judicious use of questions. To know that this clock was started after five o'clock, that is, after the hour at which the hands pointed when it fell, and that it was set correctly in starting, and so would give indisputable testimony of the hour when the shelves fell, were points of the greatest importance. I was so pleased I gave the woman another smile.

Instantly she cried:

"But you won't say anything about it, will you, ma'am? They might make me pay for all the things that were broke.

My smile this time was not one of encouragement simply. But it might have been anything for all effect it had on her. The intricacies of the affair had disturbed her poor brain again, and all her powers of mind were given up to lament.

"O," she bemoaned, "I wish I had never seen her! My head wouldn't ache so with the muddle of it. Why, ma'am her husband said he came to the house at midnight with his wife! How could he when she was inside of it all the time. But then perhaps he said that, just as you did, to save me blame. But why should a gentleman like him do that?"

"It isn't worth while for you to bother your head about it," I expostulated. "It is enough that my head aches over it."

"I dont suppose she understood me or tried to. Her wits had been sorely tried and my rather severe questioning had not tended to clear them At all events she went on in another moment as if I had not spoken:

"But what became of her pretty dress? I was never so astonished in my life as when I saw that dark skirt on her."

"She might have left her fine gown upstairs," I ventured not wishing to go into the niceties of evidence with this woman.

"So she might, so she might, and that may have been her petticoat we saw." But in another moment she saw the impossibility of this, for she added: "But I saw her petticoat, and it was a brown silk one. She showed it when she lifted her skirt to get at her purse. I don't understand it, ma'am."

As her face by this time was almost purple, I thought it a mercy to close the interview; so I uttered some few words of a soothing and encouraging nature and then seeing that something more tangible was necessary to restore her to any propr condition of spirits, I took out my pocket-book and bestowed on her some of my loose silver.

Peps What are they?

Peps is the name bestowed upon a new scientific preparation put up into tabloid or pastille form, which provides an entirely new and effective treatment for coughs, colds and lung and throat troubles.

Did it never occur to you as peculiar that when you have a cough or a cold, or any chest trouble, you should apply medicine—not to your lungs, but to your stomach?

Look at it the other way round. Suppose you suffered from some stomach complaint—indigestion or ulceration. How strange you would think it if you were asked to take a medicine which had to be breathed in, and which went—not to your stomach, but to your lungs and breathing passages?

Peps—this newest remedy for coughs, colds, and lung troubles—go to the lungs and breathing-tubes, direct. Peps are really pine fumes, and certain highly beneficial medicinal extracts specially prepared by a new scientific process and then condensed into tabloid form. It is like making a breathable gas solid!

You put a "Pep" on your tongue and let it dissolve. As it does so, the healing essences it contains turn into vapor, and you BREATHE them direct to your lungs and air passages!

Just as the out-door treatment for consumption—the "breathing" treatment—is now admitted to be the only rational treatment, so the "Peps" treatment for colds and lung troubles is the only rational home treatment.

Peps cure catarrh, coughs, bronchitis, sore throat, tightness or aching across the chest, difficulty in breathing, night cough, hoarseness, asthma, laryngitis, smoker's throat, etc. Best for children, because free from opium, morphine, or any poison.

All druggists and stores sell Peps at 50c. a box or 3 for $1.25.

Cut out this article, write across it the name of this paper, and mail it to Peps Co., Toronto, or 53 Princess Street, Winnipeg, enclosing 1 cent stamp to pay for return postage. The Quickest, Simplest Cough Cure

Easily and Cheaply Made at Home. Saves You $2.

This recipe makes 16 ounces of cough syrup—enough to last a family a long time. You couldn't buy as much or as good cough syrup for $2.50.

Simple as it is, it gives almost instant relief and usually stops the most obstinate cough in 24 hours. This is partly due to the fact that it is slightly laxative, stimulates the appetite and has an excellent tonic effect. It is pleasant to take—children like it. An excellent remedy, too, for whooping cough, croup, sore lungs, asthma, throat troubles, etc.

Mix two cups of granulated sugar with one cup of warm water and stir for two minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a 16-ounce bottle, and add the Sugar Syrup. It keeps perfectly. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

Pinex is one of the oldest and best-known remedial agents for the throat membranes. Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, and is rich in guaiacol and all the other natural healing elements. Other preparations will not work in this formula.

The prompt results from this recipe have endeared it to thousands of housewives in the United States and Canada, which explains why the plan has been imitated often, but never successfully.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

Disheartening Effect of Piles

It is not only the itching and stinging of piles that is to be dreaded but also the depressing and debilitating effect on the whole system. The victim of pile cannot do efficient work. There is an uneasiness and discomfort by day and at night the distress from the itching prevents sleep and rest, and undermines the general health.

From almost the first application of Dr. Chase's Ointment you get relief from the annoying itching and burning, and gradually the ulcers are healed up and the disease thoroughly cured. Do not make the mistake of discontinuing treatment as soon as relief is obtained. Dr. Chase's Ointment is a proved cure but it depends on you to apply it persistently until a cure is effected.

Even the most severe cases of long standing yield to the soothing, healing influence of Dr. Chase's Ointment. Surgical operations are no longer necessary(for, as a matter of fact, Dr. Chase's Ointment has cured cases that were not cured by operations. No' sufferer from piles can afford to delay the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Medical Specialists in England.

What makes a doctor a specialist? Can any physician or surgeon with money behind him take a house in Harley street or neighborhood and practice as a specialist? He can do so, but it by no means follows that he will be recognized as a specialist by the profession.

To win the professional status of specialist a man must hold or have held a professorship at a medical school or an appointment at a hospital in connection with the disease or group of diseases in which he professes to specialize.

Further, he must conform to certain rules of professional conduct. He must not take a less fee than 1 guinea—2 guineas is the rule in London, and some charge 3 or even more—for a consultation, save in extraordinary circumstances. He must not see a new patient except on the introduction of the patient's own medical man. If called to a case the patient's medical man must be present or the specialist will decline to see the sufferer.—London Tatler.

Public Health.

Diseases and epidemics used to be counted as "acts of God" in the old legal phrase. It has taken modern sanitary science to discover that the most of them result from acts of man and that a good portion of the rest may be controlled by the exercise of man's power over nature. The United States government has been a pioneer among the nations in demonstrating the power of modern sanitation to save life. It sent Waring to Havana. He made it a city of health and laid down his life in so doing. It took a fever smitten tropic wilderness, its noxious jungles steaming under a torrid sun, and the death rate of the Panama canal zone is today an example in the most salubrious regions of the world. The whole history of modern sanitation tends to drive home public responsibility for public health.—St. Louis Republic.

"This Life Which Seems So Fair."

This life which seems so fair,
Is like a bubble blown up in the air
By sporting children's breath,
Who chase it everywhere
And strive who most can motion it bequeath.
And though it sometimes seem of its own height
Like to an eye of gold to be fix'd there,
That only is because it is so light.

Because it erst was naught it turns to naught.

LONDON, Nov. 29.

ALTHOUGH everybody is supposed to be in town for the winter season, there is unusual activity in the way of parties going on in the country. The greatest event of this week, of course, has been the shooting party arranged by the King for Archduke Franz Ferdinand at Windsor Castle. The Archduke, accompanied by his consort, the Duchess of Hohenberg, and attended by the Grand Master of the Archduke's court, Baron von Rumerskerch, and Comtesse Baillet La Tour, arrived at Windsor on Monday, after passing several days in London for Christmas shopping. Unfortunately the weather has not been all that might be desired, but the rain did not stop such enthusiastic shots as the King and the Archduke.

They were out every day, and as the coverts had not been previously worked this season there was a good stock of game. The pheasants were plentiful and a host of beaters wearing white smocks with red facings worked the beats and got the pheasants on the wing. As it is known that King George is one of the best shots in the country, and the Archduke has a great reputation in his own country, there has been a lot of talk in some of the newspapers about a friendly duel in skill and marksmanship between the royal shots. Efforts have been made to find out who won, but King George and the Archduke always shot side by side, and anything in the nature of a competition is laughed at.

"Steady as a Statue."

One of the beaters would only commit himself to say "I never have seen better shooting. Misses were very rare." But who missed he didn't tell.

Another old gamekeeper who has been in the royal service for many years, without committing himself far, said:—"Unless the Archduke had been a living marvel he could not possibly have beaten the King. The King is as steady as a statue and hardly ever misses a difficult shot upon which he has placed his mind. The King can beat anybody I've ever seen shoot here."

To-day the Archduke and his party left for Welbeck Abbey to see the Duke and Duchess of Portland.

The King and Queen will go on Monday to Lambton Castle for a week's stay with Lord Durham and his sister, Lady Anne Lambton, who will act as chatelaine. This will be the first journey the sovereign ever made to Lambton Castle, though the late King when Prince of Wales was there for a few days' shooting.

The King and the other men of the party will be out every morning shooting and one day the Queen is to automobile over to Ravensworth Castle for luncheon with Lord and Lady Ravensworth and to inspect the castle grounds, which are the finest in the North of England.

Lady Craven's Party.

Lord and Lady Craven have had a large party at Combe Abbey for the first entertainment they have given since the death of Mr. Bradley Martin, Lady Craven's father. Among the party were Grand Duke Michael Mikhaylovitch and Countess Torby and Countess Zia Torby, Lady Meux, Miss Sybil Cadogan, Lady De Trafford and Miss Violet De Trafford.

Lord and Lady Granard, who are in residence at Castle Forbes, entertained a party, including Lady Aberdeen, this week, and also had a big party for a ball given by the Companions of St. Patrick, at which they acted as host and hostess.

The Duchess of Marlborough has been much in evidence with her loved works of charity. This week she was hostess assisting Lord Curzon when Queen Alexandra opened the Curzon hotel for women in memory of Lord Curzon's wife, in King's Cross road.

The Duchess, wearing a velvet neckband with diamonds and embroidered ecru tunic, with a dark dress, was at home on another afternoon at Sunderland House, where a large company listened with interest to what Dr. Saleeby had to say on the race and its degeneration from the imperial viewpoint. This was under the auspices of the National Council on Public Morals. She is giving another at home at Sunderland House on December 1 in aid of Dr. Barnardo's homes.

Fine Amateur Acting.

Sir Edward Naylor-Leyland and his brother and sons are becoming quite well known as amateur actors. They played in a remarkably well organized series of performances in North Wales this week for charitable purposes, playing "The Lyke of Killicrankie." Their company of amateurs included Miss Rosan Lloyd-Mostyn, daughter of Sir Savage and Lady Lloyd-Mostyn; Lady Huntingdon and her two daughters and Lady Kathleen and Lady Marion Hastings.

A delightful informal dinner party and ball took place at No. 24 Park lane, the residence of Lord and Lady Brassey, where a large gathering of young persons met Lady Idina Sackville, granddaughter of Lord Brassey, and her fiancé, Mr. David Wallace, for the last time before their marriage on December 28. Aged Lord Brassey looked supremely happy presiding at the dinner table surrounded by his numerous grandchildren and their friends.

KING GEORGE BRINGING DOWN A HIGH BIRD. ARCHDUKE FRANZ FERDINAND of AUSTRIA.

He also passed some time afterward watching the dancing in the famous Indian room. Lady Idina Sackville is stopping at No. 24 Park lane, as the wedding is to take place from her grandfather's house. Mr. David Wallace, who is in the Second Lifeguards, is a son of the late Mr. John Wallace, of Glassingall, Dunblane. He is a very wealthy young man, having inherited under the will of his granduncle, the late Mr. William Weir, $10,000,000, three fine estates in Ayrshire and 7,000 shares in the prosperous firm of ironmasters.

Royalty Backs the Tango.

While the Kaiser is determined to prevent the spread of the tango in German society, royalty is patronizing the dance here. Princess Louise, Duchess of Argyll, is to preside at Mrs. Robert Fleming's house on December 2 and open a bazaar for the Industrial Law Committee at which there is to be a tango competition. Among those to contest for prizes will be Lady Portarlington, Lady Drogheda, Miss Irene Lawley, Miss Muriel Wilson, Lady Diana Manners, Mrs. Walter Reubens and Mrs. Claude Grahame-White.

The London salon of Argentine and Brazilian dancing, of which the principals are the famous tango dancers, Señor Maspoli and Miss Clayton, had no sooner opened than it became a resort for society, and many well known women members of the Lotus Club already have booked lessons. The Lotus Club, which looks as if it is proving a great social success, is not an ordinary night club, but is open late for suppers, with a cuisine under the care of Gustave, well known as a maître d'hôtel.

A Gorgeous Scheme.

Some gorgeous dresses will be seen in the processions of the Arabian Nights ball at Covent Garden Opera House on December 11. The scene at midnight will be very pretty and it is arranged that there shall be an Eastern dream scene representing a caliph who, after gazing at his jewels, falls asleep and dreams of a wonderful pearl which he wants to possess. Awaking, he finds he has nothing like it in his jewel case and calls for the precious stones of the earth. The ladies taking part in the procession will represent various jewels, their costumes glittering with emeralds, diamonds, sapphires and rubies, all the famous precious stones. From these will be selected the coveted jewel for the happy caliph.

The American Ambassador had another busy week socially, every night being occupied. Among the events Mr. Page was chief guest at the dinner of the Master Benchers of the Middle Temple, and also he attended the reception of the Japanese Society on Thursday. The Ambassador and Mrs. Page gave a dinner to the American delegates to the Conference on Safety of Life at Sea. Now they are going to pass a Sunday of rest with Mr. Sydney Buxton, President of the Board of Trade.

Americans in London.

Americans passing through London now are very few. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Leiter are stopping at Claridge's Hotel a while longer, while Mr. Leiter's steam yacht, the Niagara, is preparing at Southampton for a cruise.

Mrs. Ballard Smith and her daughter have arrived from Paris and are stopping in London until Christmas.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Swift, of the Court; Miss Elizabeth Wild, of New York, and Mr. C. T. Ripley, of Chicago, who came over together on board the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, are stopping for some time at the Carlton Hotel. Mr. John Howard McFadden expects to leave for America on December 6.

Dr. F. D. McCall, of Atlantic City, and Mr. J. H. Clapp, of Washington, who have been in the country, have arrived at the Carlton Hotel.

Mr. James Schofield, of New York, has returned from Ireland.

Mr. Percival Campbell, of New York, has returned to the Piccadilly Hotel from Paris.

Mr. W. A. Prendergast and Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Tilitty, of New York, accompanied by Mr. P. A. Valentine and Miss Elise de Carret, have arrived from America and are stopping for a time at the Ritz Hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. Burns Henry, from Detroit, are making a stay at the Piccadilly Hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Meyer, of New York, who have been on the Continent for three weeks, have returned to the Piccadilly Hotel.

Mr. R. F. Rendel has returned from the country.

Lord Sandwich, at 74, a Healer

Aged Peer Asserts That He Can Cure Any One by Suggestion, Not Physic.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH.]
LONDON, Nov. 29.

LORD SANDWICH, who is seventy-four years old and as active as any man half his age, says he can heal the ill without any physic; and he has been telling the promoters of the medico-psychological clinic that is soon to be established in London how he does it. How Lord Sandwich made a convalescent home for ill and wounded soldiers during the South African War is an old story.

"I had about sixty there in all," he said, "and during the whole time that I was at home I never had a physician or nurse in the house. I admit that I was greatly surprised at the success that I had in attending upon them, because I was their nurse as well as physician.

"The first intimation that I had of this power of healing that I possess was after learning of a friend being in a hospital in London who had undergone a very serious operation. A mutual friend came and told me that he had left him in such terrible agony that he could not remain in the room. I immediately went to see the man at the hospital. He said, 'The agony is beginning again.' 'No, it is not,' I assured him; 'you are never going to have it again.' And he never did have it again.

"Since that time," said Lord Sandwich, "there has been no limit to my experience in healing serious maladies of both mind and body. I have attended people in palaces, cottages, hospitals and in their homes, people of every degree in the social scale. I also attended a Hindu monk in a monastery, a Mohammedan in a mosque and a Hindu princess who was brought six hundred miles to see me.

"I think it more than probable that very many possess the power, but have not had an opportunity of exercising it. I was told the other day that I was living fifty years before my time. That may be. I feel convinced that this knowledge will spread vastly."

The clinic with the long name is going to treat such things as nervous maladies, insomnia and drug habits, using all forms of psychic treatment such as persuasion, re-education, psychoanalysis and hypnotism.

"Billy Owlet" Is Rival of "Teddy"

Mrs. L. M. Sanderson Offers New Candidate for Popularity in English Nurseries.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH.]
LONDON, Nov. 29.

The "Teddy Bear," that wonderful toy which for many years has reigned supreme in the nurseries of the world, is threatened with a rival at last. "Billy Owlet" is the newcomer's name, and he has swaggered into the toyshops of England bearing the hallmark of royal approval, for Queen Mary has already bought him.

The "author" of "Billy" is Mrs. L. M. Sanderson, the young widow of a Dorsetshire clergyman who, with her little daughter, lives at West Moors, Wimborne.

"My idea," said Mrs. Sanderson, "came to me when stopping with some friends near Oxford. The owls used to flit past my window at night and as I watched them the thought came into my mind that a toy likely to become popular could be invented. I write children's stories and I have penned a narrative in which 'Billy' is invented.

"Of course I feel very gratified that the Queen has made a special purchase of one."

"Billy" is a dapper little chap, dressed in a pale blue swallow tailed coat, red waistcoat, white trousers and a green tie. There is a cocksure look in his wise eyes and a devil-may-care aggressiveness in his yellow hooked nose, the most prominent feature of his face, and, generally speaking, he has the appearance of a man who means to "get there" somehow.

Beside the jovial "Billy," poor "Teddy" now wears a very mournful look, but experts whose business it is to anticipate the taste of children are not sure about "Billy" ousting his American predecessor, though they have evidently been impressed by his assertive manner and have ordered him in large numbers.

"Of course," said one of the managers at Messrs. Gamage's, the largest toy emporium in London, "we shall have to wait for the children's verdict whether 'Billy will supplant 'Teddy.' We shall know before Christmas."

Autograph Sale, Many by Burns

Fine Collection of Interesting Letters and Manuscripts Is Ready at Sotheby's.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH.]
LONDON, Nov. 29.

A VARIED and interesting series of autograph letters and historical documents from a number of private sources is to be held at Sotheby's on November 27 and following day.

The most extensive "lot" comprises a very important collection of seventy-three letters, manuscripts, drawings and engravings of and relating to Robert Burns, in a fine quarto volume. The contents include a series of thirteen accounts of purchases made by the poet, seven of which are indorsed by him, and among them are bills for clothes, spirits, tea, boots, and so forth, ranging in date from 1788 to 1792, and all, it is believed, unpublished.

There is a long letter of ten pages from the Earl of Buchan, in which he repudiates the charge against him that he was the cause of Burns writing in the Scottish dialect—"the uncouth vulgar dialect of Scotland." Two letters are from Sir Walter Scott relating to Burns and his monument in Edinburgh, and a series of thirteen letters from Robert Wallace, who claimed descent from the national hero, in regard to Burns' "Scots wha hae wi' Wallace bled."

Another fine series consists of twenty-three letters of Alexander Pope, being the original correspondence with his publisher, Charles Bathurst, and others. These letters, several of which are unpublished, contain references to the "Dunciad," the "Rape of the Lock," Homer, the Miscellanies and other publications, together with the original agreement, signed by the publisher, John Knapton, assigning to Andrew Miller one moiety in the works of Pope.

Another series of letters consists of an important collection of autograph letters and manuscripts by famous musicians, including the original MS. of Sir Edward Elgar's "Cockaigne" on 101 pages folio; and yet another of letters and manuscripts of famous artists, chiefly English, but including one of the finest existing letters of J. Francois Millet.

There is a long letter from George Washington, dated February 5, 1789, to Samuel Powell, entirely unpublished, and written the day after his election as first President of the United States. A series of fine letters are addressed by Mary Shelley to Leigh Hunt and his wife, all relating to Shelley. There is also the original indenture by Queen Elizabeth and sealed with the Great Seal of England, completing the sale of his Lordship, &c., of Denbigh, then in the Earl of Leicester's possession, to Queen Elizabeth, December 2, 1585.

Raeburn, Reynolds, Gainsborough and Others in Portrait Exhibit

Notable Collection of Works by British Artists on Exhibition in London—Some of the Interesting Art Events in Britain's Capital.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH.]
LONDON, Nov. 29.

At the exhibition of "Portraits by British Artists" at the French Gallery, Pall Mall, Sir Henry Raeburn is fully represented, and Sir Joshua Reynolds, Gainsborough, Romney, Hoppner, Sir Thomas Lawrence and Sir John Watson Gordon bear him company with notable examples of their art.

There are three life size equestrian portraits—"Marquis of Granby," painted in 1766, by Reynolds; "Peter Burrell, First Lord Gwydyr," by Gainsborough, and "Lord Elcho and His Brother," by Raeburn. Of the three the Gainsborough is perhaps the most attractive. By Gainsborough also are capital portraits of "Mrs. Hallam," from the collection of Colonel Lennard; "John Denison," father of John Evelyn Denison, Viscount Ossington, Speaker of the House of Commons, 1857-1872, "Squire Bennet of Cadbury Court, Somerset," and "Mrs. Simpson" (afterward Mrs. Parry).

Besides the imposing and cleverly executed version of "The Marquis of Granby," Reynolds is credited with an admirable "Edward Woodcock," which is dated 1769; a charming "Ariadne," from the Ashburton collection, the sketch for the "Madonna Col Bambino" at Petworth, and "Richard Burke," only son of Edmund Burke.

Sixteen portraits stand in the name of Raeburn, all not marked by the distinction that gives to him a place among the greatest painters. The portrait of "Lord Elcho and His Brother, Mr. Charteris," however, ranks with the noblest achievements of its kind. The work dates about 1815, when he was producing splendid portraits like that of his wife, now the property of Sir Ernest Cassel. The finest of the others are "Mrs. Walter Learmonth," charming in color and expression; the "John Livingston Campbell," the excellent "Sir Ewan Cameron, Bart., of Fassifern," and the beautiful "Mrs. Archibald Fletcher." The original of the handsome portrait of "Mrs. Skene," of Rubislaw, was a sweetheart of Sir Walter Scott. The "Mrs. Alexander Young" is a bright image. The latest portrait, that of "The Right Hon. Thomas Francis Kennedy," circa 1822, can be compared with the delightful early "Mrs. Somerville (The Farmer's Wife)," which predates Itaburn's visit to Rome in 1785.

Romney and Hoppner reach an unusual height in the portraits of "John Redhead" and "Lady Langham." The Romney is extremely simple in style, and has a transparent purity that affords immense pleasure to the eye. Most alluring is the Hoppner, an exquisite work, more personal in vision and feeling than perhaps any other portrait by the same artist.

* * *

A fair survey of contemporary British art is shown at the Goupil Gallery Salon, the eighth of the series. The exhibition is catholic in its range, including some pictures that are more remarkable for promise or intention than fulfillment. Among the four hundred pictures and drawings there is hardly one that could have been excluded without the loss of some interesting light upon the artistic endeavor of the moment.

Special features are a series of fifteen drawings of the nude by Mr. F. Derwent Wood, A. R. A., and fifteen oil studies by Mr. Augustus John. For the rest the exhibition is one of individual pictures, inclining to no particular school or tendency, but looking toward the future rather than the past.

The water colors, on the whole, provide the livelier interest. The remarkable drawings of the nude model by Mr. Derwent are done in pen line with an arbitrary wash of color, blue, yellow or brown, to give solidity and indicate the fall of light.

Other excellent drawings in the same room are "Venice in Fête" and "Venice in Rain," in pen and sepia, by Mr. C. Marsoco Pearce, the difference between them proving his capacity to capture weather by simple means; and "The Legend of the Nativity," a decorative study of great originality, by Mr. John Copley.

The three most important oil paintings in the large ground floor gallery are "Lismore," a sombre and forcible study of mountain and loch by Mr. D. Y. Cameron, A. R. A.; "On the Rocks," a charming study of a fair haired, blue eyed little girl in a fleecy white coat trimmed with blue and a black cap with blue flower, by Mr. William Orpen, A. R. A., and "The Black Column," an extremely successful exercise in the magic of space and proportion and balance of tone, by Mr. James Pryde.

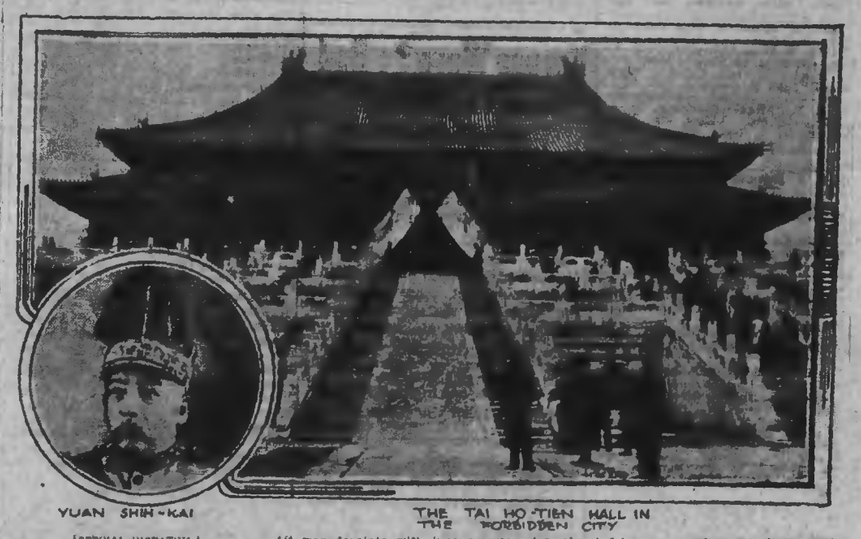
Henry—Yessum. It's a kid wot comes to school wid a smile on his face.

Dragons Shake with Horror at the Scenes of President Yuan's Inauguration



YUAN SHIH-KAI. THE TAI HO-TIEN HALL IN THE FORBIDDEN CITY

[SPECIAL DISPATCH.]
PEKING, November 29.

IN the mind of the imaginative spectator the lithe and graceful dragons carved on the stately marble balustrading and stairways in the mysterious Forbidden City squirmed painfully when Yuan Shih-kai, the elect of the people, was inaugurated President of the Republic of China amid a human setting grotesquely unfamiliar and sartorially repugnant to any self-respecting dragon carved in the picturesque days of the semi-barbaric Tartars or the more artistic Mings.

The Forbidden City, with its imposing courts, its massive carved marble settings, its stately and artistic roofs, its impressive silence and majestic vistas, was designed and built by men garbed in flowing silken robes embroidered with gold, and of striking splendor for the use of men just as impressively begowned. It was not destined by its makers for the sombre, uninspiring counterfeit of a frock coat and silk hat into which the Chinese have so foolishly and unnecessarily plunged themselves in their wild search for a veneer of modernism as interpreted by the foreigner in his clothes.

But this is a republic—and republicanism scoffs at the beplastered, peacock feathered mandarin, the man of the old time whose beads and silks and beautiful brocades of soft or strident hue delighted the heart of the artist in search of the bizarre or stirred even the casual Citizen of the outside world with a deep sense of mystery generated by what was described as the barbarity of the collective Chinese costume.

Tailor an Important Figure.

The Forbidden City of Pekin was built for rampant color. On inauguration day it was desolate with incongruous solemnity of cloth. The depression was accentuated by rain. The only touch of native color was lent by the appearance of three Buddhist bonzes in their bright yellow robes. Not a Chinese appeared garbed as for the court of a few years ago. All were in foreign styled uniform, evening dress or frock clothes. The uniforms of the Presidential Guard were a bright blue, with white plumed caps, which, combined with the glittering gold and colored uniforms of the members of the foreign diplomatic corps, strove against the black dressed hundreds to infuse brightness into the scene. The task was almost forlorn. The attention of the visitor was riveted by the marvellous efforts of the Chinese tailor and hatter to copy the foreign dress. Stovepipe hats of all conceivable shapes and of every sort of black material except furry silk appeared. Most sat well back upon the ears of the wearers; some cocked rakishly on the eyebrow. Many, too small for the heads they sat upon, recklessly defied all laws of gravity and wind as they perched upright or wabbled, their wearers assisting in the brave effort to sustain perpendicularity by walking like conjurers to sustain the balance.

There Were Collars—and Collars.

Clothes were a joy for the caricaturist. Frock coats of ordinary shiny black alpaca lining, of silk, of anything but the orthodox material, large of chest and long of skirt, enshrouded men sizes too large or sizes too small, and dress suits of similar style with tails touching heels or indecorously docked paraded cheek by jowl with the product of best Western tailors, those sporting them being devoid of any sense of the unfitness of the things, but ravishing by glad in a sense of superiority over the thousands of gowned spectators of their own kind through whom they passed triumphantly into the palace, and pressing themselves proudly in the presence of the rest of the select within the exclusive walls.

Collars and ties proved a pons asinorum to most. In many cases the adoption of the dress of the "outer barbarian" had not before been essayed. Old time mandarins were seen without a collar to give finish to their alpaca frock coats. Some wore calico cut to the shape of a collar, some studded starched collars above a ready made tie which was fastened tightly round the neck. Others wore collars thumbed to absolute dirtiness in the effort to get the stud through wrong side up. One man wore no collar at all and made up for the deficiency by pinning a small tie to his neckband with an ordinary pin. All this to conform to the order that ceremonial dress must be in accordance with that which is de rigueur in foreign lands.

He mounted the throne of the majestic Tai Ho-tien Hall, set upon a beautifully carved marble pallisaded terrace in the centre of the Forbidden City, sturdily convinced that the incongruously garbed crowd about him savored of democratic ideals and thoroughgoing republicanism. Clad as in the days of old, the effect would not have been the same.

The President stood upon the selfsame throne dais that many an emperor has occupied before him. He gazed below on spectators penned in different groups. On one hand were the uniformed foreign Ministers and their staffs. Near by were the sombre clad members of China's Parliament, alongside of them representatives of the military, and close by the enclosure for foreigners in the employ of the Chinese government. The foreign correspondents occupied a different spot, and provision was made elsewhere for other guests.

A BIT OF HUMAN NATURE.

How a "Heart Throb Specialist" Got Her First Job.

In the Woman's Home Companion appears a confession of a "heart throb specialist"—a newspaper woman who after many failures made a success in New York. Following is her own story of her first success:

"I had dropped into a criminal court room principally to escape the heat of the street. A young girl was being tried for attempted suicide. Perhaps because my own failure looked so dark I could read real drama between the faltering lines of her testimony.

"Here was an old story to the reporters. I knew they would turn in brief items, bare facts. I talked about the girl with the probation officer assigned to the case, with the girl, with her employers, and I secured photographs, including one of the corner where she tried to end it all, a cubbyhole much like my own. Then I wrote as if her story were mine.

"With the power born of desperation I forced my way into the presence of a Sunday editor who had spoken a few kind words to me. I begged him to read my story while the girl's case was still in the public eye.

"For a wonder he did read it while I sat beside him. When he finished he touched several buttons, and men fairly tumbled into the room.

"After giving them orders he seemed to recall my existence. He turned and stared at me over his glasses.

"'Let's see. You've been in here before, haven't you?'

"'Yes. I brought you a letter from Mr. Blank of the —— News.'

"'Humph! A story like that is worth thirty letters of introduction. Confounded nuisance letters are. Don't believe in 'em. Sold much stuff?'

"'Nothing unless you have bought that story.'

"His eyes twinkled.

"'Oh, I've bought it all right. I forgot to mention we pay $50 for a story like that with the pictures. I suppose that is all right?'

"All right?

"I closed my eyes. I saw a clean hall room, with a real window ledge over which I could look out upon a quiet city garden. I saw a telegraph operator clicking off a message to an anxious mother. And I tasted beefsteak—thick, juicy, rare!

"When I opened my eyes once more the Sunday editor was at the door. He flung his order over his shoulder:

"'Wait till I come back.'

"In a few minutes he was seated beside me again, and I could hardly believe my ears. He was offering me a position on the staff!"

"Not at Home."

Toward the latter part of Dante Gabriel Rossetti's life he rarely left his house and garden, and preferred to see his friends and acquaintances by appointment. Woe betide the too intrusive stranger. It is said that one day an enterprising man called, duly armed with a letter of introduction, and the servant was nearly yielding to the impulsive stranger when the painter of "Dante's Dream" leaned over the bannister and said in a firm, mellifluous voice, "Tell the gentleman that I am not at home."

Nerves Were So Bad

THOUGHT SHE WOULD GO OUT OF HER MIND.

Diseases of the nervous system are very common. All the organs of the body may be sound while the nerve centres may be affected.

Many women become run down and worn out by household cares and duties never ending, and sooner or later find themselves with the nerves shattered, and the heart action weakened.

On the first sign of any weakness of either the heart or nerves, flagging energy, or physical breakdown, do not wait until your case becomes hopeless.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will at once quieten the nerves, strengthen the heart and build up the entire system.

Mrs. Archie Goodine, Tilley, N.B., writes:—"When I was troubled with my heart two years ago, I was very bad. My nerves were so unstrung that sometimes I would almost go out of my mind. I doctored myself with everything I could get, until at last I got four boxes of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and they have cured me. I cannot speak too highly of this wonderful remedy, and will recommend it to all sufferers."

HOW TO TAKE GOOD CARE OF YOUR HAIR

Nothing spoils your good looks so much as homely hair—stringy, dull-colored, harsh. Nothing adds to good looks so much as beautiful hair—soft, silky, wavy and glossy. No matter how beautiful your hair is now, you can improve its good looks by using Harmony Hair Beautifier. If your hair is homely and ugly now, Harmony Hair Beautifier will make it softer, silkier, glossier, more beautiful in every way. It also makes it easier to put up and helps it to "stay put." Its rich rose odor hides the unpleasant, oily smell of the hair. Harmony Hair Beautifier is rightly named; it beautifies the hair.

Very easy to apply—simply sprinkle a little on your hair each time before brushing it. It contains no oil, and will not change the color of the hair, nor darken gray hair.

To keep your hair and scalp dandruff-free and clean, use Harmony Shampoo. This pure liquid shampoo gives an instantaneous rich lather that immediately penetrates to every part of hair and scalp, insuring a quick and thorough cleansing. Washed off just as quickly, the entire operation takes only a few moments. Contains nothing that can harm the hair; leaves no harshness or stickiness—just a sweet-smelling cleanliness.

Both preparations come in odd-shaped, very ornamental bottles, with sprinkler tops. Harmony Hair Beautifier, $1.00. Harmony Shampoo, 50c. Both guaranteed to satisfy you in every way, or your money back. Sold in this community only at our store—The Rexall Store—one of the more than 7,000 leading drug stores of the United States, Canada and Great Britain, which own the big Harmony laboratories, Toronto, where the celebrated Harmony Perfumes and Toilet Preparations are made. —McDermid & Jury, E. L. Payne, Peterborough, Ont.

A Proper End.

Elizabeth was taken to hear grand opera for the first time. Her musical education before this occasion had been confined chiefly to park concerts, where she knew the proper observances.

The performance was a matinee of "Koenigskinder." It was ended, and mamma rose to go.

"Is that the end?" asked Elizabeth.

"Yes, dear," answered mamma.

"Sit down, mmmmie, please," said Elizabeth. "It can't be. They haven't played 'America' yet."—New York Post.

A Big Handkerchief.

Dr. Paul Ehrlich, the famous German scientist, had a habit in his younger days, says Mr. Wile in "Men Around the Kaiser," of collecting any pieces of old linen he found about the house with which to clean his scientific instruments, his microscope slides, and so on. Castoff shirts and old handkerchiefs were his specialties, and he used to stuff them all into his capacious pockets so as to have them handy whenever he required them.

At a public lecture one hot day Dr. Ehrlich perspired freely and, wanting to mop his brow, he put his hand into the nearest pocket and grasped what he thought to be a handkerchief. He tugged and tugged, and it came out and came out until he had exposed to the full view of his astonished audience a complete nightgown belonging to his wife.

How Rain Bores Holes.

When rain falls it does not actually soak into the earth, but bores its way in, forming tiny tubes. These tubes are so small that it would be impossible to insert a hair in one of them without bursting its walls. Sometimes the tubes are bored down to a depth of four or five feet. When the surface dries the water evaporates from the tubes just as it would from a pipe. If the tube is twisted it takes longer for the water to evaporate. If one takes a rake and stirs the ground after each rain he breaks the tops of the tubes, and the water will stand in them for months.

Writers, Not Linguists.

The late M. Rochefort was asked one day if during his periods of exile in England he had learned to speak English.

"No," he replied.

"But you could have done so?" he was asked.

"Yes, but I did not want to."

"Why?"

"Because Victor Hugo forbade me to. He said to me one day: 'We writers must not learn foreign languages. Such knowledge makes us run the risk of changing the purity of our own tongue.'"

Rain Time.

There is more rain between September and March than between March and September, and the reason is that in the autumn the temperature of the air is continually decreasing, and on this account the capacity of the atmosphere for holding vapor is diminished so that it descends in the shape of rain.

RESTING A RAZOR.

Why Letting It Lie Idle For Awhile Improves the Blade.

It is well known that our metals are conductors of electricity. Steel is an excellent conductor, and when this metal is fashioned into tools with sharp edges the electric current that is continually passing through the metal will leave the body at the sharp point or edge.

Barbers tell us the razor gets tired and is improved after a rest. This is true in a scientific sense. It is not exactly a rest that the razor needs, although the term will express it pretty well.

It seems that any razor, after constant use on the human face, will become not exactly dull, for the barber can sharpen it, but rather sluggish and refuse to work as smoothly as when it has lain for a few weeks without work.

Constant use and continued sharpening put the molecules into a sluggish condition, and it is impossible to get the same edge as when the steel has not been used for some time.

When the razor lies idle and the electric current is passing off at the edge the particles are being toned and tempered, and the edge actually becomes more smooth and really sharper and more fit to remove the beard.

It is claimed that a razor wrapped in rubber cloth and placed in a drawer away from any lamp will not be benefited by the rest as will a razor that is simply laid away rather carelessly without any insulation. It is the same if the razor is inclosed in a glass case, for the insulation prevents the electric current from passing through the metal.—Harper's Weekly.

What Roses Are.

You have noticed, to be sure, that rose leaves are like the foliage of apple trees. They are of one family. Roses are the souls of apples. Flowers are never just accidents. They are all related to something else. As a little wild rose is like a dear baby, so a big apple tree is like a grownup person. Some roses have been turned in one direction for their fragrance and beauty. Others have been brought up into apple trees for the fruits they bear. Nearly everything people like to eat was a flower until its improvement made it something else.—Los Angeles Times.

An Author Who Hated Water.

Mme. d'Arblay, better known as Miss Fanny Burney, who took such an important place in the literature of the eighteenth century, had an extraordinary and most undesirable peculiarity. She had the greatest aversion to washing and water. Sir Henry Holland was the physician who attended the gifted authoress during the last year of her life, and she confided to him that she had not washed for fifteen years.

Still Matchless.

"And what became of that girl who was such a matchless beauty in our set when I went away?"

"She still is."

"What, after all these years?"

"Not so much of a beauty, but matchless. She's an old maid."—Houston Post.

Barkless Dogs.

There are three varieties of the dog that never bark—the Australian dog, the Egyptian shepherd dog and the "lion headed" dog of Tibet.

Voting in Switzerland.

In Switzerland every citizen, whether he is a householder or not, is entitled to a vote on attaining the age of twenty.

A WORD OF GRATITUDE

"In justice to humanity I want to tell you that I was a great sufferer from itching piles and have found Dr. Chase's Ointment the best treatment obtainable," writes Mr. Fred Hins, Brodhagen, Ont. "It gives instant relief and I can recommend it to any sufferer from this dreadful disease.

Electric Sparks.

The annual electric dry battery production of the United States has passed the $10,000,000 mark.

Two of the largest circuses carry their own electric plants, illuminating everything, from their largest to their smallest tents.

Because the microphone of a telephone transmitter becomes more sensitive in rarefied air German electricians are trying to make a practical application of the phenomenon.

Castaway Saved.

Waving his trousers as a distress signal, a Malay, the sole survivor of a boatful of fishermen who were drowned in a squall in the Straits of Malacca, Straits Settlements, some days ago, was picked up clinging to a fragment of mast by another vessel after he had been afloat five days.

Sociologist Defined.

"Uncle Henry, what is a sociologist?"

"A sociologist, my boy, is a person who can inspect a garbage can and find enough material in it for a long lecture on the needs of society."

STUDY YOUR HEALTH.

A Mushroom Can Live In a Cellar, but Don't Be a Mushroom.

In the American Magazine William Johnston says that it is probably your own fault if you are all the time catching colds or having indigestion or headaches. He goes on to say:

"Nature intends every human being to be strong and well. Most disease is either ignorance or carelessness. Babies—even the babies of sickly, ignorant, incompetent parents—are given a pretty good start by nature. If children get sickly it nearly always is the fault of the persons taking care of them. If when they grow up they remain unhealthy it is largely their own fault.

"'But,' you protest, 'I can't help it if I inherit a weak stomach.' Oh, yes, you can.

"Did you ever systematically study your stomach? If you were going to be a lawyer you would study law. If you were going to be a stenographer you would study shorthand. If you are going to be healthy study health.

"Most people know more about the care of their clothes than they do about the care of their health. Study your diet. Find out what the effects of the various foods are. Ask yourself if you are getting enough exercise. Keep tabs until you find what it is that disagrees with you. Leave strictly alone the food—and the drinks—that your stomach scolds you about.

"Make up your mind to be healthy. Go to the three best doctors, the three that nature has provided free for everybody—fresh air, fresh water and sunlight. Get as much of all three whenever you can.

"A mushroom can live in a cellar, but don't be a mushroom.

"If you eat right, drink lots of water, sleep in fresh air and get out in the sunshine you'll soon forget to be sick.

"And perfect health is a long stride toward perfect happiness."

The Double Work of the Blood

The circulation of the blood is one of the most perfect pieces of mechanism in the universe. Besides carrying nourishment to every part of the body, the blood collects the waste products and passes through the kidneys in order that these poisons may be eliminated.

Hence you see the tremendous importance of keeping the kidneys in healthful working order so that they free the blood of these impurities before they find lodgment in some weak spot and set up serious disease.

Aching back and aching head, troubles with the digestion, deposits in the urine, constipation and biliousness—such are the symptoms which indicate the need of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. The liver is awakened to action, the bowels regulated, and the kidneys made vigorous in their work of purifying the blood.

In the great majority of homes Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are kept at hand for use in just such cases. They save many doctor bills, and by keeping the digestive and excretive systems in health do much to prolong life and bring comfort in old age.

Perfectly Accurate!

The following is a good story relating to the late Earl of Shaftesbury. It is said that the earl once called a meeting in connection with certain work, and only two people turned up—himself and a very fat reporter. After waiting, and no one else coming, the earl said he would dictate his intended speech. The reporter took out his notebook, and the earl began:

"At a large and respectable meeting held——"

"But that's not quite correct," objected the reporter, as he swept his hand round the empty hall.

"Come, come," said his lordship "are you not large, and am I not respectable?"

Pinhole Photography

For pinhole photography, any rectangular box that is absolutely light-tight will answer. In one end insert a very thin plate of metal, in which a minute hole has been made with the point of a needle, and at the other end place the sensitive plate. If you possess an ordinary camera you may remove the lens and replace it with the pinhole. A prolonged exposure is required, about twenty or thirty times the ordinary one for any given subject. No focussing is required, as the image is always fairly sharp, no matter what distance the plate is from the hole. The larger the plate the wider be angle, and the greater the distance between pinhole and plate the larger the image. Pleasingly soft effects of landscape subjects in particular may be obtained by means of the pinhole.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

THE BAMBOO UMBRELLAS

An Incident In the Lives of Two Tourists

By CLARISSA MACKIE

The narrow, crooked streets of the walled native city blazed hotly under the direct rays of the sun. The little breeze that puffed over the pointed roofs merely swayed the hanging signs at the shop doors. Below, under the thin cotton awnings, it was stifling, and the air was heavy with the multifarious odors of a Chinese city.

In the shadow of the temple of the Ten Gods an umbrella vender squatted, exchanging doubtful compliments with a seller of sweetmeats who was resting in an opposite doorway. Save for these two, the long, tunnel-like street was empty.

In the distance appeared two men, white skinned and clothed in snowy linen. Both were lean jawed American tourists, and one of them mopped his heated face and peered anxiously into the narrow windows of the little cell-like shops.

"If you're thinking of something to drink, Vaill, you're up against it," remarked one of the men testily.

"Thought we might try some of the stuff they call 'tsew.' Fellows at the hotel said to be sure to get some if we came in here," explained Vaill.

Haller snorted scornfully.

"Guess the chaps at the hotel wanted to see us brought home on a stretcher," he growled. "I happen to know a man who drank some of the deadly stuff. Took him six months to get over it. No one but a Chinaman can stand it."

"Pretty stiff sort these Chinese," murmured Vaill. "I never thought much of them till I made this visit to China. There's plenty of ways that they can beat the Yankees; beat the Dutch, too," he chuckled.

"I never saw the Chink yet who could get ahead of a Yankee," challenged Haller. "Say, this is hot, Vaill. Whatever prompted us to leave the electric fans of the hotel and come into this blasted heat anyway?"

THEY STARED FOOLISHLY AT EACH OTHER.

Vaill laughed.

"Your love of adventure, old man, nothing less. Recollect how you suggested that modern Shanghai was too much like Paris to be really interesting and that if we wanted to see the real thing we must get out of the foreign settlement and come down here into the walled city. Here we are. Where's your romance, your adventure? You murmured something about dim temples and the smoke of incense and"—

Haller threw up a protesting hand. "I take it all back. Let us buy a couple of umbrellas from this fellow and get back to civilization."

"Done," agreed Vaill readily.
